

AA0000320770

UC SOUTHERN REGIONAL LIBRARY FACILITY

SANATANA DHARMA

AN ELEMENTARY TEXT-BOOK

OF

HINDU RELIGION AND ETHICS

PUBLISHED BY THE MANAGING COMMITTEE
CENTRAL HINDU COLLEGE
BENARES

1916

[THE RIGHT OF TRANSLATION AND REPRODUCTION IS RESERVED.]

Price Ans. 12, boards. Re. 1, cloth. Postage 1½ Anna

^ SANȦTANA DHARMA

AN ELEMENTARY TEXT-BOOK

OF

HINDU RELIGION AND ETHICS

PUBLISHED BY THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES
CENTRAL HINDU COLLEGE
BENARES

—
1916

[THE RIGHT OF TRANSLATION AND REPRODUCTION IS RESERVED.]

Price Ans. 12, boards. Re. 1, cloth. Postage 1½ Anna.

Univ Calif - Digitized by Microsoft®

SAVANA TAKA BAHANA

SAVANA TAKA BAHANA

SAVANA TAKA BAHANA

PRINTED BY PANDYA GULAB SHANKER AT THE TARA PRINTING WORKS, BENARES.

सत्यमेव जयते नानृतम् ॥
उत्तिष्ठत जाग्रत प्राप्य वरान्निबोधत ॥

FOREWORD.

THE Board of Trustees of the Central Hindu College has laid down the following principles on which religious and moral teaching is to be given in all institutions under its control.

The object of the Central Hindu College being to combine Hindu religious and ethical training with the western education suited to the needs of the time, it is necessary that this religious and ethical training shall be of a wide, liberal and unsectarian character, while at the same time it shall be definitely and distinctively Hindu. It must be inclusive enough to unite the most divergent forms of Hindu thought, but exclusive enough to leave outside it, forms of thought which are non-Hindu. It must avoid all doctrines which are the subject of controversy between schools recognised as orthodox; it must not enter into any of the social and political questions of the day; but it must lay a solid foundation of religion and ethics on which the student may build, in his manhood, the more specialised principles suited to his intellectual and emotional temperament. It must be directed to the building up of a character—pious, dutiful, strong, self-reliant, upright, righteous, gentle and well-balanced—a character which will be that of a good man and a good citizen ; the fundamental principles of religion, governing the general view of life and of life's obligations, are alone sufficient to form such a character. That which unites Hindūs in a common faith must be clearly and simply taught ; all that divides them must be ignored. Lastly, care must be taken to cultivate a wide spirit of tolerance, which not only respects the differences of thought and practice among Hindūs, but which also respects the differences of religion among non-Hindūs, regarding all faiths with reverence, as roads whereby men approach the Supreme.

Therefore :—

1. The religious and ethical instruction must be such as all Hindūs can accept.
2. It must include the special teachings which mark out Hindūism from other religions.
3. It must not include the distinctive views of any special school or sect.

This elementary Text-Book, written in accordance with this scheme, is intended for the use of Hindu boys in the middle and upper sections of the High Schools of India, and is designed to give them a general but correct idea of their national religion, such as may be filled in by fuller study in College and in later life, but will not need to be changed in any essential respect.

It contains the fundamental ideas and doctrines which are generally received as orthodox, but does not enter into the details as to which sectarian divisions have arisen. It is believed that while a sectarian parent or teacher will probably make additions to it, he will not find in it anything which he will wish positively to repudiate.

While the book may be placed in the hands of the boys for their own study, it is intended to be simplified by the oral explanations of the teacher, and each chapter serves as an outline on which one or more lessons may be based.

The shlokas given at the end of the chapters should be committed to memory by the boys. They will thus acquire a useful store of sacred authorities on their religion.

The name of this series, Sanâtana Dharma, was chosen after full discussion, as best representing the idea of the fundamental truths presented.

It has become somewhat of a sectarian name in some parts of India, but it is here taken only as meaning the eternal religion.

That this book may prove useful in laying a firm foundation of right thinking in the minds of Hindu youths, and may help in shaping them into pious, moral, loyal and useful citizens of their Motherland and of the Empire, is the prayer with which its compilers send it forth to the world.

CONTENTS.

PART I.

	PAGES.
INTRODUCTION	1
BASIC HINDU RELIGIOUS IDEAS.
CHAPTER I.—The One Existence	10
CHAPTER II.—The Many	19
CHAPTER III.—Re-birth	32
CHAPTER IV.—Karma	42
CHAPTER V.—Sacrifice	53
CHAPTER VI.—The Worlds—Visible and Invisible	63

PART II.

GENERAL HINDU RELIGIOUS CUSTOMS AND RITES.

CHAPTER I.—The Samaskâras	73
CHAPTER II.—Shrâddha	79
CHAPTER III.—Shaucham	83
CHAPTER IV.—The five Daily Sacrifices	90
CHAPTER V.—Worship	95
CHAPTER VI.—The Four Asbramas	101
CHAPTER VII.—The Four Castes	111

PART III.

ETHICAL TEACHINGS.

CHAPTER I.—Ethical Science, what it is	121
CHAPTER II.—The Foundation of Ethics as given by Religion	126
CHAPTER III.—Right and Wrong	130
CHAPTER IV.—The Standard of Ethics	138
CHAPTER V.—Virtues and their foundation	141
CHAPTER VI.—Bliss and Emotions	153
CHAPTER VII.—Self-regarding Virtues... ..	159
CHAPTER VIII.—Virtues and Vices in relation to Superiors	175
CHAPTER IX.—Virtues and Vices in relation to Equals	195
CHAPTER X.—Virtues and Vices in relation to Inferiors	227
CHAPTER XI.—The Re-action of Virtues and Vices on each other	247

SANÂṬANA DHARMA.

PART I.

BASIC HINDU RELIGIOUS IDEAS.

मंगलं दिशतु नो विनायको
मंगलं दिशतु नः सरस्वती ।
मंगलं दिशतु नः समुद्रजा
मंगलं दिशतु नो महेश्वरी ॥

INTRODUCTION.

SANÂTANA DHARMA means the Eternal Religion, the Ancient Law, and it is based on the Vedas, sacred books given to men many long ages ago. This Religion has also been called the Âryan Religion, because it is the Religion that was given to the first nation of the Âryan race ; Ârya means noble, and the name was given to a great race, much finer in character and appearance than the races which went before it in the world's history. The first families of these people settled in the northern part of the land now called India, and that part in which they first settled was named Âryâvartâ, because these Âryans lived in it. "(The land) from the eastern ocean to the western ocean, between the two mountains (Himavân and Vindhya), the wise call Âryâvartâ."

The Brâhmaṇa portion of the Vedas consists of directions about ritual and explains how to perform the ceremonies in which were used the Mantras given in the first part ; and further, stories connected with them.

The Upaniṣhat portion consists of deep philosophical teachings on the nature of Brahman, on the supreme and the separated Self, on man and the universe, on bondage and liberation. It is the foundation of all philosophy, and when you are men, you may study it and delight in it. Only highly educated men can study it ; it is too difficult for others.

There was a fourth part of the Veda in the ancient days, sometimes called the उपवेदः Upavedah, or तन्त्रम् Tantram ; this consisted of science, and of practical instructions based on the science ; but very little of the true ancient Tantra remains, as the Rishis took them away as unsuitable for times in which people were less spiritual. Some Tantrika forms of ritual are, however, used in worship, along with, or instead of, the current Vaidika forms. The books now extant under the name of Tantras are generally not regarded as part of the Veda.

That which is found in the Shruti is of supreme authority and is accepted by every faithful follower of His wife Sitâ, and of His brothers, a most interesting and delightful story, as you all know.

2. The महाभारतं, Mahâbhârataṃ, the history of the Kurus, a royal family of Northern India, which split into two parties, the Kurus and the Pâṇdavas, between whom a great war broke out. It contains an immense number of beautiful stories, noble moral teachings, and useful lessons of all kinds.

These two books, the Râmâyana and the Mahâbhârata, tell us most of what we know about ancient India, about her people and customs, and her ways of living, and her arts, and her manufactures. If you read these, you will learn how great India once was, and you will also learn how you must behave to make her great once more.*

THE SCIENCE AND PHILOSOPHY OF SANÂTANA DHARMA.

While the Shruṭi and the Smṛiti, the Purâṇas and the Itihâsa make the edifice of Hindu Religion, we find that the Religion itself has given rise to a splendid literature of Science and Philosophy.

The Science was divided into the षडंगानि Ṣaḍaṅgâni, the Six Aṅgas, literally Limbs; and these six Limbs, or Branches, comprised what would now be called secular knowledge. In the old days religious and secular knowledge were not divided.

*Summaries of these have been given as lectures at the C. H. College, by Annie Besant, and are published as The Story of the Great War, and Shri Râmachandra.

They included Grammar, Philology, Astrology, Poetry, together with sixty-four sciences and arts, and the method by which study should be carried on, so that any one who mastered the six aṅgas was a man of varied and deep learning.

The Philosophy also had six divisions, the षड्दर्शनानि Ṣhadḍarshanâni, the Six Darshanas, or ways of seeing things, usually called the Six Systems. They all have one object: the putting an end to pain by enabling the separated human selves to re-unite with the supreme Self; and they all have one method—the development of ज्ञानम् Jñânam, Wisdom. The ways employed are different, to suit the different mental constitutions of men, so that they are like six different roads, all leading to one town.

As to what is contained in the Six Systems of philosophy, it will be enough for boys to know this:

The Nyâya and the Vaisheshika arrange all the things of the world into a certain number of kinds; then point out that a man knows all things by means of his senses, or by inference and analogy, or by testimony of other (wise and experienced) men ; and then they explain how God has made all this material world out of atoms and molecules ; finally they show how the highest and most useful knowledge is the knowledge of God, who is also the inmost Spirit of man, and how this knowledge is obtained in various ways.

The Sâṅkhya explains in more detail and in new ways the nature of पुरुषः Puruṣaḥ, Spirit, and of प्रकृतिः Prakṛtiḥ, Matter, and relation of each to the other.

The Yoga says that as there are now generally known five senses and five organs of action, so there are other subtler senses and organs; and explains more fully how they may be developed by men who are seeking to know God, who is their own true inmost Spirit.

The Mimansâ explains what karma is, i. e., action, both religious and worldly, and what are its consequences, causes and effects, and how it binds man to this world or to another.

The Vedânta finally tells fully what is the exact and true nature of God, or Âtmâ, and shows that Jîva of man is in essence the same as this inmost God, and explains how man may live so that karma shall not bind him; and finally, by understanding what the Mâyâ Shakti of God is, by which all this world comes forth and appears and disappears, how he may (after practice of Yoga) merge himself into and become one with God and so gain Moksha.

—:O:—

CHAPTER I.

THE ONE EXISTENCE.

THERE is one Infinite Eternal, Changeless Existence, the ALL.

From THAT all comes forth ; to THAT all returns.

“One only, without a second.”*

THAT includes within Itself all that ever has been, is, and can be. As a wave rises in the ocean, a universe rises in the ALL. As the wave sinks again into the ocean, a universe sinks again into the ALL. As the ocean is water, and the wave a form or manifestation of the water, so is there one Existence, and the universe is a form, or manifestation, of the Existence. “All this verily (is) Brahman.”†

This is the primary truth of Religion. Men have given to the ALL many different names. The name in the Sanâṭana Dharma is BRAHMAN. English-speaking people use the name GOD, adding, to make the meaning clear, God, in His own

* Chhândogya, VI, ii—I.

† Ibid., III, xiv—i, “This” is the technical name for a universe.

Nature." Sometimes the Hindu speaks of the ALL as Nirguṇa Brahman, the Brahman without attributes, or the unconditioned Brahman. This is to distinguish the unmanifested state of Brahman, the ALL, from the manifested state, in which Brahman is called the Saḡuṇa Brahman, the Brahman with attributes, or the conditioned Brahman the Supreme Īshvara with His universe.

These are called: "the two states of Brahman;"* the subject is very difficult, and it is enough for a boy to understand that the Saḡuṇa Brahman is Brahman revealed—not "a second," but Brahman shining forth as THE ONE, the Great Lord of Being, Thought and Bliss. He is the self-existent One, the Root and Cause of all beings. He is also sometimes called Puruṣottama, the Supreme Spirit, THE SELF. With Himself as Spirit He reveals the other side of the ALL, which is named Mūlaprakṛiti, the Root of Matter. Prakṛiti, Matter, is that which takes form, and so can give bodies of all sorts and shapes and kinds ; all that we can touch, taste, smell, see, and hear, is Matter, and a great deal more besides, which our five senses are not yet developed enough to perceive. The solids, liquids and gases of the chemist are made of Matter; all the things round us, stones, trees, animals, men, are made of Matter. But the whole of them is not Matter; inaudible, invisible, unsmellable, untastable, intangible, the Spirit is in each, an अंशः Amshaḥ, a portion, of Îshvara. We call the Matter part a शरीरम् Sharîram, body; or a कोषः koshah,* sheath; or an उपाधिः Upâdhiḥ, vehicle; that which embodies, clothes, or carries the Spirit. Thus Îshvara is in everything, and it is He who gives life to all things. He is आत्मा Âtmâ, the Self, the Immortal, the Inner Ruler, dwelling in all objects, and there is nothing that can exist apart from Him. An amshaḥ of Him in a body of matter is called a Jîva, or a Jivâtmâ, a separated Self.

There are some very important differences between Spirit and Matter, as well as the differences just spoken of: that the senses, when completely developed, can perceive Matter, while they cannot perceive Spirit, and that Matter takes form while Spirit is formless. It is the Spirit that is life, and that thinks, and feels, and observes, that is the "I" in each of us. And the Spirit is one and the same in everybody and in everything. But Matter cannot think, or feel, or observe ; it is जडं Jadam, without consciousness. And it has also the tendency to be constantly dividing itself into many forms and to become many. So that Spirit and Matter are said to be the opposites one of the other ; Spirit is called the knower, the one that knows, while Matter is called the object of knowledge, that which is known.

*Spelt also कोषः koshah.

Students should try to understand these differences, and must never confuse Spirit and Matter ; they are opposites, the first “pair of opposites,” out of which a universe is built up.

Just as Spirit has three qualities, सत् चित् आनन्दं—Sat Chit Ânam—Being, Thought-Power and Bliss, so has Matter three qualities तमः रजः सत्वम् Tamah, Rajah, Sattvam—Inertia, Mobility, Rhythm. Inertia gives resistance and stability to Matter ; Mobility keeps Matter active, moving about ; Rhythm makes the movements regular. You may say : “A stone does not move of itself.” But science tells you that every particle in that stone—particles too small for you to see—is moving rapidly and regularly to and fro, is vibrating, to use the scientific term.

The शक्तिः Shaktiḥ, or the Divine Power of Îshvara, which makes Matter begin to take form, is called माया Mâyâ, and sometimes दैवीप्रकृतिः ; Daivî-prakṛtiḥ, the Divine Prakṛti. Shri Kṛṣṇa speaks of "My Divine Prakṛti" as "My other Prakṛti, the higher, the life-element, by which the universe is upheld."*

The student may think of the great pair of opposites, Îshvara and Mûlaprakṛti, standing, as it were, face to face and the Divine Power of Îshvara shining out on Mûlaprakṛti and making the qualities, called गुणाः guṇâḥ, act on each other, so that many forms begin to appear. This Divine power is Mâyâ, and so Îshvara is called the Lord of Mâyâ.

Even young students must try to remember these names, and what they mean, for they cannot otherwise understand the teaching of the Bhâgavad Gîtâ, which every Hindu boy must try to understand. It may be well to say that the word Prakṛti is generally used instead of Mûlaprakṛti, the prefix Mûla, Root, being usually left out.

ज्ञेयं यत्तत् प्रवक्ष्यामि यज्ज्ञात्वाऽमृतमश्नुते ।

अनादिमत् परं ब्रह्म न सत् तन्नासदुच्यते ॥

* Bhagavad Gîtâ, vii—5.

सर्वतः पाणिपादं तत् सर्वतोऽक्षिणोमुखम् ।
 सर्वतः श्रुतिमह्लोके सर्वमावृत्य तिष्ठति ॥
 सर्वेन्द्रियगुणाभासं सर्वेन्द्रियविवर्जितम् ।
 असक्तं सर्वभृच्चैव निर्गुणं गुणभोक्तृ च ॥
 बाहिरन्तश्च भूतानामचरं चरमेव च ।
 सूक्ष्मत्वात् तद्विज्ञेयं दूरस्थं चान्तिके च तत् ॥
 आवेमकं च भूतेषु विभक्तमिव च स्थितम् ।
 भूतभर्तृ च तज्ज्ञेयं ग्रसिष्णु प्रभविष्णु च ॥
 ज्योतिषामपि तज्ज्योतिस्तमसः परमुच्यते ।
 ज्ञानं ज्ञेयं ज्ञानगम्यं हृदि सर्वस्य विष्ठितम् ॥*

“I will declare that which ought to be known, that which being known immortality is enjoyed—the beginningless supreme Brahman, called neither Being nor Not-Being.

“Everywhere THAT has hands and feet, everywhere eyes, heads and mouths ; all hearing, He dwelleth in the world, enveloping all ;

“Shining with all sense-faculties, without any sense ; unattached, supporting everything ; and free from qualities, enjoying qualities.

“Without and within all beings, immovable and also movable ; by a reason of his subtlety indistinguishable ; at hand and far away is THAT.

* Bhagavad Gītā, xiii, 12—17.

“ Not divided amid beings and yet seated distributively. THAT is to be known as the supporter of beings ; He devours and He generates.

THAT, the Light of all lights, is said to be beyond darkness ; wisdom, the object of wisdom, by wisdom to be reached, seated in the hearts of all. ”

आसीदिदं तमोभूतमप्रज्ञातमलक्षणम् ।

अप्रतर्क्यमविज्ञेयं प्रसुप्तमिव सर्वतः ॥

ततःस्वयंभूर्भगवानव्यक्तो व्यञ्जयन्निदम् ।

महाभूतादि वृत्तौजाः प्रादुरासीत्तमोनुदः ॥

योऽनावतोन्द्रियग्राह्यः सूक्ष्मांश्चकः सनातनः ।

सर्वभूतमयोऽचिन्त्यः स एव स्वयमुद्वभौ ॥*

This was in the form of Darkness, unknown, without marks [or homogeneous], unattainable by reasoning, unknowable, wholly, as it were, in sleep.

“ Then the self-Existent, the Lord, unmanifest, (but) making manifest. This—the great elements and the rest—appeared with mighty power, Dispel-ler of Darkness.

“ He who can be grasped by that which is beyond the senses, subtle unmanifest, ancient, containing all beings, inconceivable, even He Himself shone forth. ”

अहमात्मा गुडाकेश सर्वभूताशयस्थितः ।

अहमादिश्च मध्यं च भूतानामन्त एव च ॥ †

* Manu Smṛiti i—5, 6, 7. † Bhāgavad Gītā, x—20.

“I, O Guḍakesha, am the SELF, seated in the heart of all beings ; I am the beginning, the middle, and also the end of all beings.”

द्वाविमौ पुरुषौ लोके क्षश्चक्षर एव च ।
 क्षरः सर्वाणि भूतानि कूटस्थोऽक्षर उच्यते ॥
 उक्तमः पुरुषस्त्वन्यः परमात्मेत्युदाहृतः
 यो लोकत्रयमाविश्य विभर्त्यव्यय इश्वरः ॥
 यस्मात् क्षरमर्तातोऽहमक्षरादपि चोत्तमः ।
 अतोऽस्मि लोके वेदे च प्रथितः पुरुषोत्तमः ॥ ‡

“There are two Puruṣhas in this world, the destructible and the indestructible ; the destructible is all beings, the unchanging is called the indestructible.

“The highest Puruṣha is verily another, declared as the Supreme SELF ; He who pervading all, sustaineth the three worlds, the indestructible Īshvara.

“Since I excel the destructible, and am more excellent also than the indestructible, in the world and in the Veda I am proclaimed Pruṣhoṭṭama.”

ममैवांशो जीवलोके जीवभूतः सनातनः ।
 मनः षष्ठानीन्द्रियाणि प्रकृतिस्थानि कर्षति ॥*

‡ Ibid, xv—16.

* Bhagavad Gītā, xv—7.

“ A portion of Mine own Self, transformed in the world of life into an immortal Spirit, draweth round itself the senses, of which the mind is the sixth, veiled in matter.

समं सर्वेषु भूतषु तिष्ठन्तं परमेश्वरम् ।
 विनश्यन्स्वविनश्यन्तं यः पश्यति स पश्यति ॥
 यदा भूतपृथग्भावमेकस्थमनुपश्यति ।
 तत एव च विस्तारं ब्रह्म सम्पद्यते तदा ॥
 यथा प्रकाशयत्येकः कृत्स्नं लोकमिमं रविः ।
 क्षेत्रं क्षेत्री तथा कृत्स्नं प्रकाशयति भारत ॥ †

“ Seated equally in all beings, the supreme Īshvara, unperishing within the perishing ; he who thus seeth, he seeth.

“ When he perceiveth the diversified existence of beings as rooted in ONE and spreading forth from It, then he reacheth Brahman.

“ As the one sun illumineth the whole earth so the Lord of the field, illumineth the whole field, O Bhârata.”

भूमिरापोऽनलो वायुः खं मनो बुद्धिरेव च ।
 अहंकार इतीयं मे भिन्ना प्रकृतिरष्टधा ॥
 अपरेऽपि तस्त्वन्यां प्रकृतिं विद्धि मे पराम् ।
 जीवभूतां महाबाहो यथेदं धार्यते जगत् ॥ *

“ Earth, Water, Fire, Air, Other, Mind and

Reason also and Egoism—these are the eight-fold divisions of my Prakṛti.

“ This the inferior. Know my other Prakṛti, the higher, the life-element, O mighty-armed, by which the universe is upheld. ”

सत्त्वं रजस्तम इति गुणाः प्रकृतिसम्भवाः ।

निबध्नन्ति महाबाहो देहे देहिनमव्ययम् ॥ †

“ Sattva, Rajas, Tamas, these are the Guṇas, born of Prakṛiti ; they bind fast in the body, O great-armed one, the indestructible dweller in the body. ”

† Ibid—xiv—5

— : o : —

CHAPTER II.

THE MANY.

WHEN Îshvara shines out on Prakṛiti and makes it fall into shapes, the first Forms that appear are those of the त्रिमूर्तिः Trimûrtiḥ, the three Aspects of Îshvara, manifested to cause a ब्रह्माण्डं Brahmâṇdam, literally an Egg of Brahmâ, a universe, or orderly system of worlds. The aspect of Îshvara in which He creates the worlds is named Brahmâ; Brahmâ is the Creator. The aspect of Îshvara in which He preserves, takes care of, and maintains the worlds is named Viṣṇu; Viṣṇu is the Preserver. The aspect of Îshvara in which He dissolves the worlds, when they are worn out and of no further use, is named Shiva, or Mahâdeva; Shiva is the Dissolver of the worlds. These are the first manifestations of Îshvara, His Supreme Forms, His three Aspects, or Faces. The ONE, the Saguṇa Brahman, or the Supreme Îshvara, appears as Three.

Brahmâ, the Creator, shapes matter into seven तत्त्वानि Tattvâni, Elements, as they have been called.* Different names are given to the first two ;

* The western chemist uses the word in a different sense, but the old meaning is the one we are concerned with.

we may use the names Mahat-Buddhi, Pure Reason, and Abamkâra, Egoism, the principle of separation, breaking up matter into tiny particles, called atoms. Then come the remaining five Tattvas : Âkâsha, Ether ; Vâyu, Air ; Agni, Fire ; Âpa, Water ; Pṛithivî, Earth. This is called the creation of the भूनादि Bhûñâdi, Elements, and out of these all things are partly made. There is more of Tamo-guṇa than of Rajo-guṇa and of Saṭtva-guṇa showing itself in these elements, and so the things composed chiefly of them are dull and inert ; the inner life, the Jîva, cannot show its powers, for the coat of matter is so thick and heavy.

Next after the Elements, the ten Indriyas are created ; these were at first only ideas in the mind of Brahmâ, and later were clothed in the Elements ; they are the five centres of the senses : smell, taste, sight, touch, hearing, the organs of which are the nose, tongue, eyes, skin and ears ; and the five centres of action, the organs of which are hands, feet, and those of speech, generation and excretion. There is more of Rajo-guṇa than of Tamo-guṇa and of Saṭtva-guṇa shewing itself in these Indriyas, so they are very active, and the inner life, the Jîva, can show more of its powers in them.

After the Indriyas, Brahmâ created in His mind the Devas who are connected with the senses, and also Manah, the mind, which is sometimes called the sixth Indriya, when the first five are spoken of, and the eleventh, when the ten are taken ; because it draws into itself and arranges and thinks over all the sensations collected by the Indriyas from the outer world. There is more of Sattva-guṇa than of Tamo-guṇa and of Rajo-guṇa showing itself in these Deities and Manah.

The student must remember that these guṇas are never separated, but one guṇa may be more dominant than another in any particular being. When Tamo-guṇa dominates, the being is called tãmasik ; when Rajo-guṇa dominates, the being is called rãjasik ; when Sattva-guṇa dominates, the being is called sãttvik. All things may be divided under these three heads of sãttvik, rãjasik, and tãmasik.*

Brahmã next created in His mind the hosts of Devas, who carry out, administer the laws of Îshvara, and see to the proper management of all the worlds. Îshvara is the King, the One Lord, and the Devas are His ministers, like the ministers and officials of an earthly king. The students must never confuse the Devas with the supreme Îshvara, with

* See Bhãgavad-Gitã, xiv, xvii and xviii.

Brahman. They are His higher officials for the Brahmânda, as we men are His lower officials for this one particular world.

The Devas, sometimes called Suras, see that each man gets what he has earned by his karma.* They give success and failure in worldly things, according to what a man deserves ; they help men in many ways, when men try to serve them, and much of the bad weather and sickness and famine and other national troubles come from men entirely neglecting the duties they owe to the Devas. The Devas are a vast multitude, divided under their five Rulers, Indra, Vâyu, Agni, Varuṇa and Kubera. Indra has to do with the ether ; Vâyu with the air ; Agni with the fire ; Varuṇa with the water ; Kubera with the earth. The Devas under each have different names, as we see in the Puraṇas and the Iṭihâsa. The student may have read, for instance, how Bhîma fought with the Yakṣhas, who were the servants of Kubera.

In these Devas the Rajo-guṇa dominates ; Manu says that their "nature is action."

The Asuras, the enemies of the Devas, embody the resistance, or inertia, of Matter, and in them Tamo-guṇa is predominant.

Brahmâ then created in His mind minerals, plants, animals and men, thus completing the picture of the worlds wherein the unfolding of the powers of the Jîva—what is now called Evolution—was to take place. In Sanskrit this world-evolution, or world-process, is called संसारः Samsârah, and it is compared to a wheel, constantly turning, on which all Jîvas are bound.

Thus Brahmâ completed His share of the great task of a universe, but the forms needed, to be clothed in physical matter, to be made active beings; this was the work of Viṣṇu, the All-pervader, the Maintainer and Preserver of the worlds. He breathed His Life into all these forms, and, as a Purâṇa says, became Prâṇa in all forms and gave them consciousness. Then all the Brahmânda “became full of life and consciousness.” But even this was not enough, when man came upon the scene. Two Aspects of Îshvara had given Their Life, but the third Aspect remained, the One who dissolves forms and thus liberates the Jîvas, calling them to union and bliss. The life of Mahâdeva must be poured out to complete the triple Jîva of man, that he might be the perfect reflexion of the triple Îshvara. This was done, and the human Jîva began his long evolution, having already passed through, evolved through, the mineral, vegetable and animal kingdoms in previous kalpas. A very beautiful description of the evolution through plants and animals to men, until "in man Âtmâ is manifest," and "by the mortal he desires the immortal," may be read by elder students in the Aitareyâraṇyaka,* and will be found in the Advanced Text-Book.

The special manifestations of Viṣṇu, called Avatâras, must not be forgotten. The word means One who descends, from tri passing over, the prefix "ava" giving the significance of descending. It is applied to Divine manifestations of a peculiar kind, in which the Deity incarnates in some form to bring about some special result. When things are going badly with the world, and special help is needed to keep the world on the road of right evolution, then Viṣṇu comes down in some appropriate form, and puts things right.

Ten of His Avatâras are regarded as more important than the others, and are often spoken of as "the Ten Avatâras."

1. MATSYA, the fish.—Vaivasvata Manu once saw a little fish, gasping for water, and put it into a bowl; it grew, and He placed it in a larger pot;

* II, iii—2.

then again in a larger, and then in a tank, a pond, a river, the sea, and ever the Fish grew and filled its receptacle. Then the Manu knew that this Fish was connected with His own life-work, and when the time came for Him to save the seeds of life from a great flood, He entered a ship with the R̥ishis and the necessary life-seeds, the great Fish appeared, and drew the vessel to the world where lay the Manu's work. With the coming of the Fish began the great evolution of animal life in the world.

2. KURMA, the Tortoise.—As the tortoise, Viṣṇu, supported the whirling mountain, which churned the great sea of matter, that it might give forth the necessary forms. The Tortoise is the type of the next great step in evolution.

3. VARAHA, the Boar.—The earth was sunk below the waters, and Viṣṇu raised it up, giving, in the Boar, the type of the great mammalian kingdom which was to flourish on the dry land.

Modern Science recognises these three great stages of evolution, each marked in Hinduism by an Avatâra.

4. NARASIMHA, the Man-Lion.—This was the Avatâra that came to free the earth from the tyranny of the Daityas. Into this race a child, Prahlâda, was born, who from earliest childhood was devoted to Viṣṇu, despite the threats and the cruelties of his Daitya father. Over and over again the father tried to slay the son, but ever Viṣṇu intervened to save him ; at last He burst from a pillar in the form of a Man-Lion, and slew the Daitya King.

5. VAMANA, the Dwarf.—At last He came as man, to aid the evolution of the human race, and gained from Bali the right to all He could cover in three steps ; one step covered the earth, and thus He won for man the field of his evolution.

6. PARASHURAMA, Râma of the Axe.—This Avatâra came to punish such of the Kṣhatriyas as were oppressing the people, and to teach bad rulers the danger of using power to tyrannise, instead of to help.

7. RAMA, usually called Râmachandra, the son of Dasharatha.—He, with His three brothers, came as the ideal Kṣhatriya, the model King, and He serves as an example of a perfect human life. An obedient and loving son, a tender husband, an affectionate brother, a gallant warrior, a wise ruler, a diligent protector of His people, He is emphatically The Perfect Man. His splendid story is told in Vâlmiki's Râmâyana, and the lovely version of Tulsi Dâs is known in every northern Indian home.

8. KRISHNA, the manifestation of Divine Love and Wisdom, worshipped by myriads with intense devotion.—As the marvellous child of Vraja and Vrindâvana, as the friend of Arjuna, as the speaker of the Bhâgavad-Gîtâ, as the wise counsellor of the Pândavas, as the adored of Bhîshma—what Indian boy does not know His story? He is the central Figure of the Mahâbhârta and His Life is traced in several Purânas.

9. BUDDHA, the gentle prince who gave up throne and luxury to become a travelling mendicant, Teacher of the Truth.—He is known as Shâkyamuni, as Gauṭama, as Siddhârtha, and is the founder of a mighty faith, followed by millions of the human race. In him Viṣṇu teaches vast multitudes of non-Âryan peoples.

10. KALKI—the Avatâra who shall close the Kali Yuga, and whose coming is yet in the future. When He comes, the Satya Yuga, will return to earth, a new cycle will begin.

The development and perfection of the human type is indicated by these Avatâras.

पश्यामि देवांस्तव देव देहे
सर्वास्तथा भूतविशेषसंघान् ।

ब्रह्माण्मीशं कमलासनस्थं
 ऋषींश्च सर्वानुरगांश्च दिव्यान् ॥
 रुद्रादित्या वसवो ये च साध्या
 विश्वेऽश्विनौ मरुतश्चाष्मपाश्च ।
 गन्धर्वयक्षासुरसिद्धसंघा
 वीक्षन्ते त्वां विस्मिताश्चैव सर्वे ॥ *

"Within Thy Form, O God, the Gods I see,
 All grades of being with distinctive marks ;
 Brahmâ the Lord, upon His lotus-throne,
 The Rîshis all, and Serpents, the Divine.
 Rudras, Vasus, Sâdhya and Âdityas,
 Vishvas, the Ashvins, Maruṭs, Uṣmapâs, Gandharvas, Yakṣhas, Siddhas, Asuras,
 In wondering multitudes beholding Thee."

इन्द्रं मित्रं वरुणमग्निमाहु- रथो दिव्यः स सुपर्णो गरुत्मान् ।
 एक सद्विप्रा बहुधा वदन्ति
 अग्निं यमं मातरिश्वानमाहुः ॥ **

"Indra, Miṭra, Varuṇa, Agni, they call him, and He is the radiant golden-feathered Garuṭmân,
 Of Him who is one, Sages speak as manifold ;
 they call him Agni, Yama, Mâtarishvâ."

आत्मैव देवताः सर्वाः सर्वमात्मन्यवस्थितम् । †

* Bhagavad-Gîtâ, xi., 15 and 22.

 Rigveda, I, clxiv, 46. † Manusmriti, xii, 119.

“All the Gods (are) even the Self : all rests on the Self.

एतमेके वदन्त्यग्निमनुमन्ये प्रजापतिम् ।

इन्द्रमेकेऽपरे प्राणमपरे ब्रह्म शाश्वतम् ॥ *

“Some call Him Agni, others Manu, (others) Prajâpati, some Indra, others Life-Breath, others the eternal Brahman.”

यथा सुदीप्तात्पावकाद्विस्फुलिङ्गाः

सहस्रशः प्रभवन्ते सरूपाः ।

तथाक्षराद्विविधाः सौम्य भावाः

प्रजायन्ते तत्र चैवापि यान्ति ॥

.....

एतस्माज्जायते प्राणो मनः सर्वेन्द्रियाणि च ।

खं वायुर्ज्योतिरापः पृथिवी विश्वस्य धारिणी ॥

.....

तस्माच्च देवा बहुधा सम्प्रसृताः

साध्या मनुष्या पशवो वर्यसि । †

“As from a blazing fire sparks, all similar to each other, spring forth in thousands so from the Indestructible, O beloved, various types of being are born, and they also return thither.....

“From That are born Breath, Mind, and all the Senses, Ether, Air, Fire, Water, and Earth, the support of all.....

* Ibid, 124. † Mundakop, 11, i, 1—17.

“From that in various ways are born, the Gods, Sâdhya, Men, Beast, Birds.

सत्त्वात् संजायते ज्ञानं रजसो लोभ एव च ।

प्रमादमोहौ तमसो भवतोऽज्ञानमेव च ॥

ऊर्ध्वं गच्छन्ति सत्त्वस्था मध्ये तिष्ठन्ति राजसाः ।

जघन्यगुणवृत्तिस्था अधो गच्छन्ति तामसाः ॥ *

“From Saṭṭva wisdom is born, and also greed from Rajah ; negligence and delusion are of Tamah, and also unwisdom.

“They rise upwards who are settled in Saṭṭva ; the Râjasic dwell in the midmost place. The Tâmasic go downwards, enveloped in the vilest qualities.”

सत्त्वं सुखे सञ्जयति रजः कर्माणि भारत ।

ज्ञानमावृत्य तु तमः प्रमादे सञ्जयत्युत ॥

रजस्तमश्चाभिभूय सत्त्वं भवति भारत ।

रजः सत्त्वं तमश्चैव तमः सत्त्वं रजस्तथा ॥

सर्वद्वारेषु देहेऽस्मिन् प्रकाश उपजायते ।

ज्ञानं यदा तदा विद्याद् विवृद्धे सत्वमित्युत ॥

लोभः प्रवृत्तिरारम्भः कर्मणामशमः स्पृहा ।

रजस्येतानि जायन्ते विवृद्धे भरतर्षभ ॥

अप्रकाशोऽप्रवृत्तिश्च प्रमादो मोह एव च ।

तमस्येतानि जायन्ते विवृद्धे कुरुनन्दन ॥ †

“Saṭṭva attacheth to bliss, Rajah to action, O

* Bhâgavad-Gitâ, xiv, 17. 18. † Bhâgavad-Gitâ, xiv, 9—13.

Bhârata. Tamaḥ, verily, having shrouded wisdom, attacheth on the contrary, to heedlessness.

(Now) Saṭṭva prevaieth, having overpowered Rajaḥ and Tamaḥ, O Bhârata ; (now) Rajaḥ (having overpowered) Tamas and Saṭṭva, (now) Tamas, (having overpowered) Rajaḥ and Saṭṭva.

“When the wisdom-light streameth forth from all the gates of the body, then it may be known that Saṭṭva is increasing.

“Greed, outgoing energy, undertaking of actions, restlessness, desire—these are born of the increase of Rajaḥ, O best of the Bhâratas.

“Darkness, stagnation and heedlessness, and also delusion—these are born of the increase of Tamaḥ, O joy of the Kurus.”

यदा यदा हि धर्मस्य ग्लानिर्भवति भारत ॥
 अभ्युत्थानमधर्मस्य तदात्मानं सृजाम्यहम् ॥
 परित्राणाय साधूनां विनाशाय च दुष्कृताम् ॥
 धर्मसंस्थापनार्थाय सम्भवामि युगे युगे ॥ *

“When dharma decays, when adharma is exalted then I Myself come forth;

For the protection of the good, for the destruction of evil-doers, for firmly establishing dharma, I am born from age to age.”

* Bhâgarad-Gitâ, iv, 7.—8.

CHAPTER III.

RE-BIRTH.

THE evolution spoken of in the last chapter is carried on by the Jîva passing from body to body, the bodies improving as his powers unfold; this is called re-birth, re-incarnation, or transmigration. The word re-incarnation means literally taking flesh again, coming again into a physical body. The word transmigration means passing from one place to another—passing into a new body. Either word can be used equally well. Let us see what is the process described by these words.

The Jîva, we have seen, is a portion of Brahman, "a portion of myself, a Jîva," says Shri Kṛṣṇa. He contains the powers of Brahman, is Brahman. "Thou art That," the Shruṭi teaches. But yet there is a difference in Space and Time, as the seed is different from the tree. The tree produces a seed, giving it its own nature; it drops the seed on the ground, and the seed slowly grows, putting out its hidden powers, until it becomes a tree like its parent; it can become nothing else, because its nature is the same as that of the parent. And so with the Jîva; like a seed he is dropped into matter by Īshvara, he slowly grows, putting out his hidden powers, until he becomes Īshvara; he can become nothing else, because his nature is the same as that of his Parent, Îshvara.

Îshvara is said to be wise and powerful, Jîva to be unwise and powerless;* but the Jîva grows into wisdom and power, and that growth is what is called Evolution.

We have seen that the Jîva begins in the mineral kingdom his long pilgrimage through the physical world. At that stage he is unconscious of the outer world. His attention is called to it, its existence is forced on him, by violent shocks and blows from outside ; earthquakes, volcanoes, landslips, the rolling of the furious surf, these and many other violent agencies arouse the Jîva's attention to the fact that he is not alone, that there is something outside him. If the student reads the accounts of the very early periods of the earth's history, he will be struck by the number of big catastrophies ; all these were necessary to awaken the Jîvas. After a very very long time, the Jîvas were sufficiently awake to be fit for softer and more flexible bodies than minerals, and they went on into plants, while others, coming out later from Îshvara, took their places in the mineral kingdom.

The Jivas in the plants now became more conscious of the outer world, feeling the warm sun, and the gentle breezes, and the life-giving rain. As they grew older and more sensitive, they passed into the longer-lived plants, such as shrubs and trees, and in these more of their inner powers unfolded, till they were ready to go on into the animal kingdom, while the younger ones came on into the vegetable kingdom, and others still younger into the minerals.

* Shvetâshvatarop, i—9.

And now in the animal kingdom the Jîvas got on much faster, and by hunting for food, and fighting and outwitting each other, the senses and the simple mental powers were brought out and strengthened ; until at last the animal forms were no longer good enough for them, and they needed the human in order that their evolution should not stop.

The student may ask : What makes the forms evolve to suit the Jîva ? The Jîva's own efforts. He wants to look out through the wall of matter that encloses him ; he tries to see, and his outwardgoing energy works on the wall, and slowly, very very slowly, evolves an eye ; and so with all the senses and all the organs. The senses are pierced from within outwards, we are taught. The Jîva shapes them all to suit himself, so that he can use his powers in the outer world, and the Devas help him by giving him materials that are suited to the organ he wants to build. When he is trying to see, Agni gives him some of his own fiery matter, which vibrates when touched by rays of light. When he wants to taste, Varuṇa gives him some of his own watery matter, which makes tasting possible. And so on. In this way he makes his bodies, and when he has shaped one as much as he can, and it is of no further use to him, he throws it away and makes another. He evolves faster and faster as he goes on, because his powers, as they work more freely, can bring about results much more quickly than in the earlier stages.

This is the general process of evolution, and the succession has been told about as though it were unbroken, so that the student may grasp the main idea. But, in nature, while the general stream is onwards, there are many little twists and turnings and runnings up into bye-ways. A Jīva may slip backwards for a time, stay a while in a stage that he has long left behind him. There is something he has not quite learned, some power he has not quite evolved, and he falls by this into a lower stage again as a boy at school, if he were idle, might be put back into a lower class. A Jīva which has reached the human stage may be attached to an animal, or to a plant, or, if he be very tāmasic, even to a stone, till he has learned to use the human form better. Then he is like a man in prison, shut out from human society, and unable to use his human powers, for want of freedom.

But the Jîva is not to be tied for ever to the wheel of births and deaths. The ropes that tie him to this wheel are his desires. So long as he desires objects that belong to this earth, he must come back to this earth in order to possess and enjoy these objects. But when he ceases to desire these objects, then the ropes are broken, and he is free. He need not be born any more; he has reached liberation. He is then called a Mukṭa, a free Jîva.

Often Mukṭas remain in this world to help its progress, so that other Jîvas may get free sooner than they otherwise would. We read about such Mukṭas in the Vedas and Purânas and the Iṭihâsa; sometimes they are great Rishis or Kings, and sometimes they are quite simple people. But whatever they may be in outside appearance, they are pure and unselfish and calm, and live only to help others. They are content to labour for the good of the world, and they know that they are one with Îshvara.

देहिनोऽस्मिन् यथा देहे कौमारं यौवनं जरा ।
तथा देहान्तरप्राप्तिर्धरिस्तत्र न मुह्यति ॥*

“As the dweller in the body experienceth, in the body, childhood, youth and old age, so passeth he on to another body. The steadfast one grieveth not thereat.”

अन्तवन्त इमे देहा नित्यस्योक्ताः शरीरिणः ।
अनाशिनोऽप्रमेयस्य तस्माद् युध्यस्व भारत ॥
य एनं वेत्ति हन्तारं यश्चैनं मन्यते हतम् ।
उभौ तौ न विजानीतो नायं हन्ति न हन्यते ॥
न जायत । प्रयत्नं वा कदाचन-

नायं भूत्वा भविता वा न भूयः ।
अज्ञो नित्यः शाश्वतोऽयं पुराणो
न हन्यते हन्यमाने शरीरे ॥
वेदाविनाशिनं नित्यं य एनमजमव्ययम् ।
कथं स पुरुषः पार्थ ! कं घातयति हन्ति कम् ! ॥
वासांसि जीर्णानि यथा विहाय
नवानि गृह्णाति नरोऽपराणि ।
तथा शरीराणि विहाय जीर्णा-
न्यन्यानि संयाति नवानि देही ॥
देही नित्यमवध्योऽयं देहे सर्वस्य भारत ।
तस्मात् सर्वाणि भूतानि न त्वं शोचितुमर्हसि ॥*

“These bodies of the embodied One who is

* Bhâgavad-Gîtâ, ii—13

* Bhâgavad-Gîtâ, ii, 18-22 and 30.

eternal, indestructible and boundless, are known as finite. Therefore fight, O Bhârata.

“He who regardeth this as a slayer, and he who thinketh he is slain, both of them are ignorant. He slayeth not, nor is he slain.

“He is not born, nor doth he die: nor, having been, ceaseth he any more to be; unborn, perpetual, eternal and ancient, he is not slain when the body is slaughtered.

“Who knoweth him indestructible, perpetual, unborn, undiminishing, how can that man slay, O Pârtha, or cause to be slain ?

“As a man, casting off worn-out garments, taketh new ones, so the dweller in the body, casting off worn-out bodies, entereth into others that are new.

“This dweller in the body of every one is ever invulnerable, O Bhârata. Therefore thou shouldst not grieve for any creature.”

तद्यथा पेशस्कारी पेशसो मात्रामुपादायान्यन्नवतरं कल्याणतरं रूपं तनुत एवमेवायमात्मेदं शरीरं निहत्याविद्यां गमयित्वान्यन्नवतरं कल्याणतरं रूपं कुरुते ॥*

“As a goldsmith, having taken a piece of gold, maketh another form, new and more beautiful, so

* Brihadâraṇyakop, IV, iv-4.

verily the Âtmâ, having cast off this body and having put away Avidya, maketh another new and more beautiful form."

ब्रह्मण्याधाय कर्माणि संगं त्यक्त्वा करोति यः ।

खिप्यते न स पापेन पद्मपत्रमिवाम्भसा ॥

कायेन मनसा बुद्ध्या केवलैरिन्द्रियैरपि ।

योगिनः कर्म कुर्वन्ति संगं त्यक्त्वाऽऽत्मशुद्धये ॥

युक्तः कर्मफलं त्यक्त्वा शान्तिमाप्नोति नैष्टिकीम् ।

अयुक्तः कामकारेण फले सक्तो निबध्यते ॥*

"He who acteth placing all actions in Brahman, abandoning attachment, is unaffected by sin, as a lotus leaf by the waters.

"Yogis, having abandoned attachment, perform action only by the body, by the mind, by the reason, and even by the senses, for the purification of the self.

"The harmonised man, having abandoned the fruit of action, attaineth to the eternal peace; the non-harmonised, impelled by desire, attached to fruit, are bound."

विद्याविनयसम्पन्न ब्राह्मणे गवि हस्तिनि ।

शुनि चैव श्वपाके च परिडताः समदर्शिनः ॥

इहैव तैर्जितः सर्गो येषां साम्ये स्थितं मनः ।

निर्दोषं हि समं ब्रह्म तस्माद् ब्रह्मणि ते स्थिताः ॥

* Bhâgavad—Gîtâ, v, 10—12.

न प्रहृष्येत् प्रियं प्राप्य नोद्विजेत् प्राप्य चाप्रियम् ।
 स्थिरबुद्धिरसंमूढो ब्रह्मविद् ब्रह्मणि स्थितः ॥
 बाह्यस्पर्शेष्वसक्तात्मा विन्दत्यात्मनि यत् सुखम् ।
 स ब्रह्मयोगयुक्तात्मा सुखमक्षय्यमश्नुते ॥ †

“Sages look equally on a Brâhmaṇa adorned with learning and humility, a cow, an elephant, and even a dog and an outcaste.

“Even here on earth they have conquered the universe whose mind remains balanced. Brahman is incorruptible and balanced; therefore they are established in Brahman.

“One should neither rejoice in obtaining what is pleasant, nor sorrow in obtaining what is unpleasant; with Reason firm, unperplexed, the Brahman-knower (is) established in Brahman.

“He whose self is unattached to external contacts, and findeth joy in the SELF, having the self harmonised with Brahman by yoga, enjoyeth happiness exempt from decay.”

योऽन्तःसुखोऽन्तरारामस्तथान्तर्ज्योतिरेव यः ।
 स योगी ब्रह्मनिर्वाणं ब्रह्मभूतोऽधिगच्छति ॥
 ब्रभन्ते ब्रह्मनिर्वाणमृषयः क्षीणकल्मषाः ।
 छिन्नद्वैधा यतात्मानः सर्वभूतहिते रताः ॥

† Ibid., v. 18—21.

कामक्रोधवियुक्तानां यतीनां यतचेतसाम् ।
अभितो ब्रह्मनिर्वाणं वर्तते विदितात्मनाम् ॥*

“He who is happy within, who rejoiceth within and who is illuminated within, that yogî, becoming Brahman, goeth to the Nirvâṇa of Brahman.

“Rîshis their sins destroyed, their duality removed, their selves controlled, intent upon the welfare of all beings, obtain the Nirvâṇa of Brahman.

“The Nirvâṇa of Brahman lies near to those who know themselves, who are disjoined from desire and passion, subdued ascetics, of controlled mind.”

* Bhâgavad-Gîtâ, v. 24-26.

—:0:—

CHAPTER IV.

KARMA.

KARMA is a Sanskrit word which means action, but it is generally used to mean a certain definite connection between what is being done now and what will happen in the future. Things do not happen by accident, by chance, in a disorderly way. They happen in regular succession; they follow each other in a regular order.

If a seed is planted in the ground, it sends up a little stem, and leaves grow on the stem and the flowers come, and then fruits, and in the fruits are seeds again. And one of these seeds planted will produce a stem, and leaves, and flowers and fruits and seeds. The same sort of seed produces the same kind of plants. Rice produces rice-plants; barley produces barley; wheat produces wheat; thistle produces thistle; cactus produces cactus. If a man sows thistles, he must not expect a crop of sweet grapes; if he plants prickly cactus, he must not expect to gather juicy apples. This is karma, and a man, knowing it, sows the seed of the thing he wants to reap. This is the first thing to remember.

Now an action is not quite so simple a thing as it looks. If I ask a person, "Why do you walk into the town?" he will say: "I wanted a pair of shoes, and I thought I could get them there;" or: "I wanted to see a freind and I thought he was in the town;" and so on, in many ways, but always: "I wanted and I thought therefore I acted." These three are always found together.

Now a want is what is called a desire; we desire to get something—that is the first stage; then we think how to get it—that is the second stage; then we act so as to get it—that is the third stage. This is the regular order; every action has a thought behind it and every thought has a desire behind it.

These three things—action, thought, desire—are the three threads that are twisted into the cord of karma. Our actions make the people round us happy or unhappy; if we make them happy, we have sown happiness like a seed, and it grows up into happiness for ourselves; if we make them unhappy, we have sown unhappiness like a seed, and it grows up into unhappiness for ourselves. If we do cruel things, we sow cruelty like a seed, and it grows up into cruelty to ourselves. If we do kind things, we sow kindness like a seed, and it grows up into kindness to ourselves. Whatever we sow by our actions comes back to us. This is karma.

But action has thought behind it. Now thought makes what is called our character, the nature and kind of mind that we have. As we think about a thing a great deal, our mind becomes like that thing. If we think kindly, we become kind; if we think cruelly, we become cruel; if we think deceitfully, we become deceitful; if we think honestly, we become honest. In this way our character is made by our thoughts, and when we are born again, we shall be born with the character that is being made by our thoughts now. As we act according to our nature, or character—as a kind person acts kindly, or a cruel person acts cruelly—it is easy to see that actions in our next life will depend on the thoughts of our present life. This is karma.

But thought has desire behind it. Now desire brings us the object we wish for. As a magnet attracts soft iron, so does desire attract objects. If we desire money, we shall have the opportunity of becoming rich in another life. If we desire learning, we shall have the opportunity of becoming learned in another life. If we desire love, we shall have the opportunity of becoming loved. If we desire power, we shall have the opportunity of becoming powerful. This is karma.

The student should think over this again and again till he thoroughly understands it. Only when he understands this, can he go on to the more difficult problems of karma. Karma may be summed up in a sentence : A man reaps as he sows.

But the student may ask : "If my actions now are the outcome of my past thoughts, and if my past thoughts are the outcome of my past desires, am I not helplessly bound? I must act as I have thought. I must think as I have desired." That is true, but to a certain extent only ; for we are changing constantly as we gain new experiences, and the Jîva thus gains more knowledge, and by the help of that changes his desires. In other words, while we have actually desired, thought and acted in a certain way in the past, the possibility of desiring, of thinking otherwise has also been present throughout that past ; and this possibility may be turned, at any time, into actuality, as soon as we realise, by means of new experiences, the evil consequences of acting as we have actually done in the past.

Suppose a man finds that he has acted cruelly: he learns that his cruel action was caused by his cruel thoughts in the past, and that those cruel thoughts grew out of desire to get an object which could only be obtained by cruelty. He sees that his cruel actions make people miserable, that these people hate and fear him, and thus make him lonely and unhappy. He thinks over all this, and he resolves to change, but the pressure of his past thoughts and desires is very difficult to resist. He goes to the root of the trouble—the desire for the things that he cannot get without cruelty, and he—who is the Jiva—says to himself: “I will not let myself desire those things, and whenever I begin to wish for them I will remember that the desire breeds misery.” He uses thought to check desire, instead of letting desire control thought. Then instead of desires carrying him away, as if they were runaway horses, he gradually uses thought as a bridle, and keeps his desires in check. He will only allow them to run after objects that bring happiness when they are obtained.

Young Jivas let their desires run away with them, and so bring much unhappiness on themselves; older Jivas grow wiser, and when the desire runs out to an object the possession of which would, as he has found in the past, cause unhappiness, he remembers that past unhappiness, and by his thought pulls the desire back.

The student, then, who would make happiness for others and for himself, must look well after his desires, must find out by observation and study which objects in the long run bring happiness, and which bring unhappiness, and must then try, with all his strength, to desire only those things the outcome of which is happiness.

It is very important to realise that escape from the bonds of birth and death is not gained by any special mode of life, but that, as Shri Kṛṣṇa says : “ He who, established in unity, worshippeth Me, abiding in all beings, that yogī liveth in Me, whatever his mode of living.”* Janaka, the Kshatriya King and Tulādhāra, the Vaiśya merchant, equally reached liberation, and that, not by fleeing to the forest, but by the absence of desire for worldly things.

Janaka was King in Mithilā over the Videhas and, having attained to tranquility of mind, he sang this song: “Unlimited is my wealth, and yet I have naught. If the whole of Mithilâ be burned up with fire, yet for me there will be nothing lost."† And so he told Mândavya, having repeated this, that whatever possessions a man might have were but a source of trouble, and that the gratification of desire, here or in heaven, could not afford the sixteenth part of the happiness which comes from the disappearance of desire. As the horns of a cow grow with the cow, so does the desire for wealth grow with its possession. Wealth should be used for the good that can be done with it, but desire is sorrow. Looking on all creatures as on himself, a wise man gains freedom from all anxiety.* By the teaching of the sage Jâjñavalkya, King Janaka attained liberation, for it "enabled him to attain to that Brahman which is auspicious and immortal, and which transcends all sorrow."† And having thus learned, he became in his turn a teacher, to whom even Vyâsa sent his son, Shuka, to learn the religion of emancipation.‡

* Bhāgavad-Gītā, vi.—31.

Jâjali made great ṭapas, and became filled with † Mahâbhârataṃ. Shânti Parva, clxxiii.

* Mahâbhârataṃ, cccxxvii.

† See the great discourse of Yâjñavalkya to King Janaka; Ibid. Shanti Parva, cccxi—cacxix.

‡ Ibid., cccxxvi—cccxxviii.

pride; and one day he thought within himself: "who in this wide sea and spacious earth is like to me?" Then cried a voice: "Say not such words. Even Ṭulâḍhâra, busy in buying and selling, should not thus speak, and to him thou art not equal." Then Jâjali wondered much that a mere merchant should be put above himself, a Brâhmaṇa and an ascetic, and he set forth to find Ṭulâḍhâra, and thus solve the riddle. Vexing himself, he reached the city of Vârânasi, and there found Ṭulâḍhâra, a mere shopkeeper, selling, to whomsoever came, all kinds of goods. Ṭulâḍhâra stood up, greeting the Brâhmaṇa as was fitting and to him Ṭulâḍhâra related the story of the great penance that had inflated him with pride: "Angry, thou hast come to me, O Brâhmaṇa; what service can I render thee?" Much amazed was Jâjali at such knowledge of his past shown by this humble trader, and eagerly he pressed for explanation. Then Ṭulâḍhâra spoke to him of the ancient morality known to all—though practised by so few—of living in a way which inflicted harm on none, or when harm could not be totally avoided, a minimum of such harm; he himself asked no loan from any, nor with any quarrelled; attraction and aversion he had conquered; equal his look on all, without praising or blaming any; when a man is fearless and is feared by none, when he neither likes nor dislikes, when he does no wrong to any, then he reaches Brahman. Very beautifully did Tūlādhāra discourse of the injuries inflicted on animals and on men by cruelty, of the nature of sacrifice, and of true pilgrimage, showing how liberation might be gained by harmlessness.*

काममय एवायं पुरुष इति स यथाकामो भवति तत्क्रतुर्भवति
यत्क्रतुर्भवति तत्कर्म कुरुते तत्कर्म कुरुते तदभिसम्पद्यते ॥ †

“Man verily is desire-formed; as is his desire so is his thought; as (his) thought is, so he does action; as he does action, so he attains.”

तदेव सक्तः सह कर्मणैति लिङ्गं मनो यत्र निषक्तमस्य ॥ ‡

“So indeed the desirer goes by work to the object in which his mind is immersed.”

अथ खलु क्रतुमयः पुरुषो यथाक्रतुरस्मिँल्लोके पुरुषो
भवति तथेतः प्रेत्य भवति ।*

“Now verily man is thought-formed; as man in this world thinks, so, having gone away hence, he becomes.”

* Mahābhārata, Shānti Parva, cclxi-cclxi.

† Bṛihadāraṇyakop IV. iv-5.

* Ibid, 6.

‡ Chhândogyop, III, xiv-1.

न मां कर्माणि लिम्पन्ति न मे कर्मफले स्पृहा ।
 इति मां योऽभिजानाति कर्मभिर्न स बध्यते ॥
 एवं ज्ञात्वा कृतं कर्म पूर्वैरपि मुमुक्षुभिः ।
 कुरु कर्मैव तस्मात् त्वं पूर्वैः पूर्वतरं कृतम् ॥*

“Nor do actions affect Me, nor is the fruit of action desired by Me. He who thus knoweth Me is not bound by actions.”

“Having thus known, our forefathers, ever seeking liberation, performed action; therefore do thou also perform action, as did our forefathers in the olden time.”

यस्य सर्वे समारम्भाः कामसंकल्पवर्जिताः ।
 ज्ञानाग्निदग्धकर्माणं तमाहुः पण्डितं बुधाः ॥
 त्यक्त्वा कर्मफलासंगं नित्यतृप्तो निराश्रयः ।
 कर्मण्यभिप्रवृत्तोऽपि नैव किञ्चित् करोति सः ॥
 निराशीर्यतचित्तात्मा त्यक्तसर्वपारिग्रहः ।
 शारीरं केवलं कर्म कुर्वन्नाप्नोति किल्बिषम् ॥
 यदृच्छालाभसन्तुष्टो द्वन्द्वातीतो विमत्सरः ।
 समः सिद्धावसिद्धौ च कृत्वापि न निबध्यते ॥
 गतसंगस्य मुक्तस्य ज्ञानावस्थितचेतसः ।
 यज्ञायाचरतः कर्म समग्रं प्रविलीयते ॥†

“Whose works are all free from the moulding of desire, whose actions are burned up by the fire of wisdom, him the wise have called a Sage.”

* Bhāgavad-Gītā, iv, 14—15. † Bhāgavad-Gītā, iv 19—23.

“Having abandoned attachment to the fruit of action, always content, nowhere seeking refuge he is not doing anything, although doing actions.

“Hoping for naught, his mind and self controlled, having abandoned all greed, performing action by the body alone, he doth not commit sin.”

“Of one with attachment dead, harmonious, with his thoughts established in wisdom, his works sacrifices, all action melts away.”

यदा सर्वे प्रमुच्यन्ते कामा येऽस्य हृदि स्थिताः ।

अथ मर्त्योऽमृतो भवत्यत्र ब्रह्म समश्नुते ॥*

“When all the desires hidden in the heart are loosed, then the mortal becomes immortal, then he here enjoyeth Brahman.”

आत्मानं रथिनं विद्धि शरीरं रथमेव तु ।

बुद्धिं तु सारथिं विद्धि मनः प्रग्रहमेव च ॥

इन्द्रियाणि ह्यानाहुर्विषयांस्तेषु गोचरान् ।

आत्मेन्द्रियमनोयुक्तं भोक्तेत्याहुर्मनीषिणः ॥

यस्त्वविज्ञानवान् भवत्ययुक्तेन मनसा सदा ।

तस्येन्द्रियाण्यवश्यानि दुष्टाश्वा इव सारथेः ॥

यस्तु विज्ञानवान् भवति युक्तेन मनसा सदा ।

तस्येन्द्रियाणि वश्यानि सदश्वा इव सारथेः ॥

यस्त्वविज्ञानवान् भवत्यमनस्कः सदाऽशुचिः ।

न स तत्पदमाप्नोति संसारं चाधिगच्छति ॥ †

“Know the Self, the chariot-owner, the body,

* Kathop, II, vi—14 † Kathop, I, iii, 3—7.

the chariot ; know Reason the charioteer, and the mind as the reins; they call the senses the horses, the sense-objects their province. The Self, joined to the senses and mind, (is) the enjoyer; thus say the wise. Whoever is ignorant, always with mind loose, his senses (are) uncontrolled, like bad horses of the charioteer. Whoever is wise, always with mind tightened, his senses (are) controlled, like good horses of the charioteer. Whoever is indeed ignorant, thoughtless, always impure, he does not obtain that goal (but) comes again into Samsâra."

—:O:—

CHAPTER V.

SACRIFICE.

THE idea of "offering sacrifices" is very familiar in India, but a student needs to understand the principle which underlies all sacrifices, so that he may realise that every one should sacrifice himself to the good of others, and that all sacrifice of other things are meant, to teach a man how he ought, at last, to sacrifice himself.

The first thing to grasp is that creation is sacrifice. Îshvara confines Himself, limits Himself, in matter in order that a universe may be made manifest. Shruṭi and Smṛiti alike proclaim this truth, as in the Purusha Sūkta of the Rigveda or as in the allusion by Shrî Kṛiṣṇa to the formal sacrifice that causes the birth of beings.* Immersion in matter is, in spiritual language, called "death," and Îshvara thus sacrificed Himself in order that He might bring into separate being portions of Himself, the Jîvas who might develop all His powers in matter in an infinite variety of forms. This is the primary sacrifice, and on this is based the Law. This also gives us the meaning of sacrifice: it is the pouring out of life for the benefit of others.

* Bhâgavad-Gîtâ, viii-3.

The Law of Sacrifice is the Law of Life for all Jîvas. In the earlier stages of their growth they are forcibly sacrificed, and so progress involuntarily, without their own consent or even knowledge, their forms being violently wrenched away from them, and they propelled into new ones, a little more developed. Thus the Jîvas of the mineral kingdom are prepared to pass on into the vegetable, by the breaking up of their mineral bodies for the support of plants. The Jîvas of the vegetable kingdom are prepared to pass on into the animals, by the breaking up of their vegetable bodies for the support of animal life. The Jîvas of the animal kingdom are prepared to pass on into the human, by the breaking up of their bodies for the support of other animals, of savages, and of certain types of men. And even the Jîvas of the human kingdom are prepared to rise into higher races by breaking up of their human bodies for the support of other human lives in cannibalism, war, etc.

In all these cases the bodies are sacrificed for the benefit of others, without the assent of the embodied consciousness. Only after untold ages does the Jîva recognise, in the body, the universality of the law, and begin to sacrifice his own upādhis deliberately, for the good of those around him. This is called self-sacrifice, and is the showing forth of the divinity of the Jîva, the proof that he is of the nature of Îshvara.

A wonderful story of uttermost self-sacrifice is told in the Mahâbhârata.

Indra, the King of the Devas, was sore beset by the Asura Vṛiṭṭra, born of the wrath of a Rîṣhi, whom Indra had offended by an unrighteous act. Vṛiṭṭra heading the Daityas, defeated Indra and his armies in battle, drove him away from his capital, Amarâvaṭi and took away his sovereignty. Long the Devas wandered with their King in exile, and repeatedly they made endeavour to regain their capital, but were vanquished again and again. Finally they learnt that the righteous wrath of a Rîṣhi could not be allayed, except by the voluntary self-sacrifice and pity of another Rîṣhi; and that Vṛiṭṭra could be slain by no other weapon than the thunderbolt made with the self-given bones of a holy one. And they went eagerly to the Rîṣhi Daḍhichi and told their woeful tale to him. And he was filled with a great pity and said: "I give to you my body willingly to make what use of it you like." And when their artificer Vishvakarmâ shrank from laying a rude and painful hand upon that shining body of purity and tapas, Daḍhîchi smiled and said: "Cover this body up with salt; bring here a herd of cows; they shall lick off the salt and flesh together; and ye shall take the bones which only ye require; and so naught of this body shall be wasted." And this was done and Vṛittra fell before the might born of that wondrous sacrifice.*

The Jîva is led up to this point by the teachings of the Rîṣhis, who bid him make sacrifices of his possessions for a good that he does not receive immediately: they show him that when a man sacrifices to others, his gifts return to him increased in the future. A man is to sacrifice some of his goods, which may be looked on as outlying pieces of himself, and he is promised that this act of self-denial shall bring him increased possessions. Next he was taught to make similar sacrifices and to deny himself present enjoyments, in order that he might lay up for himself increased happiness on the other side of death in Svarga. Thus the practice of sacrificing was made habitual, and man, by sacrificing his possessions in the hope of reward, prepared to learn that it was his duty to sacrifice himself in the service of others, and to find in the joy of that service his reward.

* Loc. cit., Vana Prava, c.

Another lesson taught in these sacrifices was the relation man bears to all the beings round him; that he is not a solitary, isolated life, but that all lives are inter-dependent, and can only prosper permanently as they recognise this inter-dependence. The Rîshis taught him to sacrifice daily to the Devas, to Rîshis, to ancestors, to men and animals, and showed him that as all these made sacrifices to enrich his life, he had incurred to them a debt, a duty, which he must pay by sacrifice. As he lives on others, he must, in common honesty, live for others. Sacrifice is right, a thing that ought to be done, that is owed.

Finally, as the Jîva recognises his parentage, his identity in nature with Îshvara, sacrifice becomes happiness, a delight, and the pouring out of life for others is felt as a joyous exercise of innate divine powers. Instead of seeing how much he can take and how little he can give, he tries to see how little he can take and how much he can give. He begins to look very carefully into what he takes for the support of his own upâdhis, and seeks to reduce to the lowest point the suffering inflicted by the breaking up of lower forms for his support. He abandons the foods and the amusements which inflict pain on sentient beings and tries to become "the friend of all creatures.' He realises that while the preying of animals on animals, of men on men, and the slaughter of animals by men for food or sport, are necessary at certain stages of evolution for the development of needed faculties and powers, men should gradually evolve from these, and cultivate the faculties of gentleness, sympathy and tenderness, regarding the weaker as younger Selves to be helped, instead of as victims to be immolated.

As a man lives in such thoughts of his non-separateness from younger Selves, he begins to feel more really his non-separateness from elder Selves and from the Universal Parent, Ishvara. Slowly he realises that his true function is to live for others, as Ishvara lives for all, and that his true happiness lies in becoming a channel in which the life of Îshvara is flowing, a willing instrument to do the will of Îshvara. Then every action becomes a sacrifice to Îshvara, and actions no longer bind him. Thus the law of sacrifice becomes also the law of liberation.

सह यज्ञैः प्रजाः सृष्टाः पुरोवाच प्रजापतिः ।

अनेन प्रसविष्यध्वं एष वो ऽस्त्वष्टकामधुक् ॥

देवान् भावयतानेन ते देवा भावयन्तु वः । soft ®

परस्परं भावयन्तः श्रेयः परमवाप्स्यथ ॥
 इष्टान् भोगान् हि वो देवा दास्यन्ते यज्ञभाविताः ।
 तैर्दत्तानप्रदायैभ्यो यो भुङ्क्तेस्तेन एव सः ॥
 यज्ञशिष्टाशिनः सन्तो मुच्यन्ते सर्वकिल्बिषैः ।
 भुञ्जेत ते त्वघं पापा ये पचन्त्यात्मकारणात् ॥
 अन्नाद् भवन्ति भूतानि पर्जन्यादन्नसम्भवः ।
 यज्ञाद् भवति पर्जन्यो यज्ञः कर्मसमुद्भवः ॥
 कर्मब्रह्मोद्भवं विद्धि ब्रह्माक्षरसमुद्भवम् ।
 तस्मात् सर्वगतं ब्रह्म नित्यं यज्ञे प्रतिष्ठितम् ॥*

"Having in ancient times emanated mankind together with sacrifice, Prajâpati declared: 'By this shall ye propagate; be this to you the Kamadhuk:

"With this nourish ye the Devas, and may the Devas nourish you; thus nourishing one another ye shall reap the supremest good.

"For, nourished by sacrifice, the Devas, shall bestow on you the enjoyments you desire. A thief verily is he who enjoyeth what is given by them without returning them aught.

"The righteous, who eat the remains of the sacrifice, are freed from all sins; but the impious, who dress food for their own sakes, they verily eat sin.

"From food creatures come forth; from rain is

* Bhagavad-Gitâ, iii, 10—15.

the production of food ; rain proceedeth from sacrifice ; sacrifice ariseth out of action.

“Know thou from Brahma (the Veda) action groweth, and Brahma (the Veda) from the Imperishable, cometh. Therefore Brahman, the all permeating, is ever present in sacrifice.’”

काङ्क्षन्तः कर्मणां सिद्धिं यजन्त इह देवताः ।
क्षिप्रं हि मानुषे लोके सिद्धिर्भवति कर्मजा ॥*

“They who long after success in action on earth sacrifice to the Devas ; for in brief space, verily, in this world of men, success is born of action.”

आवां राजानावध्वरे ववृत्यां हव्येभिरिन्द्रावरुणा नमोभिः ।
अस्मे इन्द्रावरुणा विश्ववारं रयिं धत्तं वसुयन्तं पुरुक्षुम् ॥
इयमिन्द्रं वरुणमष्टमे गीः प्रावत्तांके तनये तूतुजाना । †

“O Kings, Indra, Varuṇa, to this our sacrifice be ye turned by offerings and homage,.....

“O Indra, Varuṇa, plenteous wealth and food and blessing give us.....

“This my song may it reach Indra, Varuṇa, and by its force bring sons and offspring.

पतेषु यश्चरते भ्राजमानेषु

यथाकालं चाहुतयो ह्यददायन् ।

तन्नयन्त्येतः सूर्यस्य रश्मयो-

यत्र देवानां पतिरेकोऽभिवासः ॥

* Bhagavad-Gītā, iv, 12.

† Rigveda, VII, LXXXIV, I, 4-5,

एह्येहीति तमाहुतयः सुवर्चसः

सूर्यस्य रश्मिभिर्यजमानं वहन्ति ।

प्रियां वाचमभिवदन्त्योऽर्चयन्त्य

एष वः पुण्यः सुकृतो ब्रह्मलोकः ॥*

“Whoever works (sacrifices), pouring libations into the shining of these [the seven flames previously mentioned] at the proper time, him these sun-rays lead where dwells the one Lord of the Devas. Saying to him ‘Come, come,’ these resplendent libations carry the sacrificer by the sun-rays, worshipping him and saying the sweet words: ‘This is your pure well-deserved Brahma-world.’”

यज्ञशिष्टामृतभुजो यान्ति ब्रह्म सनातनम् ।

नायं लोकोऽस्त्ययज्ञस्य कुतोऽन्यः कुरुसत्तम ॥ †

“The eaters of the life-giving remains of sacrifice go to the eternal Brahman. This world is not for the non-sacrificer, much less the other, O best of the Kurus.”

गतसंगस्य मुक्तस्य ज्ञानावस्थितचेतसः ।

यज्ञायाचरतः कर्म समग्रं प्रविलीयते ॥ ‡

“From one with attachment dead, harmonious, with his thoughts established in wisdom, his works sacrifices, all Karma melts away.”

* Mundakop, I, ii., 5-6 † Bhâgavad-Gîtâ, iv-31. ‡ Ibid, 23.

यत्करोषि यदश्नासि यज्जुहोषि ददासि यत् ।
यत्तपस्यसि कौन्तेय तत्कुरुष्व मदर्पणम् ॥
शुभाशुभफलैरेव मोक्षयसे कर्मबन्धनैः । *

“ Whatsoever thou doest, whatsoever thou eatest, whatsoever thou offerest, whatsoever thou givest, whatsoever thou doest of austerity, O Kaunṭeya, do thou that as an offering unto Me.

“ Thus shalt thou be liberated from the bonds of action, (yielding) good and evil fruits. ”

* Ibid, ix, 27-28.

CHAPTER VI.

THE WORLDS—VISIBLE AND INVISIBLE.

WE all know one world, the world around us, which we can see, and hear, and touch, and taste, and smell. Science tells us of many parts of this world, which our senses are not keen enough to perceive, things too small for our eyes to see, too subtle to affect any of our senses. These parts of our world, which we cannot perceive but about which science tells us, are still physical, although invisible to us; they are parts of our world. Physical matter includes solids, liquids, gases, and ethers, all made up of atoms of the same kind.

But we have heard of other worlds, which are invisible and are not a part of this world, the worlds into which people go when they pass away from this earth by death. We read of the Triloka, the three worlds, and every one should know something about these, for in these three worlds the Jiva is bound to the wheel of births and deaths, and in these his evolution proceeds. These three worlds are made at the beginning of immense period called a Day of Brahmâ, and perish at its ending. Four other great lokas, or worlds, complete the Bra-hmânda, but they last on through the life of Brahmâ. We need not deal with them here. There are also some sub-divisions within the great lokas, to which the same name of loka is given, such as, Preṭaloka and Piṭriloka in Bhûvarloka, and Indra-loka and Sûryaloka in Svargaloka.

The three great lokas with which we are concerned, the Trilokî, are: Bhûrloka, the physical world, or the earth; Bhûvarloka, the world of "becoming"—intermediate between the earth and Svarga; Svargaloka, the heaven world. Of these three, Bhûrloka is partly visible and partly invisible to us; Bhûvarloka and Svargaloka are invisible. In Bhûrloka the Pṛiṭhivî Ṭaṭṭva is the basis of all forms: it exists in seven modifications—solid, liquid, gaseous, radiant, etheric, superetheric and atomic. These later four are spoken as "the ethers." In Bhûvarloka seven similar modifications exist, but the basis is the Âpas Ṭaṭṭva. In Svargaloka there are also seven similar modifications, but the basis is the Agni Ṭaṭṭva.

The Jîva has three sheaths corresponding to these worlds—the Annamayakosha, the Prâṇamayaskosha, the Manomayakosha. The Annamayakosha, or food-sheath—so called because it is built up out of the food we eat—corresponds with the visible part of the earth and is composed of solids, liquids and gases. The Pranamayakosha or Prana-sheath, corresponds with the invisible part of our earth and is composed of ethers. Prana is the life-energy, and includes all the forces that science calls magnetic and electrical, but is much more than these. Both these sheaths are connected with Bhûrloka.

The Manomayakosha, mind-sheath, has two parts ; the denser part, in which the passions have their seat, is connected with Bhûvarloka ; the finer part, in which play the emotions and thought, is connected with Svargaloka.

Other names are used for these sheaths, according to the object for which the classification is made, but the student need not become confused by these, for as he advances, he will find that his increased knowledge makes them quite intelligible. We will only notice three names very commonly used.

The s̥thûlasharîra, or solid body, is the same as the Annamayakosha, made of solids, liquids and gases. The Sûkshmarsharîra, or subtle body, includes the Prâṇamayakosha and the Manomayakosha; in addition to these, it includes another kosha, the Vijnânamayakosha, the knowledgesheath, which connects the Jîva with maharloka, a loka beyond the Triloka in which his pilgrimage is carried on, one which is not destroyed, though it is rendered uninhabitable, at the close of the Day of Brahma. This part of the Sûkshmarsharîra, the knowledge-sheath, is relatively permanent, and lasts through the series of births and deaths.

A table may make these two classifications, and their relation to the lokas, clear:—

SHARÎRA.	LOKA.	KOSHA.
Sthûla.	Bhûloka.	Annamaya.
Sûkshma.	Bhûloka.	Prânamaya.
Sûkshma	Bhuvarloka.	Manomaya.
Sûkshma.	Svargaloka.	Manomaya.

[These perish at or after death and are renewed at re-birth.]

Sûkshma (Kâraṇa) Maharloka. Vijñânamaya.

This does not perish at or after death, so is not renewed at re-birth.]

The Sthûlasharîra contains the organs of action, the hands, feet and those of speech, generation and excretion, often called the Karmendriyas; but the true Karmendriyas, the centres which direct and control the organs, are in the Sûkshmarsharîra. Thus joy, or grief, or any strong emotion, affects the centres, and through them, the organs; the hands twitch, the feet tap, speech is impeded in irritation, and so on. The Jnânendriyas have also their centres in the Sûkṣhmasharîra, while their organs—eyes, ears, tongue, nose and skin—are in the Sthûlasharîra.

Now let us see what happens at death. First, the Sûkṣhmasharîra is separated from the Sthûlasharîra, the Jîva drawing it away by means of the Prâṇamayakosha. This leaves the Sthûlasharîra a mass of “lifeless” matter ; that is, of matter from which the life that held it together is withdrawn ; there is plenty of life left in the cells of the body, and they begin to break away from each other, but the ruling life is gone. The Jîva remains in his Sûkṣhmasharîra. Very quickly he shakes off his Prâṇamayakosha, and has then the denser part of the Manomayakosha as his outermost garment. He is then called a Preṭa, and is an inhabitant of Preṭaloka. If he has been a very good man on earth, he dreams away happily while in this condition ; but if he has been a bad man, he suffers while a Preṭa, craving for the earthly pleasures which he is no longer able to obtain. After a shorter or longer time—according to the strength of these cravings and the consequent length of time needed for their exhaustion—the densest part of the Manomayakosha falls away, and he goes as a Pitri into Pitriloka. Having spent there sufficient time to purify the Manomayakosha from all elements unfit for Svarga, the Jiva in the purified Manomayakosha goes on into Svarga, and enjoys there the fruit he has stored up.

When this is exhausted, the time has come for his return to earth, and the purified Manomayakosha dissolves away, leaving the Jiva in the Vijnanamayakosha. He quickly puts forth his power to form new vehicles, and creates a new Manomayakosha for his coming life in the lower worlds. The Devas build for him a Prânamayakosha and an Annamayakosha, according to his karma, and he is again born into Bhûrloka.

These are the recurring stages of the Jiva's pilgrimage : life in the visible world, death, life in the invisible worlds, re-birth. This is repeated time after time, time after time. At last, the Jiva grows weary of these three worlds, and longs for higher, subtler experiences and more expanded life; he turns away from all these worlds can offer him, and finds delight in meditation, in worship, in the compassionate helping of the weaker; he no longer uses his vehicles to gain pleasure for himself, but only to do service to others, and, so used, they can no longer imprison him. He dwells in the higher lokas, guiding his lower vehicles as his instruments in the lower worlds, and becomes a co-worker with Íshvara, either retaining his vehicles for service or throwing them away and entering into Brahman.

अथ त्रयो वाव लोका मनुष्यलोकः पितृलोको देवलोक इति ।*

“ Now verily there are three worlds—the world of men, the world of the Pitris, the world of the Devas.”

जातस्य हि ध्रुवो मृत्युर्ध्रुवं जन्म मृतस्य च ।
 तस्मादपरिहार्येऽर्थे न त्वं शोचितुमर्हसि ॥
 अव्यक्तादीनि भूतानि व्यक्तमध्यानि भारत ।
 अव्यक्तनिधनान्येव तत्र का परिदेवना ॥†

“For certain is death for the born, and certain is birth for the dead ; therefore over the inevitable thou shouldst not grieve.

“ Beings are unmanifest in their origin, manifest in their midmost state, O Bhârata, unmanifest in their dissolution : what room then for lamentation ?

सहस्रयुगपर्यन्तमहर्षद् ब्रह्मणो विदुः ।
 रात्रिं युगसहस्रान्तां तेऽहोरात्रविदो जनाः ॥

* Bṛihadâraṇyakop. I, v—16. † Bhâgavad-Gitâ, ii; 27—28.

अव्यक्तादव्यक्तयः सर्वाः प्रभवन्त्यहरागमे ।

रात्र्यागमे प्रलीयन्ते तत्रैवाव्यक्तसंज्ञके ॥ *

“ The people who know the Day of Brahmâ, a thousand Yugas in duration, and the Night, a thousand Yugas in ending, they know day and night.

“ From the unmanifested all the manifested stream forth at the coming of Day ; at the coming of Night they dissolve, even in that called the unmanifested.”

त्रैविद्या मां सोमपाः पूतपापाः

यज्ञैरिष्ट्व स्वर्गतिं प्रार्थयन्ते ।

ते पुण्यमासाद्य सुरेन्द्रलोक-

मश्नन्ति दिव्यान्दिवि देवभोगान् ॥

ते तं भुक्त्वा स्वर्गलोकं विशालं

क्षीणे पुण्ये मर्त्यलोकं विशन्ति ।

एवं त्रयीधर्ममनुप्रपन्ना

गतागतं कामकामा लभन्ते ॥†

“ The knowers of the three (Veda), the Soma drinkers, the purified from sin, worshipping Me with sacrifice, pray of Me the way to Svarga; they ascending to the holy word of the Deva Indra, enjoy in heaven the divine feasts of the Devas.

“ Having enjoyed the spacious Svarga-world,

* Ibid viii; 17—18. † Bhâgavad Gîtâ, ix, 20—21.

their holiness withered, they come back to this world of death. Following the virtues enjoined by the three (Vedas), desiring desires, they undergo this passage to and fro."

बहूनां जन्मनामन्ते ज्ञानवान्मां प्रपद्यते ।

वासुदेवः सर्वमिति स महात्मा सुदुर्लभः ॥ *

"At the end of many births the man full of wisdom cometh unto me : 'Vâsudeva is all,' saith he, the Mahâtmâ, very difficult to find."

* Ibid., vii, 19.

SANATANA DHARMA.

PART II.

GENERAL HINDU RELIGIOUS CUSTOMS AND RITES.

AMERICAN UNIVERSITY

PART II

AMERICAN UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

CHAPTER I.

THE SAMSKĀRAS.

EVERY religion prescribes a number of ceremonies, or rites, to be performed by its followers. The use of the ceremonies, speaking generally, is: (1) to help the Jîva to conquer and purify his sheaths; (2) to bring to his aid superior Intelligences, such as the Devas and the Rîshis; (3) to improve the atmosphere around him and so make it easier for him to steady and concentrate his mind.

To this end are used material objects, gestures, postures and sounds, all carefully arranged to bring about the results aimed at.

The objects used are chosen for their good magnetism, and in many cases—such as particular flowers offered to a particular Deva—because they share the magnetism of the Object of meditation or of worship, and thus make a link between that Object and the worshipper. Thus a mâlâ, a rosary, of tulasi beads is used in the worship of Shri Kriṣhṇa ; one of rudrâkṣha in the worship of Mahâdeva.

Gestures and postures, for the most part, affect the Prâṇas—the sub-divisions of the life-breath that circulate in the body ; some prevent the magnetism of the body from escaping into the surrounding atmosphere, and force its currents to move in a way suitable for calm and quiet thought.

Sounds are used for all the three purposes mentioned above. They give rise to vibrations, and as these vibrations are regular and even, they make the vibrations of the Sûkṣhmasharîra—which is very sensitive and easily affected—regular and even also. When these vibrations of the Sûkṣhmasharîra are made regular, the Jîva is much helped in steadiness of thought and devotion. Sounds of a suitable kind attract the attention of the Rîṣhis and Devas to the person uttering the sounds, and they help him. Further, suitable sounds drive away hostile Intelligences and bad magnetic influences, and so improve the surroundings of the speaker.

Sounds thus used are called Mantras. A mantra is a succession of sounds, a definite sequence, the sounds being arranged in a certain order ; if the sounds are changed the vibrations are changed, and the results will be changed. That is why a mantra cannot be translated. A translated manṭra is like a sentence in which all the letters of the words are jumbled up, and so convey no meaning.

There is another thing to remember about manṭra ; if the man who utters a manṭra is not trying to lead a good life, the vibrations of the manṭra will do him harm, not good. For, as they work on his Sûkṣhmasharîra, they bring to bear on it a force antagonistic to evil desires and evil thoughts, and shake it very violently and may even wound and tear it, as his evil resolves make it vibrate in one way and the vibrations of the manṭra force it into another. If his resolves are good then they work with the manṭra and cause no conflict ; however weak they may be, they aid and do not hinder.

Manṭras need not be spoken aloud, and their silent repetition is, indeed, more powerful than audible recitation. They affect the subtler kinds of matter more than the denser.

Among the ceremonies in the life of a Hindu are some important ones that mark the chief stages of his life ; in old days these were numerous, ten standing out as the chief, but of these ten, only some are now practised. Seven of the Samskâras relate to infantile life and early childhood. Of these seven, the sixth, Annaprâsanam, the first feeding with solid food, is universally observed ; and the seventh, Chudâkaraṇam—the tonsure, and with it the piercing of the ears—is performed almost universally. Then comes the important eighth Samskâra, the Upanayana, the leading of the boy to the Guru who gives him the sacred thread, and teaches him the Gâyatrî, this initiation making him a Dvija, twice-born.

The Upanayana is the beginning of the student stage of life, during which Brahmacharya, entire celibacy, is enjoined, and the duty of the lad is to study diligently. This stage is closed by the formal return home, the Samâvartanam, after which he is ready to enter the second stage of life, that of the householder, the Gṛihaṣṭha ; the tenth Samskâra, Vivâha, marriage, marking his entry into manhood and its responsibilities. In modern India these wholesome rules have fallen into disuse, though the Upanayana and Vivâha Samskâras are maintained as ceremonies. Marriage is incongruously thrust into the midst of the student life, and the duties of manhood and boyhood are mixed up to the injury of both. May the ancient rule be speedily revived.

एकः शब्दः सुप्रयुक्तः स्वर्गे लोके कामधुग्भवति । *

“One sound, well-uttered, becometh as the cow of plenty in the Svarga-world.”

मंत्रो हीनः स्वरतो वर्णतो वा

मिथ्या प्रयुक्तो न तमर्थमाह ।

स वाग्ज्रो यजमानं हिनस्ति

यथेन्द्रशत्रुः स्वरतोऽपराधात् ॥ †

“The manṭra defective in Svāra (inflection) or Varna (letter or colour) is uttered falsely and declareth not the true meaning. That lightning-word slayeth the performer himself as (the word) ‘Indra-Shaṭru’ for fault of Svāra (slew Vṛiṭṭra, the performer of the sacrifice, and the enemy of Indra, instead of slaying Indra, the enemy of Vṛiṭṭra, as intended).

वैदिकैः कर्माभिः पुण्यैर्निषेकादिर्द्विजन्मनाम् ।

कार्यः शरीरसंस्कारः पावनः प्रेत्य चेह च ॥ ‡

“With sacred Vaidika rites should be performed the Samskâras of the body, namely, Niṣheka and the rest, of the twice-born, which purify here and hereafter.”

चित्रकर्म यथाऽनेकैरागैरुन्मलित्यते यनैः ।

ब्राह्मण्यमपि तद्वत्स्यात्संस्कारैर्विधिपूर्वकैः ॥ §

* Paṭañjali's Mahābhāṣya, vi, i—84.

† Pāṇini-Shikshā, 52. ‡ Manusmṛiti, ii—26.

§ Angirā quoted in Pārāshara-Grihya-Sūtra, Harihara bhāṣya, p. 260. (II. i.)

“As the outline of a picture is lighted up slowly with (the filling in of) many colours, even so is Brâhmanya with scriptural Samskâras.”

गर्भाधानं पुंसवनं सीमतो जातकर्म च ।
नामक्रिया निष्क्रमोऽन्नप्राशनं वपनक्रिया ॥
कर्णवधो व्रतादेशो वेदारम्भक्रियावीधिः ।
केशांतः स्नानमुद्वाहो विवाहाग्निपरिग्रहः ॥
त्रेताग्निसंग्रहश्चैव संस्काराः षोडश स्मृताः । *

* Vyâsa-Smyiti quoted in Pârâshara Grihya-Sûtra, p. 269.

CHAPTER II.

SHRADDHA.

SHRÂDDHA is the name of the ceremonies performed to help the Jîva, who has put off his visible body in death, by those who remain in this world. The Jîva that has put off his visible body is called a Preta, and the part of the Shrâddha performed to help him at this stage is called the Preta-kriyâ. The visible body, the Annamayakosha, is carried to the burning-ground that it may be dissolved into its constituents as quickly as possible ; the ashes are gathered together on the third day, and are thrown into running water, preferably into a sacred stream. When the Annamayakosha is destroyed, the Prâṇamayakosha rapidly disperses, and this dispersal is quickened by some of the mantras used at the cremation. Burning is the best way of destroying a dead body, and this destruction is important both for the departed Jîva and for those left behind ; so long as it remains undissolved, the Prâṇamayakosha hangs round it, in consequence of the magnetic attraction between them, and the Jîva is thus linked to the earth, which is bad for him ; on the other hand, a slowly decaying body in the ground, as in burial, sends out poisonous gases, and this is bad for those remaining behind.

The Shrâddhas performed after the burning help in a re-arrangement of the materials of the Manomayakosha, partly by the magnetic influences of the objects used, and partly by the vibrations set up by the mantras. After a certain time, the Sapindikarâṇa ceremony is performed, which helps the Jîva to pass from Pretaloka, to Piṭṛiloka, and he is then enrolled among the Piṭṛis, or the ancestors living in the subtler regions of Bhuvanloka. Seven generations, one in Bhûrloka and six in Bhuvanloka, can affect each other. When the Jîva passes on into Svarga, he has no further need of the help furnished by Shrâddha.

देशे काले च पात्रे च श्रद्धया विधिना च यत् ।

पितृनुद्दिश्य विप्रेभ्यो दानं श्राद्धमुदाहृतम् ॥ *

“Gifts to deserving Brâhmaṇas for the sake of benefit to the Piṭṛis, in the proper times and places and with faith, are known as Shrâddha.”

कुर्यादहरहः श्राद्धमन्नाद्येनोदकेन च ।

पयोमूत्रफलैर्वापि पितृभ्यः प्रीतिमावहन् ॥†

“Shrâddha should be offered to the Piṭṛis, day by day, with corn and water, or even roots and

* Brahmândâ Purâṇa. † Mâṇusmṛiti, iii—203.

fruits and water, bringing them satisfaction.”

पंचभ्य एव मात्राभ्यः प्रेत्य दुष्कृतिनां नृणाम् ।

शरीरं यातनार्थीयमन्यदुत्पद्यते ध्रुवम् ॥

तेनानुभूय ता यामीः शरीरेणेह यातनाः ।

तास्वेव भूतमात्रासु प्रलीयन्ते विभागशः ॥

यद्याचरति धर्मं स प्रायशोऽधर्ममल्पशः ।

तैरेव चावृतो भूतैः स्वर्गं सुखमुपाश्नुते ॥ *

“Out of the five elements a (subtler but) firm body is born (as seeth) for sinful Jîvas (after death), that they may suffer punishment therein.

“After the suffering of the punishments awarded by Yama, in that body (the body) dissolves again into the elements.

“If (the Jîva) has done more Dharma and little Adharma, he goes on to Svarga and enjoys happiness there enclosed in (another body composed of) the same elements.”

चितामोक्षप्रभृति च प्रेतत्वमुपजायते । †

“After the cremation is completed (the Jîva) becomes a Preta.”

वर्षं यावत् खगश्चेष्ट ! मार्गं गच्छति मानवः ।

ततः पितृगणैः सार्धं पितृलोकं स गच्छति ॥

दत्तैः षोडशभिः श्राद्धैः पितृभिः सह मोदते ।

पितुः पुत्रेण कर्तव्यं सर्पिंडीकरणं सदा ॥ ‡

* Manusmriti, xii, 16, 17, 20. † Garuḍa Purāna, II, १-36.

‡ Ibid, II, xvi-6, 7, 20.

“The Jīva remains on the path (i. e., the Preṭa-loka) for a year, O best of birds ; then he passes on into the Piṭri-loka (and dwells) with the Piṭris.

“By the offering of the sixteen Shrâddhas he is helped to dwell in joy with the Piṭris. Therefore should the son ever perform the Sapindikarâṇa rites for the father.”

CHAPTER III.

SHAUCHAM.

SHAUCHAM, or Shaucha, consists of the rules laid down for keeping bodily purity, and thus ensuring physical health and strength. Disease is a sign that some law of nature has been disregarded, and the Rishis—knowing that the laws of nature are the laws of God, the expression of His being, and that the Jiva is a portion of God enveloped in matter—have treated obedience to the laws of nature as a religious duty.

The visible body, with its invisible double, the Prâṇamayakosha, being made of physical materials, it is necessary to use physical means to make them pure, and to keep them pure, and we need to understand them in order to do this.

The visible body, the Annamayakosha, is composed of particles drawn from the food we eat, the liquids we drink, the air we breathe, and from a constant rain of minute particles, too tiny for us to see, that falls upon us continually from the people and the things around us. This last statement may sound a little strange, but it is true. Our bodies are not made of dead matter, for there is no such thing as dead matter.* Matter is made of tiny living things called atoms, and of other tiny living things that are collections of atoms. A grain of dust is a collection of myriads upon myriads of tiny living creatures, and there are grades upon grades of these minute lives, till we come to what are called microbes, that can be seen with the help of microscopes. Now these microbes and the other smaller lives are all floating about in the air, and our bodies and all things are made up of these. Stones, plants, animals, human beings and all the manufactured things round us, houses, furniture, clothes are constantly giving off clouds of these particles. Everything near us, and still more, everything we touch, gives us some of its particles and we give it some of ours. If we are to be healthy, we must only take into our bodies pure particles and drive away impure ones. The rules of Shaucha are intended to show us how to do this.

The food we eat must be pure. Now all things are becoming more alive, or are getting nearer death ; are being built up, or are being destroyed.

* See p. 67. for what is meant by lifeless matter. A body, as a whole, is said to be "dead" when the Jiva has left it, although the particles of it are alive. As this "dead body" decays, the living particles are set free.

Pure food is becoming more alive, has life in it which is unfolding : its next natural stage is one of "higher integration," that is, of greater complexity. Fresh leaves and fruits, grains and roots, are full of life which is unfolding ; we take that life into our bodies, and it builds them up. These things become impure if they are stale, for the life is then departing, they are on the way to death. All flesh is more or less impure, because its indwelling life has been driven from it, and it is ready to decay ; its next natural stage is one of "disintegration," that is, of breaking up into simpler forms ; the body built by it is more liable to disease than the body built of plant-products, wounds heal less quickly, and fevers run higher.

Of liquids, pure water is necessary to health, and infusions of herbs in it, such as tea, coffee and cocoa, taken in moderation, are harmless and often useful. Milk is at once food and drink of the purest kind. Every form of drink into which alcohol enters is impure, and most harmful to the body. It is fermented liquor, that is liquor in which decomposition has begun, and it injures the tissues of the body, and is a distinct poison to the brain. Especially it is mischievous in a hot climate, bringing about premature decay and early death. So also are drinks impure into which enter such stupefying drugs as Indian hemp—the popular but health destroying bhâng.

Pure air is as necessary to health as pure food and drink. As we breathe, we send out a gas, called carbon dioxide, which is stupefying, and if we shut ourselves into a confined space, all the air in it becomes laden with this, and unfit to breathe. Further the breath carries out with it waste particles from the interior of the body, and unless the fresh air blows these away, they are breathed in again into our lungs and those of others, and are poisonous in their effects.

We must not only build up our bodies out of clean materials, but we must keep the surface of the body clean by frequent washing and bathing. The whole body must be bathed, at least once everyday, and well rubbed in bathing, so that all loose particles may be washed away, and the skin kept clean and fresh. Any part of the body that becomes soiled, feet, hands, etc., should be washed and washing before and after food must never be omitted. To eat with unwashed hands is to run the risk of soiling the food with dust and other injurious particles, and the washing after food is obviously imperative. The garments next the body should also be washed daily.

The Hindu, ever accustomed to look at the outer world as the symbol of the inner, has joined to his outer ablutions the idea of inner purification. As he washes the outer body, he repeats mantras for the purifying of the inner bodies, and thus weaves his religion into the commonest incidents of daily life.

Students will now see why the Rishis were so particular about cleanliness. A person with a dirty body, or with dirty clothes, fills the air round him with impure particles, and poisons the people round him. We must be clean, not only for our own sakes, but for the sake of those around us. A dirty person, dirty clothes, dirty houses, are centres of poison, public dangers.

The purity of the Prāṇamayakosha depends on the magnetic currents in it. It is quickly affected by the magnetic properties of surrounding objects, and we have therefore to be careful on this point also. Thus some plant-products and plants, while harmless to the Annamayakosha, are very injurious to the Prāṇamayakosha, such as onions and garlic. Their magnetism is worse than that of flesh. This kosha is also most seriously affected by alcoholic emanations, and by the Prāṇamayakoshas of others.

What is still more important is that it is affected by its own Manomayakosha and, through it, by those of others. Hence the dangers of bad company. Now the purity of the Manomayakosha depends on the purity of its owner's thoughts and desires, and herein lies the most fertile source of impurity in the Annamaya and Prâṇamayakoṣhas. These two physical koshas cannot be pure and healthy if the thoughts and desires are impure. A man may observe the rules of Shaucha to the last point of strictness, but if he be proud, passionate, harsh, vain, suspicious, he is pouring impurity into these koshas faster than any rules can wash it out. In the eyes of the R̥ishis and the Devas such a one is ever ashuchi.

दूरादावसथान्मूत्रं दूरात् पादावसेचनम् ।

उच्छिष्टान्नं निषेकं च दूरादेव समाचरेत् ॥ *

“ Far from his dwelling let him remove excrement, far the water used for washing his feet, far the leavings of food, and bath water.”

आचस्य प्रयतो नित्यमुभे संध्ये समाहितः ।

शुचौ देशे जपञ्जप्यमुपासीत यथाविधि ॥ †

“ Being purified by sipping water, he shall always daily worship in the two twilights with a

* Manusmṛiti, vi—151.

† Ibid, ii—222.

collected mind, in a pure place, performing Japa according to rule."

उपस्पृश्य द्विजो नित्यमन्नमद्यात्समाहितः ।

भुक्त्वा चोपस्पृशेत्सम्यग्द्विः खानि च संस्पृशेत् ॥ *

"Having washed, the twice-born should eat food always with a collected mind; having eaten, let him rinse well and sprinkle the sense-organs with water."

ज्ञानं तपोऽग्निराहारो मृन्मनो वार्युपाञ्जनम् ।

वायुः कर्मार्ककालौ च शुद्धेः कर्तृणि देहिनाम् ॥ †

"Wisdom, austerity, fire, food, earth, mind, water, plastering, wind, rites, the sun and time are the purifiers of bodies."

अद्भिर्गात्राणि शुध्यन्ति मनः सत्येन शुध्यति ।

विद्यातपोभ्यां भूतात्मा बुद्धिज्ञानेन शुध्यति ॥ ‡

"The body is purified by water, the mind by truth, the soul by knowledge and austerity, the reason by wisdom."

नहि ज्ञानेन सदृशं पवित्रमिह विद्यते । §

"Verily there is no purifier in this world like wisdom."

अपि चेत्सुदुराचारो भजते मामनन्यभाक् ।

साधुरेव स मंतव्यः सम्यग्व्यवसितो हि सः ॥

* Ibid., ii—53. † Ibid., v—105. ‡ Manusmṛiti, v—109.

§ Bhāgavad-Gītā, iv—38.

क्षिप्रं भवति धर्मात्मा शश्वच्छान्तिं निगच्छति ।
कौंतेय प्रतिजानीहि न मे भक्तः प्रणश्यति ॥ *

“Even if the most sinful worship Me with undivided heart, he too must be accounted righteous, for he hath rightly resolved ;

“Speedily he becometh dutiful and goeth to everlasting peace. Know thou, O Kaunteya, that my devotee perisheth never.”

* Ibid, ix, 30—31.

CHAPTER IV.

THE FIVE DAILY SACRIFICES.

WE have seen that there exists a law of Yajña, of Sacrifice, and that man's glory is to voluntarily work with it. We have now to see how the Sanâtana Dharma trained its followers to this end.

We may pass over, for the present, the numerous sacrifices of various kinds laid down in the sacred books, and concern ourselves only with the "Great sacrifices" to be offered every day. These are:—

The Sacrifice to Rîshi or Vedas.

The Sacrifice to Devas.

The Sacrifice to Pitris.

The Sacrifice to Men.

The Sacrifice to Bhûtas.

Each of these has an outer form and inner meaning, and the latter leads the sacrificer on to the full life of sacrifice. Let us try to understand both.

The outer sacrifice to the Rîshis, or Vedas, is study and teaching. Every day a man should study some sacred book, and thus gradually acquire the knowledge without which he cannot rightly understand himself, his position and his duties. And he should ever be ready to share this knowledge with those more ignorant than himself : hence Manu, in describing this sacrifice, calls it teaching*. A boy should daily offer this sacrifice, reading and carefully thinking over some shlokas from the Bhâgavad-Gîtâ, the Anugîtâ, Hamsa Gîtâ or other sacred work. The carefulness and closeness of the thought is more important than the amount read. The inner meaning is that all study should be a sacrifice, learning in order that we may teach.

The outer sacrifice to the Devas is the Homa, the recognition of all we owe to the kindly ministry and protection of this active Intelligences working in nature, and the repayment of it by giving for their service a share of our possessions. The inner meaning is the realisation of our relations with the super-physical worlds, and of the inter-dependence of the worlds. We must learn to be in harmony with nature, in accord with all that lives.

The outer sacrifice to the Pitris is the Ṭarpan or offering of water, to the older generations of our family, to our ancestors. The inner meaning is the recognition of the great debt we owe to the past,

* See Manusmriti, iii—70.

to the generations who occupied the earth before us, and who toiled and laboured that they might hand it on, improved, and enriched, to us, their posterity. No man is truly human who does not recognise what he owes to the past, his debt to the ancestors.

The outer sacrifice to Men is hospitality : every day a true Aryan should feed some one poorer than himself. The inner meaning is the duty of serving and helping humanity, of feeding the hungry, clothing the naked, sheltering the homeless, comforting the sad. Those who are rich are the stewards of the poor.

The outer sacrifice to Bhûtas, to creatures, is the putting of a little food on the ground, before beginning the meal, for the invisible lower entities around us, and the placing of the remains of the meal in a suitable place for vagrant men and animals. The inner meaning is the duty of caring for those who are beneath us in the human and in the lower kingdoms, the recognition of our debt to them for their services to us, and the practice of kindness and consideration towards them.

Thus the five great daily sacrifices teach man his relations, with all around him, with his superiors, his equals, and his inferiors. They establish the harmonious relations on which the happiness and prosperity of families and of nations depend. They turn the wheel of life in accord with the will of Îshvara, and so help on the evolution of the worlds. They teach each individual that he is not an isolated unit, but a part of a great whole, a cell in a vast body : and that his happiness and progress, therefore, can only be secure if they subserve the general happiness, and conduce to the general progress.

अध्यापनं ब्रह्मयज्ञः पितृयज्ञस्तु तर्पणम् ।
होमो दैवो बलिर्भौतो नृयज्ञोऽतिथिपूजनम् ॥*

“Teaching is the Brahma-sacrifice, Târpaṇa is the Pitri-sacrifice, Homa (the offering into the fire) is the Deva-sacrifice, Bali (food) is the Bhûta-sacrifice, hospitality to guests the Manuṣhya-sacrifice.”

स्वाध्याये नित्ययुक्तः स्यादैवे चैवेह कर्मणि ।
दैवे कर्मणि युक्तो हि विभर्तीदं चराचरम् ॥†

“Let a man ever engage in Veda-study, and in the rites of the Devas ; engaged in the rites of the Devas he supporteth the movable and immovable kingdoms.”

* Manusmṛiti, iii—70.

† Ibid, iii—80, 81.

ऋषयः पितरो देवा भूतान्यतिथयस्तथा ।
 आशासते कुटुम्बिभ्यस्तेभ्यः कार्यं विजानता ॥
 स्वाध्यायेनार्चयेतर्षीन् होमैर्देवान्यथाविधि ।
 पितृञ्छ्राद्धेन नृनञ्चैर्भूतानि बलिकर्मणा ॥ *

“The R̥ishis, the Piṭris, the Devas, the Bhūtas, and guests expect (help) from the householders ; hence he who knoweth should give unto them.

“Let him worship, according to the rule, the R̥ishis with Veda-study, the Devas with Homa, the Piṭris with Shrāddha, men with food, and the Bhūtas with Bali.”

* Ibid., iii—75.

CHAPTER V.

WORSHIP.

THE performance of the five daily sacrifices by man as an inter-dependent part of a universe, does not, however, completely satisfy the longings of the truly religious man. He longs to come into conscious relations with the Lord of the Universe, with Îshvara, with the great Life of which his own is a part. This need of man finds its satisfaction in worship. When Vyâsa, master of the final truth of Para-Brahma and ever working for the good of all beings, after he had written even the Mahâbhârata and the Brahma-sûtras for the instruction of men, still found not peace of mind, Nârada counselled him to sing the praise of Îshvara ; and this he did in the Vishnu-Bhâgavata, winning thereby the peace he did not gain before.*

Worship is the expression of love to the Supreme, of reverence towards Him, of aspiration to reach Him in conscious communion, of longing to be united with him, to feel the unity of the individual self with the supreme Self. It may take the form of praise of His Perfection, of prayer rooted in a sense of imperfection, of appeal to His Love, of recognition of His Power, of meditation on His Nature, of intense longing for His Unveiling—and many another, according to the temperament and the stage of evolution of the worshipper. But whether in the peasant or in the philosopher, it is the expression of the longing after Brahman ; the expression differs with the emotional and intellectual evolution, but the root-longing is the same.

* Vishnu-Bhâgavata, I, iv—v.

The All, the Unconditioned, is never an Object of worship. Attributes are needed for worship, on which the mind can be fixed, by which the emotions can be stirred. The Saguna Brahman, Îshvara, is the Object of worship, whom all prayers and praises reach, to whom all contemplation is directed. He may be adored as Shiva or Viṣṇu, as Mahâdeva or Nârâyana, as Durgâ or Lakṣhmi, as Gaṇeṣha, Indra, Agni, Sarasvatî, or as an Avatâra—Râma, or Kṛiṣṇa, or Buddha ; but under whatever name and form, it is Îshvara who is worshipped.

This explains a matter that often puzzles boys, why sometimes Shiva, sometimes Viṣṇu, is spoken of as the Supreme Being, why one Purâna exalts One and another exalts Another. All these are Forms ; and Îṣhvara is One. The worshipper is worshipping Îṣhvara, and is thinking of Îṣhvara, under the Form which he loves best. He is not worshipping the Form, but the Lord in the Form—as a wife loves her husband, not the clothes he wears, though even those may be dear for the sake of the wearer. The worshipper worships the Love, the Beauty, the Power of Îṣhvara, as revealed in some one of His Divine Forms. We can only grasp a little, being small, but we grasp in our worship parts of the one Lord.

This is why the quarrels of different religions, and of different sects in the same religion, are so foolish and so ignorant. All are worshipping the same Îṣhvara, and the differences are only differences of names, due to differences in the worshippers, not in the Object of worship.

Pûjâ is the general simple form of worship. A picture or image is used, mantras are recited, flowers are offered, water is poured out, and in these outer forms the inner love finds expression, and then rises beyond the forms to the Object thus served. The Form selected as representing the Object is sometimes the family Deva or Devî, and sometimes is the Iṣhtaḍeva, the Form chosen by the worshipper himself, or by his Guru for him.

Upâsanâ is a term that includes many forms of worship, including meditation, and the daily Sandhyâ, which should be performed by all followers of the Sanâṭana Dharma. There are two forms of Sandhyâ, the Vaidika and the Tānṭrika, and a boy should perform the Sandhyâ according to his caste and family customs. He learns it from a properly qualified instructor, and should then practise it daily. Meditation, in its definite stages, belongs to manhood rather than to boyhood.

नैष्कर्म्यमप्यच्युतभाववर्जितं न शोभते ज्ञानमलं निरञ्जनम् ।
कुतः पुनः शश्वदभद्रमीश्वरे न चार्पितं कर्म यदप्यकारणम् ॥ *

“Even the highest and most stainless knowledge, even perfect unselfishness in actions, shine not if uninspired by devotion to the Imperishable. How then shall acts (bring peace) which (aim at fruit and) are not pure, or even those that are performed without desire, if they are not offered up to Îshvara ?”

ये त्वत्तरमनिर्देश्यमव्यक्तं पर्युपासते ।

... ..
ते प्राप्नुवन्ति मामेव सर्वभूतहिते रताः ॥

क्लेशोऽधिकतरस्तेषामव्यक्तासक्तचेतसाम् ।

अव्यक्ता हि गतिर्दुःखं देहवद्भिरवाप्यते ॥

ये तु सर्वाणि कर्माणि मयि संन्यस्य मत्पराः ।
अनन्येनैव योगेन मां ध्यायन्त उपासते ॥
तेषामहं समुद्धर्ता मृत्युसंसारसागरात् ।
भवामि न चिरात्पार्थ ! मय्यावेशितचेतसाम् ॥ *

“They who worship the Indestructible, the Ineffable, the Unmanifested.....ever working for the welfare of all creatures, these all come to me.

“The difficulty of those whose minds are set on the Unmanifested is greater; for the path of the Unmanifested is hard for the embodied to reach.

“Those verily who, renouncing all actions in Me and intent on Me, worship, meditating on Me with whole-hearted Yoga,

“Those I speedily lift up from the ocean of death and existence, O Pārṭha, their minds being fixed on me.”

ईश्वरः सर्वभूतानां हृद्देशेऽर्जुन ! तिष्ठति ।
भ्रामयन्सर्वभूतानि यन्त्रारूढानि मायया ॥
तमेव शरणं गच्छ सर्वभावेन भारत ।

तत्प्रसादात्परां शान्तिं स्थानं प्राप्स्यसि शाश्वतम् ॥ †

“The Lord dwelleth in the hearts of all beings, O Arjuna, causing all beings to revolve by His illusive power, as though mounted on a wheel.

“Flee unto Him for shelter with all thy being, O Bhāraṭa; by His grace thou shalt obtain

* Bhāgavad-Gīta, xii, 3-7

† Ibid, xviii, 61—62.

suprem peace and the everlasting dwelling place.”

ये यथा मां प्रपद्यन्ते तांस्तथैव भजाम्यहम् ।

मम वर्त्मानुवर्तन्ते मनुष्याः पार्थ सर्वशः ॥ *

“However men approach Me, even so do I welcome them, for the path men take from every side is mine, O Pārtha.”

यो यो यां यां तनुं भक्तः श्रद्धयार्चितुमिच्छति ।

तस्य तस्याचलां श्रद्धां तामेव विदधाम्यहम् ॥ †

“Any devotee who seeketh to worship with faith any such aspect, I verily bestow the unswerving faith of that man.”

* Bhāgavad-Gītā, iv...11. † Ibid, vii—21

CHAPTER VI.

THE FOUR ÂSHRAMAS.

NATIONS have characteristics, just as have individuals, and among the characteristics of the Hindu nation in old days were order and balance. The Sanâṭana Dharma stamped these characteristics on the people, and thus shaped a very dignified type of man, evenly developed and well balanced. So much are these the characteristics of the true follower of the Sanâṭana Dharma, that Shri Kṛiṣṇa said : "Equilibrium is called Yoga."*

The large view of life taken in the Vedas is the root of these characteristics. All things exist for the sake of the Âtmâ, the Self, and by his will. They exist merely to give him the experiences he desires to pass through. He wills to unfold his powers in the lower worlds, and to become the self-conscious Ruler of the outer realms of denser matter, as he is ever the Inner Ruler, Immortal. He is not in haste, being Eternal, and knows it best to take each experience in order, and thus to unfold symmetrically and harmoniously. This order is imposed by Îshvara, the Supreme Self, on the lower kingdoms of our world ; the seed, the root, the stem, the leaves, the flower, the fruit succeed each other in due order, and each has its place and its beauty in its season ; so also He imposes the stages of human life—infancy, childhood, youth, maturity, old age ; this sequence man cannot escape from nor change ; but the unfolding Jîvâtma in man, clouded by the matter he has not yet mastered, pushes irregularly in various directions, led by Manaḥ dominated by Kâma, grasping at the things of one stage while yet in another, and so hindering his due evolution in each. The child would be a youth, the youth a man ; the old man grasps backward at the joys of youth ; thus life is robbed of its serenity and thereby of half its usefulness.

* Bhâgavad-Gitâ, ii-48.

In order to counteract this mistaken eagerness and lack of balanced order, the great Rîshis marked out for the eldest-born family of the Âryan race the definite stages in the life of the individual from birth to death, and the definite stages in the life of the Jîvâtma in his long evolution through myriads of births and deaths. In each case these stages are four ; in the life between one birth and one death they are called Âshramas, resting-places dwellingings : in the life passing through countless, births and deaths they are called Varṇas, colours, or castes.

We are concerned here with the Âshramas. As said, these stages are four: Brahmacharya, the stage of studentship; Gârhasṭhya, the stage of householdership; Vânaprastha, the stage of forest-dwelling, i. e., seclusion; Sannyâsa, the stage of total renunciation, i. e., asceticism.*

In none of these stages must the man grasp at the special duties of the other three; the student must not be a householder, a recluse, or an ascetic; the householder must not be a celibate, a recluse, or an ascetic; the recluse must not seek again the joys of the household; nor must the ascetic long after the quiet attachments of the recluse. Each stage has its own duties and its own pleasures. Discharged and enjoyed each in its own stage, they lead to the orderly unfolding of the Jivâtma; when the Âshramas are disregarded, his evolution is delayed.

Now in modern days the Âshramas cannot be exactly lived according to the details of the ancient rules, the conditions having changed so much; but if we get a clear idea of the fundamental duties of each, we shall still be able to shape the life to an orderly course of development.

* See Manuśruti, vi—87.

The life of the student begins with the Upanayana ceremony, his "second birth," and from that time forward certain virtues must be striven for by the boy. He must be hardy and simple in his habits ; these virtues make his body strong and healthy ; he acquires them by rising early, bathing, eating moderately of plain food, taking plenty of exercise, not allowing himself to lounge luxuriously and idly. Contrast a boy who lives in this way with one who lies late in bed, who over-eats himself on sweetmeats and rich dishes, who takes little exercise, and spends much of his time lying on soft pillows. The one is alert, strong, hard-muscled, vigorous, active, and will be a strong healthy man: the other is heavy, flabby, fat, lazy or too thin and weak, and will soon be diseased and suffering.

The student must also strive for the virtues of industry, obedience, humility and serviceableness ; youth is the preparation-time of life, and industrious study to acquire knowledge is absolutely necessary for useful manhood ; obedience is using the experience of his elders to guide his conduct, and saves him many a trouble in early life, and only he who knows how to obey is fit to rule hereafter ; humility lifts him quickly, as all are willing to share what they have with the humble ; and serviceableness in the narrow circle of the family and the school builds up the nature that will serve humanity.

The student must be chaste in thought and act, a celibate in mind and body. He must guard his thoughts, for the boy who does not think impurity will not act impurity. He should not think of sex, nor yield to day-dreaming. Only the pure in thought and in body can pass unstained into happy household life. The very name of the student is the Brahmachâri, which has come now to mean almost exclusively the celibate. Premature age, weakness, disease, race-decay, spring from student-marriage, against the ancient law.

The household stage is entered at marriage, when the youth has completed his school and college career, and is ready to take up the duties and responsibilities of household life. Of all the Âshramas this is the most important, for it supports all the others.* The welfare alike of the family and of the nation depends on the householder, and their happiness and prosperity are in his hands. A good husband, a good father, a good master, a good citizen, is the noblest of men. The home is the school of unselfishness, compassion, tenderness, temperance, purity, helpfulness, prudence, industry, right judgment, charity. The qualities that make the good householder, when shown to his own circle in house and State, are the qualities that make the Sage and the Saint when shown to all. The degradation of the ideal of the householder has made modern life petty and sordid, and the half entrance into it and the confusion of its duties with those of the student, caused by the modern evil of student-marriage has deprived the entry into it of its ancient solemnity and dignity. The plucking and eating of unripe fruit deprives the eater of its sweetness.

* See Manusmriti, iii, 77, and 89—90.

Certain well-born but thoughtless Brâhmaṇa youths abandoning their homes before due time, went into the forests to lead a life of asceticism. Indra pitied them, and, assuming the form of a golden bird, taught them: "Follow the household life! It is the field for the cultivation of virtues. It is sacred. Worship of the Devas, study, repayment of the debt to the pitris by the rearing of a family and helping on new lives as we have been reared and helped—these are the austerest of penances. Bear the heavy burthen of the duties of the household ! They that run away from their work fall into sin. To eat the remnant of the food left after helping the needy is to eat the true remnant of sacrifice.*

When the householder sees his sons able to bear the full burden of his duties, when the signs of age appear, and his children's children are round him, the time has come for him and his wife to surrender the headship of the home, and to retire from active life and worldly labour. A quiet and somewhat secluded life, given to study, to self-sacrifice for the good of others, to the counselling of the younger, such should be the third Âshrama in our modern days.

Finally in old age a man may rightly enter the fourth Âshrama, that of the ascetic, passing his last days in meditation and worship, till he enters willingly the life beyond death, to reap the fruits of a well spent earthly life, hereafter to return for further evolution.

ब्रह्मचारी गृहस्थश्च वानप्रस्थी यतिस्तथा ।

एते गृहस्थप्रभवाश्चत्वारः पृथगाश्रमाः ॥ †

“The student, the householder, the forest-dweller, the ascetic—these, the four separate orders, spring from the householder.”

* Mahâbhâratam, Shânti Parva—xi.

† Manusmriti, vi—37.

वेदानधीत्य वेदौ वा वेदं वापि यथाक्रमम् ।
 अविप्लुतब्रह्मचर्यो गृहस्थाश्रममावसेत् ॥
 गृहस्थस्तु यदा पश्येद्वलीपलितमात्मनः ।
 अपत्यस्य तथापत्यं तदारण्यं समाश्रयेत् ॥
 वनेषु तु विहृत्यैवं तृतीयं भागमायुषः ।
 चतुर्थमायुषो भागं त्यक्त्वा संगान् परिव्रजेत् ॥ *

“ Having studied the Vedas, or two Vedas, or even one Veda, in due order, without violating celibacy, let him enter the household-order.

“ When the householder sees wrinkles (on his skin), whiteness (in his hair), and the progeny of his progeny, then let him retire to the forest.

“ Having passed the third portion of his life in the forest, let him abandon all attachments and wander (as an ascetic) the fourth portion of his life. ”

अनधीत्य द्विजो वेदाननुत्पाद्य तथा प्रजाम् ।
 अनिष्टा चैव यज्ञैश्च मोक्षमिच्छन् व्रजत्यधः ॥ †

“ A twice-born man who seeketh Moksha without having studied the Vedas, without having produced offspring, and without having offered sacrifices, goeth downwards. ”

अनारोग्यमनायुष्यमस्वर्ग्यं चातिभोजनम् ।
 अपुण्यं लोकविद्विष्टं तस्मात्तत्परिवर्जयेत् ॥ ‡

“ Over-eating is against health, long life, (the

* Idid. iii—2, and vi, 2—33. † Manusmriti, vi—37. ‡ Ibid, ii—57.

attainment of) heaven and merit, and is disapproved by the world; therefore let it be avoided.”

नोदितो गुरुणा नित्यमप्रणोदित एव वा । कुर्याद्ध्ययने यत्नमाचार्यस्य हितेषु च ।

... ..
 वर्जयेन्मधु मांसं च गंधं माल्यं रसान्स्त्रियः ।
 शुक्तानि चैव सर्वाणि प्राणिनां चैव हिंसनम् ॥
 कामं क्रोधं च लोभं च नर्तनं गीतवादनम् ।
 द्यतं च जनवादं च परिवादं तथानृतम् ॥

... ..
 एकः शयीत सर्वत्र न रेतः स्कंदयेत् क्वचित् ।
 कामाद्धि स्कंदयन् रेतो हिनस्ति व्रतमात्मनः ॥ *

“Directed or not directed by his teacher, let the student ever engage in study, and in doing services to his preceptor.

“ Let the student refrain from wine, meat, perfumes, garlands, tasty and savoury dishes, women, acids, and injury to sentient creatures;.....

“ From lust, anger and greed, dancing, singing, and playing on musical instruments, from dice-playing, gossip, slander and from untruth;.....

“ Let the student always sleep alone, and let him not waste his seed; he who from lust wasteth his seed, destroyeth his vow. ”

* Manusmriti. ii, 191, 177—180.

यथा वायुं समाश्रित्य सर्वे जीवन्ति जन्तवः ।

तथा गृहस्थमाश्रित्य वर्तन्त इतराश्रमाः ॥

सर्वेषामपि चैतेषां वेदश्रुतिविधानतः ।

गृहस्थ उच्यते श्रेष्ठः स त्रिनेतान् विभर्ति हि ॥

यथा नदीनदाः सर्वे समुद्रे यान्ति संस्थितिम् ।

तथैवाश्रमिणः सर्वे गृहस्थे यान्ति संस्थितिम् ॥ *

“ As all creatures live supported by the air, so the other orders exist supported by the householder.

“ Of all these (Āshramas), by the declaration of the Veda-scripture, the householder is the highest; he verily supporteth the other three.

“ As all streams and rivers flow to rest in the ocean, so all the Āshramas flow to rest in the householder. ”

अनाश्रितः कर्मफलं कार्यं कर्म करोति यः ।

स संन्यासी स योगी च न निरग्निर्न चाक्रियः ॥ †

“ He that performeth such action as in duty, independently of the fruit of action, he is a Sannyâsî, he is a Yogî, not he that is without fire and without rites.

* Ibid, iii, 77, 89—90 † Bāgarad-Gītā, vi—1.

CHAPTER VII.

THE FOUR CASTES.

IN the long pilgrimage of the Jivâtmâ through myriads of births, already referred to, there are four distinctly marked stages, called of old Varṇas, or colours, and recognised in the social polity laid down by Manu as distinct social classes, or castes.

These stages are universal, all Jivâtmâs passing through them ; the peculiarity of the Sanâṭana Dharma is that it has made them the framework of its social polity. In the early days the outer caste coincided with the stages : Jivâtmâs at each stage were born into bodies belonging to that stage, and the whole of society was therefore contented and progressive. But in these later days, as Arjuna truly foresaw in his distress on Kurukṣhetra, varṇasankara, caste-confusion, has come on Âryâvartâ and her whole peninsula. Jivâtmâs at each stage are being born into bodies of other stages, and hence, as surely as content and progress arose out of the harmony of elder days, do disorder and stagnation arise out of the disharmony of the present. How a better state of things may be brought about is a question for men to discuss and resolve, not for inexperienced boys. What we need here is to understand the meaning of caste.

We have said there are four stages.

The first is that which includes the infancy, childhood and youth of the Jîvâtma ; he is unfolding youthful virtues, developing obedience, serviceableness, patience ; he has few responsibilities ; his duties may be summed up in the word, Service. Where there is no caste-confusion, such young Jîvâtmas are born only into the lower social stratum ; they are labourers, artisans, servants, manual workers of every kind. In the social polity of the Sanâţana Dharma, such Jîvâtmas were born into the caste of Shûdras. In these days of caste-confusion, such young Jîvâtmas, whether born into the Shûdra caste in India, or into the corresponding class elsewhere, are happy, contented and useful ; but where, as often happens nowadays, they are born into higher castes, or classes, they do much harm to their surroundings by their incapacity to discharge higher duties, and to bear the weight of higher responsibilities. So also difficulties arise when older Jîvâtmas are born into the lower bodies, and fret against their environment, are discontented and rebellious. Of course a really advanced Jivâtṁâ is content in any body, but the mediocre Jivâtṁâs quite naturally and inevitably fight against uncongenial surroundings, and their restlessness is used by Îshvara to help on evolution and to bring about necessary changes.

The second stage covers the first half of the Jivâtṁâ's manhood, when he is fit to gain wealth, to enjoy it and use it, to organise labour and direct it, to undertake great responsibilities, and administer well accumulated possessions. This includes the commercial class, the great traders, and the organisers of industry, the capitalists, bankers, the managers of large industrial concerns. In the social polity of the Sanâṭana Dharma, such Jivâtṁâs were born into the caste of Vaishyas, and were trained in it gradually to see as aim the common good and the general prosperity, instead of mere personal aggrandisement.

The third stage makes the second half of the Jivâtṁâ's manhood, when his responsibilities and powers widen out to include the nation, and he is called to legislate, to rule, to work unselfishly for the State, and to use his power to protect and to regulate, not to aggrandise himself. This includes kings, judges, legislators, warriors, all who rule and keep order in the State. In the social polity of the Sanâṭana Dharma, such mature Jîvâtâmâs were born into the Kṣhaṭṭriya caste, and bore the burden of kingship and of fighting for the national defence.

The fourth stage embraces the serene age of the Jîvâtâmâ, when earthly things have lost their charm, and he becomes the counsellor and friend and helper of all his youngers. This includes the priests, the counsellors, the teachers of every kind—authors, scientists, poets, philosophers. In the social polity of the Sanâṭana Dharma, such Jîvâtâmâs were born into the caste of Brâhmaṇas, the advanced and unselfish ones who gave much and needed little. Caste-confusion in India has struck this caste most hardly, as the degradation of the higher is always worse than that of the lower. The Shûdra Jîvâtâmâ in the Brâhmaṇa body is the greatest danger to the Sanâṭana Dharma.

Much of the evil has grown from men of each caste grasping at the work of the other castes, and from each thinking more of the rights his caste gives him than of the duties it imposes. The Brâhmaṇa and the Kṣhaṭṭriya have claimed their privileges ardently, and have shrunk from the heavy burdens belonging to their castes. Naturally this attitude has provoked opposition, and antagonisms have replaced mutual service and good-will. Hence caste has become a source of social bitterness, instead of a framework maintaining all in happy order.

At least this much every boy can do towards bringing about a happier state of things : he can diligently practise the virtues characteristic of his caste, and avoid pride, vanity, and grasping at privileges. Let the Shûdra be remarkable for his industry, fidelity and serviceableness ; let the Vaishya be remarkable for his diligence, discretion and charity ; let the Kṣhatriya be remarkable for his courage, generosity and vigour ; let the Brâhmaṇa be remarkable for his patience, purity, learning, truthfulness and self-sacrifice. And it may be that, if the castes thus practise their several Dharmas, caste-confusion may gradually pass away.

ब्राह्मणो ऽस्य मुखमासीद्बाहू राजन्यः कृतः ।

ऊरु तदस्य यद्वैश्याः पद्भ्यां शूद्रो भजायत ॥ *

“The Brâhmaṇa was His mouth ; the Râjanya was made His two arms ; His two thighs the Vaishya ; the Shûdra was born from His two feet.”

सर्वस्यास्य तु सर्गस्य गुप्त्यर्थं स महाद्युतिः ।

मुखबाहूरुपजानां पृथक्कार्यकल्पयत् ॥

* Rigveda, X, xc-12.

अध्यापनमध्ययनं यजनं याजनं तथा ।
 दानं प्रतिग्रहं चैव ब्राह्मणानामकल्पयत् ॥
 प्रजानां रक्षणं दानमिज्याध्ययनमेव च ।
 विषयेष्वप्रसक्तिं च क्षत्रियस्य समादिशत् ॥
 पशूनां रक्षणं दानमिज्याध्ययनमेव च ।
 वणिकूप्यं कुसीदं च वैश्यस्य कृषिमेव च ॥
 एकमेव तु शूद्रस्य प्रभुः कर्म समादिशत् । *
 एतेषामेव वर्णानां शुश्रूषामनसूयया ॥

“He, the Resplendent, for the sake of protecting all this creation, assigned separate karmas to those born of His mouth, arms, thighs and feet.

“Teaching and studying the Veda, sacrificing and also guiding others in offering sacrifices, gifts and receiving of gifts, these He assigned to the Brâhmaṇas.

“The protection of the people, gifts, sacrificing, and study of the Vedas, non-attachment amid the objects of the senses, these He prescribed to the Kṣhatṭriyas.

“The protection of cattle, gifts, sacrificing, and study of the Vedas, commerce, banking, and agriculture, to the Vaishyas.

“The Lord commanded one karma only for the Shûdras, to serve ungrudgingly these other castes.”

*Manusmṛiti, 87—91.

यस्य यत्नक्षणं प्रोक्तं पुंसो वर्णाभिव्यञ्जकम् ।
यदन्यत्रापि दृश्येत तत्र तेनैव विनिर्दिशेत् ॥ *

“What is said as to the marks (of conduct) indicative of a man’s caste, if those marks are found in another, let him be designated by the caste of his marks (and not of his birth).”

न योनिर्नापि संस्कारो न श्रुतं न च सन्ततिः ।
कारणानि द्विजत्वस्य वृत्तमेव तु कारणम् ॥ †

“Not birth, nor Samskâras, nor study of the Vedas, nor ancestry, are the causes of being twice-born. Conduct alone is verily the cause thereof.”

सत्यं दानं क्षमा शीलमानृशंस्यं तपो घृणा ।
दृश्यते यत्र नागेन्द्र स ब्राह्मण इति स्मृतः ॥
शूद्रे तु यद्भवेत्क्षमं द्विजे तच्च न विद्यते ।
नैव शूद्रो भवेच्छूद्रो ब्राह्मणो न च ब्राह्मणः ॥
यत्रैतल्लक्ष्यते सर्वं वृत्तं स ब्राह्मणः स्मृतः ।
यत्र नैतद्भवेत् सर्वं तं शूद्रमिति निर्दिशेत् ॥ ‡

“Truth, charity, forgiveness, good conduct, gentleness, austerity, and mercy, where these are seen, O king of serpents, he is called a Brâhmana.

“If these marks exist in a Shûdra, and not in one twice-born, the Shûdra, is not a Shûdra, nor the Brâhmana a Brhâhmana.

* Vishnu Bhâgarata, VII, ix—35.

† Mahâbhârata, Vana Parva, cccxiii—108.

‡ Ibid, Vana Parva, clxxx, 21, 25—26.

“Where this conduct is shown, O serpent, he is called a Brâhmana ; where this is not, O serpent, he should be regarded as a Shûdra.”

आचारहीनं न पुनन्ति वेदा यद्यप्यधीताः सह षड्भिरङ्गैः ।
छन्दांस्येनं मृत्युकाले त्यजन्ति नीडं शकुन्ता इव जातपक्षाः ॥
आचारहीनस्य तु ब्राह्मणस्य वेदा षडङ्गास्त्वाखिलाः सयज्ञाः ।
कां प्रीतिमुत्पादायितुं समर्था अन्धस्य दारा इव दर्शनीयाः ॥ *

“The Vedas help not the man that hath not righteous ways, even though they be studied together with all the aṅgas. The Chhandas abandon him at the supreme moment of death, even as full-fledged birds their nest.

“To the Brâhmana that is void of righteous ways, the Vedas, even in their entirety, and with all aṅgas and all sacrifices too, can bring no more joy than a wife, lovely to see, can bring unto a blind husband.”

* Vasishtha-Smriti, vi, 3—4.

SANÂṬANA ḌHARMA.

PART III.

ETHICAL TEACHINGS.

CHAPTER I.

ETHICAL SCIENCE, WHAT IT IS.

SCIENCE is a definitely arranged body of knowledge, of facts related to each other. A collection of facts does not make a science; the facts must be systematically arranged in their relations to each other, and the principles underlying these relations must be known, before the collection can be called a science. ETHICAL means that which relates to conduct, to the way in which rational beings should behave towards each other as well as towards other creatures. When, therefore, we speak of Ethical Science, we do not mean a list of virtues and vices, but we mean a definite and systematically arranged series of facts of conduct in their proper relations to each other and of the underlying principles of these relations.

Another word for Ethics is morality, right conduct, and in order to know what is right we have to understand something about man and his surroundings.

The object of morality is to secure the welfare of all beings, and this is done by showing men, through the science of Conduct, how to live in harmony with each other and with their surroundings. Îshvara is Love, and wills the happiness of His universe, is gradually bringing about universal happiness. This does not mean that a right thing always is pleasant, and a wrong thing always unpleasant, for the time ; but it means that the conduct which leads to lasting happiness, to the bliss of union with Îshvara, to Mokṣha in the end, is good. "As the wheels of the cart follow the ox, so misery follows sin," and so also happiness follows righteousness. The fruit of wrong-doing may be sweet to the taste in the eating, but it is poison, and brings about bitter pain afterwards, and sometimes long-continued disease. The boy who does wrong because it gives him a short pleasure is like the ignorant child who plucks and eats the sweet gaily coloured poison-berries that make him in the evening writhe in pain. It is the duty of the teacher of morality to mark every sin as "Poison."

आचारलक्षणो धर्मः संतस्त्वाचारलक्षणः ।

आगमानां हि सर्वेषामाचारः श्रेष्ठ उच्यते ॥

आचारप्रभवो धर्मो धर्मादायुर्विवर्धते ।

आचाराल्लभते ह्यायुराचाराल्लभते श्रियम् ॥

आचारात्कीर्त्तिमाप्नोति पुरुषः प्रेत्य चेह च ॥ *

* Mahâbhârata, Anushâsana Parva, civ.

“ The mark of Dharma is Âchâra (good conduct). Âchâra is the mark of the good. Higher than all teachings is Âchâra. From Âchâra is Dharma born, and Dharma enhances life. By Âchâra man attains life. By Âchâra he attains fame, here and hereafter.

आचारः परमो धर्मः श्रुत्युक्तः स्मार्त एव च ।
 तस्मादस्मिन् सदा युक्तो नित्यं स्यादात्मवान् द्विजः ॥
 एवमाचारतो दृष्ट्वा धर्मस्य मुनयो गतिम् ।
 सर्वस्य तपसो मूलमाचारं जगृहुः परम् ॥ *

“ Âchâra is the highest Dharma, declared by the Shruti and the Smṛiti. Therefore let the twice-born that knoweth the Self ever diligently engage therein.

“ Thus beholding the path of Dharma issue from Âchâra, the sages embraced Âchâra as the root of all Tapas.

प्रभवार्थाय भूतानां धर्मप्रवचनं कृतम् ।
 यः स्यात्प्रभवसंयुक्तः स धर्म इति निश्चयः ॥
 धारणाद् धर्ममित्याहुर्धर्मेण विधृताः प्रजाः ।
 यः स्याद्धारणसंयुक्तः स धर्म इति निश्चयः ॥
 अर्हिसार्थाय भूतानां धर्मप्रवचनं कृतम् ।
 यः स्यादार्हिसया युक्तः स धर्म इति निश्चयः ॥ †
 सर्वेषां यः सुहृन्नित्यं सर्वेषां च हिते रतः ।
 कर्मणा मनसा वाचा स धर्मं वेद जाजले ॥ ‡

* Manusmṛiti, i, 108—110. † Mahâbhâratam., Shânti Parva cic.

‡ Ibid., Shânti Parva, lxxxviii.

“For the well-being of all beings was Dharma declared. That only which bringeth such well-being is Dharma. This is sure.

“Because it supporteth and holdeth together it is called Dharma. By Dharma are the people upheld. That which upholdeth is alone Dharma. This is sure.

“For the making harmless of beings was Dharma declared. That which secureth preservation of beings is Dharma. This is sure.

“He who is the friend of all beings ; he who is intent on the welfare of all with act and thought and speech—he only knoweth Dharma, O Jâjali.”

० न कुर्यात्कर्हिचित्संगं तमस्तीव्रं तितीरिषुः ।

० धर्मार्थकाममोक्षाणां यदत्यन्तविघातकम् ॥

तत्रापि मोक्ष एवार्थं आत्यन्तिकतयेष्यते ।

त्रैवर्ग्योऽर्थो यतो नित्यं कृतान्तभयसंयुतः ॥ *

“He who wishes to cross beyond this intense darkness, let him not attach himself too much to anything, for (such attachment) is the great frustrator of Dharma (religion, etc.), Artha (wealth), Kâma (pleasure) and Moksha (emancipation).

“Of these (four) too, Moksha is the truly ultimate end, for the other three are ever haunted by the fear of Death, the Ender.”

* Vishnu Bhâgavata, IV, xxii, 34—35.

धर्मं चार्थं च कामं च यथावद्वदतां वर ।
विभज्य काले कालज्ञः सर्वान् सेवेत पण्डितः ॥
मोक्षो वा मरणं श्रेय एषां राजन्सुखार्थिनाम् ।*

“The wise man, O best of speakers, that knoweth the proper times, serveth Dharma, Artha and Kâma, all three evenly, dividing his time between them (on the Pravṛtti Mârگا, the path of outgoing).

“But, O King, all beings desire happiness, and Mokṣha (belonging to the Nivṛtti Mârگا, the path of return) is the highest good for them.”

* *Mahâbhârata*m, Vana Parva, xxxiii, 41—42.

CHAPTER II.

THE FOUNDATION OF ETHICS AS GIVEN BY RELIGION.

WE have already seen that the first proclamation of Religion is "The Self is One."

There are indeed many selves in appearance, but they are all portions or reflections of the One. Their separateness is temporary, their unity is eternal. Many pots may be dipped into a tank, but the water that fills each is the same water. Many upâdhis are dipped into the ocean of existence, but the life that fills each is the same life. This primary truth of religion is the foundation of Ethics.

We must, then, in our Ethical Science recognise the unity of the Self. But this is not enough, for in unity there is neither "I" nor "You," and we have seen that our science deals with relations between "I" and "You." So we must also recognise the "diversity of the Not-Self;" that means that there are many upâdhis of matter, and in each separate upâdhi there is a part, or reflection, of the One Self. There are innumerable bodies, innumerable minds, and these bodies and minds come into relations with each other. There can never be right relations until each separate mind and body act to other minds and bodies on the principle that they are at root one, that what helps all is the only thing that really helps each, and that what injures one really injures all. : In hurting another we are really hurting ourselves. If a hand cut the foot belonging to its own body, the blood would flow from the foot, not from the hand ; but presently the hand would grow weak, for the blood circulates in the whole body and there is only one supply for all parts of the body. So also with men ; and if one man wounds another, the wounder suffers as much as the wounded, only the suffering takes longer in making itself felt.

This, then, is the foundation of right conduct, as seen by the Reason. Boys have at first to take moral precepts on the authority of great Sages and Saints, as taught in the Shâstras, because they have not the power nor the time to think them out for themselves. But they can, in their manhood, verify these precepts, given in the Sanâṭana Dharma, by applying their Reason to them.

The One Self is in all beings ; every Jivâtma is a portion, or reflection, of the One Self. Let this principle sink deeply into every heart, and let each remember that he who injures another injures himself. Sayeth Shri Kṛṣṇa : “ I am the Self, O Guḍakesha, seated in the heart of all beings ; I am the beginning, the middle, and also the end of beings.”*

एको देवः सर्वतभूषु गूढः

सर्वव्यापी सर्वभूतान्तरात्मा ।

कर्माध्यक्षः सर्वभूताधिवासः

साक्षी चेता केवलो निर्गुणश्च ॥ †

“ One God hideth in all beings. He pervadeth all. He is the inmost Self of all beings. He superviseth all actions. He is the resting-place of all beings. He is the Witness, the Consciousness, the One above limitations and qualities.”

एकस्तथा सर्वभूतान्तरात्मा रूपं रूपं प्रतिरूपो बभूव । ‡

“ This one universal Inner Self of all beings becometh one separate individual self for each form.”

यस्तु सर्वाणि भूतान्यात्मन्येवानुपश्यति ।

सर्वभूतेषु चात्मानं ततो न विजुगुप्सते ॥

यास्मिन् सर्वाणि भूतान्यात्मैवभूद्विजानतः ।

तत्र को मोहः कः शोक एकत्वमनुपश्यतः ॥ §

“ He who seeth all beings in the Self, and the Self in all beings, he shrinketh no more (from any, in dislike).”

* Bhāgavad-Gītā x—20. † Shvetāshvatāropaniṣat, vii—2.

‡ Kathopanishat, v—10. § Īshopanishat, 6—7.

“ He in whose consciousness, full of perfected knowledge, all beings have become the Self—in him, thus beholding the unity, there is no more any delusion nor any sorrow.”

सर्वभूतस्थमात्मानं सर्वभूतानि चात्मनि ।

ईक्षते योगयुक्तात्मा सर्वत्र समदर्शनः ॥ *

“ The self, harmonised by yōga, seeth the Self abiding in all beings, all beings, in the Self ; everywhere he seeth the same.”

* Bhāgavad-Gītā, vi—29.

CHAPTER III.

RIGHT AND WRONG.

THESE two words, Right and Wrong, are in the mouth of everybody, but it is not everybody who can tell us exactly what he means by right and wrong. Let us try to understand.

We have seen that we have specially to do with three worlds, the Trilokî, and we know that the Trilokî is created by Brahmâ, preserved by Viṣṇu, and dissolved by Shiva. Let us think of a new Trilokî.* It is a going forth; many forms appear, and grow and develop; they become more and more different; they involve into separate individuals; they grow by the experiences they meet; they develop their bodies and minds by taking all they can from outside and working it up into themselves. This is called the Pravṛtti Mârگا, the path of going forth, on which the Jivâtmâ is building himself up into a separate individual, by taking all he can from outside, and making a strong intellect, a powerful "I." When this is complete, the Jivâtmâ has to learn that he himself is only a part or reflection of a much greater "I," the Îshvara, and that all his powers can only bring happiness if used as a part of that greater " I.' Then he begins to see the Unity under the diversity, and turns away from his little separate self to realise the One Self ; he tries to give to all that are weaker than he is, to share with himself in other bodies, and minds what he has accumulated in his own. This is called the Nivṛitti Mârga, the path of return, on which the Jivâtma is seeking to realise himself as one with all by sharing all he has with all who need.

* See pp. 63-64.

These two paths make up what is called evolution, and along this road of evolution the Will of Îshvara, in His aspect of Viṣṇu, is guiding His universe. To work with this Will is Right ; to work against it is Wrong.

Now the world, as a whole, is at the turning point where the Pravṛitti Mârga changes to the Nivṛitti Mârga. Most people are still on the Pravṛitti Mârga, but their way onwards, their higher evolution, lies along the Nivṛitti Mârga. Hence right conduct consists of the desires, thoughts and actions that help oneself and others to tread the Nivṛitti Mârga, the path that leads to Union. We must aim at decreasing separateness, at increasing unity ; all that lessens separateness, and leads towards unity is Right ; all that increases separateness and leads away from unity is Wrong. But for animals, savages, and backward, undeveloped Jîvâtâmâs, whose individuality is still very weak, separateness has still to be aimed at, and what is right or wrong for the more advanced is not yet right or wrong for them. This is what is meant by saying that morality is relative. It is related to our position in evolution, to the path we are on.

“Subtle is morality,” Bhîṣhma said to Yudhiṣhthira. “I instruct thee not by the letter of the Veda alone, but by the Veda as interpreted by wisdom and experience. None may accomplish his course through the world aright with the help of a morality that is one-sided. The text of the Scripture should be applied with careful exercise of judgment, otherwise it faileth grievously. Ushans spake this truth in time of old, that Scriptures are no Scriptures if they cannot stand the test of reason. The presence of a knowledge that is full of doubts is no better than its absence. A morality that is based on words, without regard to special circumstances leads to error. In a time of long-continued famine, the Rîṣhi Vishvâmîtra took forbidden meat from a chândâla, and compelled the Devas to take their customary share from that same meat offered in sacrifice, and thus to justify his act. Forgiveness befits the Sannyâsi ; it does not always befit the King. The King may forgive injuries to himself. He may not overlook the slightest wrong done to the meanest of his subjects, if he wish himself and his country well. The sin that attaches to the killing of a person that should not be killed is equal to the sin of not slaying one that deserves to be slain. The King should ever exact with firmness, yea, severity, from all his subjects their respective duties. If he does not do this, then will they prowl about unchecked, like wolves, murdering the weaker and devouring each other. It has been sung of old : ‘She alone is a wife that speaketh pleasantly. He alone is a son that maketh his sire happy. He alone is a friend who may be safely trusted. That, verily, is the motherland wherein living is earned.’ He alone is a King who ruleth strictly without oppression, in whose territories the righteous have no fear, who cherisheth the poor and punisheth the wicked.”*

The Âshramas and the Varnas were given in order to shew people what kind of virtues they should aim at, in the particular place and time in which they find themselves, and thus to help on their orderly evolution. As all men have not the power nor the time to find out for themselves the Will of Īshvara, the Shâsṭras have been given to tell us of that Will, and so to help us in distinguishing between Right and Wrong. But some general rules have also been laid down in the sacred books, by Vyâsa and by others, for application in cases in which the details are not clear or specific, and therefore the special rules, given in the Shâsṭras, not easy or necessary to apply. Such are :

* Mahâbhâratam, Shânti Parva, cxxxix, and cxli—cxlii.

“To give joy to another is righteousness ; to give pain is sin.”

“Let not any man do unto another any act that he wisheth not done to himself by others, knowing it to be painful to himself. And let him also purpose for another all that he wisheth for himself.”

“Let not any one do an act that injureth another, nor any that he feeleth shame to do.”

“Let him not do to another what is not good for himself.”

सुखाभ्युदयिकं चैव नैश्रेयसिकमेव च ।

प्रवृत्तं च निवृत्तं च द्विविधं कर्म वैदिकम् ॥

इह चामुत्र वा काम्यं प्रवृत्तं कर्म कीर्त्यते ।
 निष्कामं ज्ञानपूर्वं तु निवृत्तमुपदिश्यते ॥
 प्रवृत्तं कर्म संसेव्य देवानामेति साम्यताम् ।
 निवृत्तं सेवमानस्तु भूतान्यत्येति पंच वै ॥*

“Of two kinds is the karma mentioned in the Vedas, Pravṛitta and Nivṛitta, leading to joys or leading to that (happiness) than which there is no higher.

“Karma done under personal desire (for gain), here or hereafter, is Pravṛitta Karma ; done without such desire, under guidance of perfected knowledge (of right and duty) is Nivṛitta.

“Doing Pravṛitta Karma man evolves into the condition of Devas. Performing Nivṛitta he rises to beyond the five Bhûtas.”

अन्ये कृतयुगे धर्मास्त्रेतायां द्वापरेऽपरे ।
 अन्ये कलियुगे नृणां युगाहासानुरूपतः ॥†

“Different are the dharmas in Kṛita-yuga ; different in Treṭâ and Dvâpara ; different again are the dharmas of men in Kali-Yuga—changing according to the changes of the cycles.”

यतः प्रवृत्तिर्भूतानां येन सर्वमिदं ततम् ।
 स्वकर्मणा तमभ्यर्च्य सिद्धिं विन्दति मानवः ॥

* Manusmṛiti, xxi—88, 89, 90.

† *Mahâbhârata*m, Shanti Parva, ccxxxi—27.

श्रेयान् स्वधर्मो विगुणः परधर्मात्स्वनुष्ठितात् ।
 स्वभावनियतं कर्म कुर्वन्नाप्नोति किल्बिषम् ॥
 ईश्वरः सर्वभूतानां हृद्देशेऽजुन तिष्ठति ।
 भ्रामयन्सर्वभूतानि यन्त्रारूढानि मायया ॥
 तमेव शरणं गच्छ सर्वभावेन भारत ! ।
 तत्प्रसादात्परां शान्तिं स्थानं प्राप्स्यसि शाश्वतम् ॥*

“He from Whom is the emanation of beings, by Whom all this is pervaded, by worshipping Him in his own karma, man winneth perfection.

“Better is one’s own dharma, though destitute of merits, than the well-executed dharma of another. He who doeth the karma laid down by his own nature incurreth not sin.

“Īshvara dwelleth in the hearts of all beings, O Arjuna, moving all beings by his Mâyâ, as though mounted on a wheel.

“Flee unto Him for shelter with all thy being, O Bhârata ; by His grace thou shalt obtain supreme peace, the everlasting dwelling place.

वेदोऽखिलो धर्ममूलं स्मृतिशीले च तद्विदाम् ।

आचारश्चैव साधूनामात्मनस्तुष्टिरेव च ॥†

“The whole of the Veda is the source of dharma ; also the Smṛiti and the character of those that know the Veda ; also the conduct of the good .

* Bhâgavad-Gîtâ, xviii—46, 47, 61, 62. † Manusmṛiti, ii—6.

and the satisfaction of the Self.”

अष्टादशपुराणेषु व्यासस्य वचनद्वयम् ।
परोपकारः पुण्याय पापाय परपीडनम् ॥
यदन्यैर्विहितं नेच्छेदात्मनः कर्म पूरुषः ।
न तत्परेषु कुर्वीत ज्ञानन्नप्रियमात्मनः ॥
यद्यदात्मनि चेच्छेत तत्परस्यापि चिन्तयेत् ।*

* * * *

यदन्येषां हितं न स्यादात्मनः कर्म पौरुषम् ।
अपत्रंपेत वा येन न तत्कुर्यात्कथञ्चन ॥†

* * * *

अतो यदात्मनोऽपथ्यं परेषां न तदाचरेत् ।‡

[The translations of these shlokas are given on p. 140].

* Mahābhāratam, Shānti † Ibid, cxxiv—67.
Parva, cclx—20, 21, 23. ‡ Yājñaralkya Smṛiti, iii—65.

CHAPTER IV.

THE STANDARD OF ETHICS.

WE have seen that the general standard by which actions should be judged at the present stage of evolution is Union, although many Jivas are not yet arrived at this stage. For the majority we can test each action by asking : Does it promote union ? Does it promote separateness ? If the answer to the first question is "Yes," the action is Right ; if the answer to the second question is "Yes," the action is Wrong. This is why it was said in Chapter I. that morality showed men "how to live in harmony with each other and with their surroundings." To live in harmony is to promote union.

So also when Shri Kṛiṣṇa speaks of Divine and Âsuric properties, we find that he classes as Divine those which promote union, and as Âsuric those which promote separateness. "Fearlessness, cleanness of life, steadfastness in the yoga of wisdom, alms-giving, self-restraint and sacrifice and the study of the Shâsṭras, austerity and straightforwardness, harmless, truthfulness, absence of wrath, renunciation, peacefulness, absence of crookedness, compassion to living beings, uncovetousness, mildness, modesty, absence of fickleness, vigour, forgiveness, fortitude, purity, absence of envy and pride.”* Such virtues draw men together, and are based on the knowledge that all selves are one. On the other hand, see how those He marks as Âsuric, the qualities which drive man apart, promote divisions : “Hypocrisy, arrogance and conceit, wrath and also harshness and unwisdom.”† And his description of the Âsuric type of man shews one who is full of ahamkâra, egoism and selfishness.‡

Let the young student then grasp firmly this distinction between Right and Wrong, and apply it to the guidance of his conduct. In later study he will add much to his thoughts on Right and Wrong, will learn many details, and have to solve many complexities ; but this principle, this standard, will remain unaltered, for it is based on evolution, and is in accord with the will of Îshvara.

सर्वेषामपि चैतेषामात्मज्ञानं परं स्मृतम् ।
तद्ब्रह्मस्य सर्वविद्यानां प्राप्यते ह्यमृतं ततः ॥

* Bhâgavad-Gîtâ, xiv, 1—3.

† Ibid, 4.

‡ Ibid. 7—18.

सर्वमात्मनि संपश्येत्सच्चासच्च समाहितः ।
सर्वे ह्यात्मनि संपश्यन्नाधर्मे कुरुते मनः ॥
आत्मैव देवताः सर्वाः सर्वमात्मन्यवस्थितम् ।

* * * *

एवं यः सर्वभूतेषु पश्यत्यात्मानमात्मना ।
स सर्वसमतामेत्य ब्रह्माभ्येति परं पदम् ॥*

“Of all these things, the knowledge of the Self is the highest. It is the foremost of the sciences, for immortality is attained thereby.

“Let him with collected mind see in the Self both the Real and the Unreal. Thus beholding all in the Self, he turneth not his mind towards adharma.

“The Self is all the Devas ; all resides in the Self. He who thus seeth the Self in all beings, by his own Self, he realiseth the equality of all and attaineth to the supreme state of Brahman.”

* Manusmṛiti, xii—85, 118, 119, 125.

CHAPTER V.

VIRTUES AND THEIR FOUNDATION.

WE have already seen that mutual sacrifice, another name for mutual service, is enjoined by the Sanâṭana Dharma, and it is easy to see that this is Right, since it promotes union. Thus the five daily sacrifices promote union between the sacrificer and Rishis, Devas, Pitris, Men and Animals. Another way in which the Sanâṭana Dharma teaches us to do right is by explaining to us the three debts that we owe; the debt to the Rishis, paid chiefly in the Brahmacharya Âshrama, by study and by service of the teacher; the debt to the Pitris, the Ancestors, paid chiefly in the Gârhasṭhya Âshrama, by rearing a family and by charity; the debt to the Devas, paid chiefly in the Vânaprastha Âshrama, by sacrifice and meditation.

A debt is something we owe; we have received and should repay. This payment of debt, of what is due, is called the discharge of duty, that which we owe to others, which we ought to do. The discharge of a duty is called a virtue; the non-discharge of a duty is called a vice. A virtuous man recognises his duties, his obligations, and fulfils them ; a vicious man does not recognise nor fulfil them.

Virtues have also been called by Bhīṣhma "forms of Truth,"* because Truth is that which is Real, is indeed, as Bhīṣhma says, "the eternal Brahman." † Truth is the Divine Nature, and we see this in the reflection of Brahman that we call external Nature. For all the laws of Nature are expressions of Truth, and work with perfect accuracy and changelessness. Now the greatest Truth of all is, as said before, the unity of the Self amidst the diversity of the Not-Self. All other truths and laws are such only because they are reflections, copies, of this great unity in diversity. And the form which this great Truth takes in Ethical Science is that each one of us should feel for other selves as for himself, should feel himself to be the same as, or at least similar to, other selves ; and, so feeling, we must always tell the truth, because to tell a falsehood to another is to regard him with distrust, to regard him as separate from, or even opposed to oneself, to prevent him from sharing with oneself in a common knowledge, which should be the same for all when all are as

* Mahābhāratam, Shānti Parva—clxii.

† Ibid, clxii.

one. From the setting up of this separation by untruthfulness, consciously or unconsciously, endless harm results and vices arise. This description of the nature of virtues as forms of Truth corresponds again with our standard of Ethics, for truthfulness promotes union, while untruthfulness increases separateness.

Truthfulness has always been a marked characteristic of the noble characters described in Hindu literature. "My lips have never uttered an untruth," is a favourite phrase of the Heroes. Shri Kṛiṣṇa promised not to carry arms on Kurukṣhetra, and when He ran towards Bhīṣma with uplifted whip to help Arjuna, Arjuna refused His help because of His promise.* So also Yudhiṣṭhira, though almost despairing of victory, would not take His help, because of that same promise.† On the other hand, we read that when Yudhiṣṭhira for a moment in his utmost need forgot his truthfulness, and told a lie to the undoing of Droṇa, his war-chariot lost the power that upraised it from the earth and it sank to the ground.‡ When the Pāṇdavas were yet in the forest, and Shri Kṛiṣṇa suggested that Yudhiṣṭhira might send an army

* Mahābhāratam, Bhīṣma Parva—lix.

† Ibid.

‡ Ibid, Droṇa Parva—cciii.

against the Kurus, thus breaking the spirit of the promise that they would remain thirteen years in exile, Yudhiṣṭhira's answer was : "The sons of Pându swerve not from the path of truth."* Even when loss follows, the pledged word must be kept. When Prahlâḍa took the sovereignty of the three worlds from Indra, Indra disguised himself as a Brâhmaṇa and served him as his disciple. At last Prahlâḍa was so pleased with him, that he offered to give him anything he asked for. Indra asked for Prahlâḍa's "Shila," character, manner, behaviour, and Prahlâḍa gave it, though he feared it meant his own ruin—as indeed it did—because he had pledged his word.†

And who can forget Bhîṣma's splendid answer, when his step-mother Satyavaṭi prayed him to take the throne and marry, against his promise : 'I would renounce the three worlds, the empire of heaven or anything that may be still greater, but truth never will I renounce. Earth may renounce its scent, water may renounce its moisture, light may renounce its power of showing forms, the air may renounce its susceptibility to touch, the sun may renounce his glory, fire his heat, the moon

* Ibid, Vana Parva—clxxxi.

Mahâbhâratam, Shânṭi Parva—cxxiv.

his cool rays, space its capacity to generate sounds, the slayer of Vriṭṭra his prowess, the God of justice his impartiality, but I renounce not truth.”*

Karṇa, the man of fire, the man of pride, the man of headlong straightforwardness, was born, the ancient story says, with a natural armour that no weapons could pierce through. The Devas, ever working that the cause of the Pâṇdavas might prevail, were sorely anxious lest in the predestined combat between Karṇa and Arjuna, the latter should fail because of that strong armour. It was Karṇa's rule that he sat facing the east every day, studying the Vedas, till the sun turned the zenith, and he had vowed that during that period of his Veda-study every day, whatsoever a Brâhmaṇa asked of him that he had to give, he would give to him unfailingly ; and one day Indra, the King of the Devas, seeing no other way, took on the semblance of an aged Brâhmaṇa and appeared before Karṇa and said he had a boon to ask. And Karṇa said that he would surely give it, if it were at all within his power. Then Indra said : “Give me this armour that you wear by nature on your body.” Karṇa replied : “I know thee now to be no artless Brâhmaṇa, but the King of the Devas himself, disguised to help the cause of the Pândavas. But even the letter of my given word must be respected. Take what thou askest, though in giving thee thy wish I know I give my life, and what is even more than life to me, the only chance of conquering my soldier-rival, Arjuna, in battle !” And Karna hewed off that living armour piece by piece with his own hand and sword, and gave it all to Indra, winning thereby a longer life and a far nobler name than if he had defeated Arjuna.*

* Ibid, Âdi Parva - ciii.

King Dāsharāṭha, of the Solar Race of Kings, asked by the Devas for help against the Asuras, battled against the latter as a Kṣhāṭṭriya should. His youngest wife, Kaikeyi, drove his war-chariot, and when the king sank into a swoon under his wounds, she skilfully bore him away on the chariot to a place of safety and preserved his life. For that deed the grateful King promised her two boons, which she put by for future need. Long afterwards, when the King was in his old age and wished to instal his eldest son, Rāma, as the heir-apparent, she claimed the boons, and claimed them fearfully : Rāma, eldest born and best beloved of the aged King, noblest of men, should wander forth into the forests as an exile, and the crown be placed on the head of Kaikeyî's son, Bharata. Dasharatha, knowing well that it was death to him to grant the boons, yet granted them and died. Better far that he should die, than that the King's word be broken, and truth slain.*

* *Mahābhārata*m, Vana Parva, ccciii—cccix.

Bali, the Daitya king, had conquered Svarga and become unchallenged ruler of the three worlds. The rites of a great sacrifice, the sacred Ashvamedha, were spread out at his command. Vâmana, Viṣṇu disguised as a dwarf, came to the sacrifice and begged as boon as much land as He could cover in three paces. Shukra, the preceptor of Bali, bade him refuse to carry out his gift, since Vâmana was Viṣṇu. Bali answered: "The grandson of Prahâlâda shall never speak untruth. I will give to this Brâhmaṇa boy what I promised, even if he be Viṣṇu and my enemy." And when Vâmana had covered the Trilokî with two paces and demanded a third foothold, Bali offered his own head, and took as favour the loss of all his kingdom. And for this Viṣṇu blessed him, declaring: "His wealth gone, his position lost, himself overpowered and chained by enemies, forsaken by friends, reviled and cursed by his own preceptor Bali forsook not truth."† The purâṇas say that for such acts of truth, by the blessing of Viṣṇu, Bali will be the next Indra, when the present Deva, whose proper name is Purandāra, vacates that office (for Indra is the title of the great office of the sovereign of the divine kingdom, not a personal name).

* Râmâyana, Ayodhyâkânda. † Viṣṇu-Bhâgavata, VIII, xv—xiii.

As truth is Brahman, those who seek Brahman must be truthful. Above and beyond all else, therefore, a boy should strive for truthfulness.

जायमानो ब्राह्मणास्त्रिभिर्ऋणैर्ऋणवाञ्जायते यज्ञेन देवेभ्यः

प्रजया पितृभ्यः स्वाध्यायेन ऋषिभ्यः ॥*

“The Brâhmana, being born, is born a debtor with three debts ; to the Devas by sacrifice, to the Ancestors by progeny, to the Rishis by study.”

ऋणानि त्रीण्यपाकृत्य मनो मोक्षे निवेशयेत् ।

अनपाकृत्य मोक्षं तु सेवमानो व्रजत्यधः ॥

अर्धात्य विधिवद्वेदान् पुत्रांश्चोत्पाद्य धर्मतः ।

इष्ट्वा च शक्तितो यज्ञैर्मनो मोक्षे निवेशयेत् ॥ †

“After having discharged the three debts let him turn his mind to Mokṣha. He who desireth Mokṣha, without having discharged them falleth downwards.

“Having studied the Vedas duly, having produced offspring lawfully, having offered sacrifices

* Veda text quoted by Kullûka in his commentary on Manusmṛiti, vi...36. † Manusmṛiti, vi, 35-36.

to the best of his power, let him turn to Mokṣha.”

परस्परं भावयन्तः श्रेयः परमवाप्स्यथ ॥

*

*

*

एवं प्रवर्तितं चक्रं नानुवर्त्तयतीह यः ।

अघायुरिन्द्रियारामो मोघं पार्थ स जीवति ॥*

“Nourishing one another ye shall reap the supremest good.

“He who on earth doth not follow the wheel thus revolving, sinful of life and rejoicing in the senses, he, O Pârtha, liveth in vain.”

सत्यं सत्सु सदा धर्मः सत्यं धर्मः सनातनः ।

सत्यमेव नमस्येत सत्यांहि परमा गतिः ॥*

सत्यं धर्मस्तपो योगः सत्यं ब्रह्म सनातनम् ।

सत्यं यज्ञः परः प्रोक्तः सर्वं सत्ये प्रतिष्ठितम् ॥

*

*

*

सत्यं नामाव्ययं नित्यमविकारि तथैव च ।

सर्वधर्माविरुद्धेन योगे नैतद्वाप्यते ॥

सत्यं च समता चैव दमश्चैव न संशयः ।

अमात्सर्यं क्षमा चैव ह्रीस्तितिक्षाऽनसूयता ॥

त्यागो ध्यानमथार्यत्वं धृतिश्च सततं दया ।

अहिंसा चैव राजेन्द्र ! सत्याकारास्त्रयोदश ॥ †

“Truth is ever the (one) dharma of the good. Truth is the Sanâtana Dharma. Bow only to the Truth. Truth is the final way. Truth is dharma,

* Bhâgavad-Gîtâ, iii, 11-16.

† Mahâbhârâtam, Anushâsana Parva c-lxii.

Truth is tapas. Truth is the eternal Brahman. Truth is the highest sacrifice, for all is founded on and upheld by Truth.

*

*

*

“Truth is the name of That which is Unperishing, Unchanging, Eternal. It is attained by the Yoga-meditation that opposeth not any dharma.”

“Truthfulness, equality (impartiality) self-control, absence of envious emulation, forgiveness, modesty, endurance, absence of jealousy, charity, thoughtfulness, disinterested philanthropy, self-possession, and unceasing and compassionate harmlessness—these are the thirteen forms of Truth.”

चत्वारः षड्भ्यो वेदाः साङ्गोपाङ्गाः सविस्तराः ।

स्वधीता मनुजव्याघ्र सत्यमेकं किलैकतः ॥ *

“The four Vedas on the one side, well studied together with all their angas and upangas (are far out-weighed by) Truth alone on the other.”

आत्मन्यपि न विश्वासस्तथा भवति सत्सु यः ।

तस्मात्सत्सु विशेषेण सर्वः प्रणयमिच्छति ॥ †

“Men place less trust in themselves than in the true. Hence all wish to secure the friendship of the true.”

सतां सदा शाश्वतधर्मवृत्तिः

सन्तो न सीदन्ति न च व्यथन्ति ।

* *Mahâbhârata*m, Vana Parva 1—xiii, † Ibid—ccxc.

सतां सद्भिर्नाफलः संगमोऽस्ति
 सद्भ्यो भयं नानुवर्तन्ति सन्तः ।
 सन्तो हि सत्येन नयन्ति सूर्यं
 सन्तो भूमिं तपसा धारयन्ति ।
 सन्तो गतिर्भूतभव्यस्य राजन्
 सतां मध्ये नावसीदन्ति सन्तः॥*

"The true and the good act ever according to the Eternal Dharma. The true fail not, nor are cast down ; never fruitless is contact with the true; the true feel no fear from the true. The true guide the Sun by the power of Truth ; the true uphold the Earth by the power of self-denial. The true are the guides of the past and the future. O King, the true never suffer in the midst of the true."

(यतः प्रभवति) क्रोधः कामो वा भरतर्षभ ।
 शोकमोहौ विधित्सा च परासुत्वं च (तद्वद) ॥
 लोभो मात्सर्यमीर्ष्या च कुत्साऽसूया कृपा भयम् ।

* * * * *
 त्रयोदशैतेऽतिबलाः शत्रवः प्राणिनां स्मृताः ॥†

"Anger, lust, dejection, delusion, cynicism, wrongful activity, greed, envy, jealousy, irritated worry, sullen hate or malice, scorn and fear—these thirteen (vices and forms of untruth) O king, are the powerful enemies of living creatures."

* Ibid. † Mahābhārataṃ, Shānti Parva, xxxiii.

यस्य विद्वान् हि वदतः क्षेत्रज्ञो नाभिषङ्कते ।
तस्मान्न देवाः श्रेयांसं बोकेऽन्यं पुरुषं विदुः ॥*

“The Devas know not a better being in the universe, than him of whom the all-knowing Witness feeleth no doubt when he speaketh.”

कर्मण्येवाधिकारस्ते मा फलेषु कदाचन ।
मा कर्मफलहेतुर्भूर्मा ते सङ्गोऽस्त्वकर्मणि ॥†

“Thy business is with the action only, never with its fruits ; so let not the fruit of action be thy motive, nor be thou to inaction attached.

ऋतं सत्यं परं ब्रह्म । ‡

“The Supreme Brahman is the Right, is the Truth.”

* Manusmṛiti, viii—96.

† Bhāgavad-Gītā, ii—47.

‡ Nṛisimhottaratāpini-Upaniṣhat, i—6.

CHAPTER VI.

BLISS AND EMOTIONS.

WE have seen that Îshvara is Thought, Power and Bliss, and man, as His child, has also these characteristics. When the Jîvâtmâ becomes wrapped in dense matter, the aspect of his nature which is Bliss, is ever going outwards in search of satisfaction, trying to realise itself by uniting itself with the outer world. The impulses outwards are called desires, and when they unite the Jîvâtmâ to an object that gives him pleasure, so that he desires to be again united to such an object, the resulting emotion is called love, or liking. When, on the contrary, they unite the Jîvâtmâ to an object that gives him pain, so that he desires to avoid union with such an object again, the resulting emotion is called hate, or dislike. The first makes an attraction between the Jîvâtmâ and the object ; the second makes a repulsion.

The Jîvâtmâ thinks over these likes and dislikes, and gradually trains himself to direct his emotions rightly ; emotions thus guided by reason in accordance with the will of Îshvara develop into Virtues, and thus the culture of the emotions forms the ethical development of man. As he cultivates the emotion called love he unites himself to an ever-widening circle of beings, the family, the community, the nation, the race, loving them as himself and this love becomes a continually increasing expression of the Bliss aspect of his nature, which finds satisfaction in union.

We have seen that evolution is now leading us towards union, or, in other words, that the will of Îshvara is guiding the separated selves towards union with each other and with Himself. In this union is Bliss ; therefore the Right and the Happy are inseparable. Over and over again the Sanâ-tana Dharma leads us to this one conclusion. "Brahman is bliss" therefore the Jivâtâmâ, being of the nature of Brahman, is also bliss, and unhappiness only arises when he goes against evolution, against the great Will, goes, in a word, wrong.

ब्रह्मैवेदं सर्वं सच्चिदानन्दरूपं सच्चिदानन्दरूपमिदं सर्वम् ।*

"All this is Brahman—Sachchidânanda ; Sachchidânanda is this all."

पराञ्चिखानि व्यतृणत् स्वयंभू- स्तस्मात्पराङ् पश्यति नान्तरात्मन् । †

* Nṛisinhottaratâpini-Upanishat, 7. † Kathopanishat, iv—1.

“The Self-born pierced the senses outwards ; therefore (the Jīva) looketh outwards and not (towards) the inner Self.”

यदा वै सुखं लभतेऽथ करोति नासुखं लब्ध्वा करोति
सुखमेव लब्ध्वा करोति... ।

यो वै भूमा तत्सुखं नात्पे सुखमस्ति भूमैव सुखम् ।

यत्र नान्यत्पश्यति नान्यच्छृणोति नान्यद्विजानाति
स भूमा अथ यत्राऽन्यत्पश्यत्यन्यच्छृणोत्यन्याद्विजानाति
तदल्पं यो वै भूमा तदमृतमथ यदल्पं तन्मर्त्यं... ।*

“When (the Jīva) obtaineth pleasure, then he engageth in action ; never doth he enter on action without having obtained pleasure ; only when he hath obtained pleasure doth he engage in action.

“That which is infinite, that is (the true pleasure) happiness ; there is no happiness in the finite. This infinite alone is happiness.

Where (the Self) seeth not another, heareth not another, knoweth not another (than the Self) that is the Infinite. Where (the Self) seeth, heareth, knoweth another (than the Self), that is the finite. That which is infinite is immortal ; that which is finite is mortal.”

सुखचैतन्यस्वरूपोऽपरिमितानन्दसमुद्रोऽविशिष्टसुख-स्वरूपश्चानन्द इति । †

Chhândogyopanishat, VII, xxii—I ; xxiii—1 and xxiv—1.

† Sarvasâropanishat.

“ Joy and consciousness, a limitless ocean of joy, than which there is no greater happiness—such is Ânanda.”

इष्टविषये बुद्धिः सुखबुद्धिरनिष्टविषये बुद्धिर्दुःखबुद्धिः । *

“ The consciousness of pleasure is the consciousness of an object desired ; the consciousness of pain is the consciousness of an object undesired.”

सर्वाणि भूतानि सुखे रमन्ते
सर्वाणि दुःखस्य भृशं त्रसन्ते ॥ †

“ All beings revel in pleasure ; all shrink greatly from pain.”

इच्छाद्वेषसमुत्थेन द्वन्द्वमोहेन भारत ! ।
सर्वभूतानि संमोहं सर्गे यान्ति परन्तप ॥ ‡

“ By the delusion of the pairs of opposites, O Bhârata, sprung from attraction and repulsion, O slayer of foes, all beings walk this world, wholly deluded.”

इच्छा द्वेषः सुखं दुःखं सङ्घातश्चेतना धृतिः ।
एतत्त्रैत्रं समासेन सविकारमुदाहृतम् ॥ §

“ Desire, aversion, pleasure, pain, the compound (organism), intelligence, firmness, these, briefly described, constitute the Field and its changes.”

काम एव क्रोध एव रजोगुणसमुद्भवः । ॥

* Sarvasâropaniṣat. † Mahâbhârataṃ, Shânti Parva ccxxi.—227.

‡ Bhâgavad-Gîtâ, vii—27. § Ibid, xiii—6. ॥ Ibid, iii—87.

“It is Kâma (desire) and it is Krodha (anger), arising out of Rajas.”

इन्द्रियस्येन्द्रियस्यार्थे रागद्वेषौ व्यवस्थितौ ।*
तयोर्न वशमागच्छेत्तौ ह्यस्य परिपन्थिनौ ॥

“Affection and aversion for the objects of sense abide in the senses ; let none come under the dominion of these two ; they are obstructors of the path.”

रागद्वेषवियुक्तेस्तु विषयानिन्द्रियैश्चरन् । †
आत्मवश्यैर्विधेयात्मा प्रसादमधिगच्छति ॥

“But the disciplined self, moving among sense objects with senses free from attraction and repulsion, mastered by the self, goeth to peace.”

यः शास्त्रविधिमुत्सृज्य वर्तते कामकारतः ।
न स सिद्धिमवाप्नोति न सुखं न परां गतिम् ॥ ‡

“He who, having cast aside the ordinances of the Shâstras, followeth the promptings of desire, attaineth not to perfection, nor happiness, nor the highest goal.”

एको वशी सर्वभूतान्तरात्मा
एकं रूपं बहुधा यः करोति ।
तमात्मस्थं येऽनुपश्यन्ति धीरा-
स्तेषां सुखं शाश्वतं नेतरेषाम् ॥ §

* Bhâgavad-Gîtâ, iii—34.

† Ibid, ii—64. ‡ ibid, xvi—23. § Kathopanishat, v—12.

“The One Who controlleth all, the inmost Self of all beings, Who maketh many forms of one form—they who see That One in the Self, only to those rulers of intelligence belongeth the Eternal Happiness, u none else.”

CHAPTER VII.

SELF-REGARDING VIRTUES.

WE have seen that the Jivâtṃâ is related to all around him, and that Ethics is concerned with making his relations with others harmonious. But we must not forget that he is most closely related to his own koshas, or bodies, the parts of the Not-Self that he has most closely united to himself, and that unless he is in harmonious relations with these, he can hardly hope to be in harmonious relations with the bodies that are further away from him. While he is young, these bodies of his master him, and lead him into all sorts of trouble ; as he grows older, he begins to try to master them, and many a hard fight he has with them, before he develops the great virtue called self-control—the control of the lower selves by the higher Self, of the bodies by the Jivâtṃâ. Virtues that belong to these bodies, considered by themselves, rather than in connection with the relations between different Jivâtṃâs, are called self-regarding in modern classifications. But every one can see that a person who has these virtues will promote harmonious relations with others much more than one who has them not.

Manu, the great law-giver, lays much stress on the necessity for this self-control, and gives some most valuable advice about it. He says that action has three forces behind it, and that each of these must be mastered. "Action is born of mind, speech and body."*

The mind—the Manomayakosha, which includes the emotions—must be conquered. This is the hardest task of all. For the mind runs after the objects of desire, swayed and controlled by the longings to possess the objects which promise to give pleasure. The emotions are ever craving satisfaction, and the mind seeks to gratify them, becoming their slave. The Jivâtâmâ must free the mind from this slavery, and subdue it for his own service, making it the master of the senses and the sense-organs: as Manu says: "In conquering this (the mind) the two sets of five become conquered."† The "two sets of five" are the ten Indriyas, that is, the five Jñânendriyas and the five Karmendriyas.

Let the student, then, aim at ruling his mind ;

* Loc., cit., xi—i3

† Loc. cit., ii—92.

if it runs to evil things let him call it back ; let him allow it to fix itself only on good things. This is the first, the most difficult, the most essential part of self-control.

The control of speech is the next step ; we must think before we speak. Hasty speech leads us into endless troubles. Arjuna was often very hasty in his speech, and so got himself into many difficulties ; as in his hasty vow to slay himself if he did not kill Jayadratha, the slayer of his son, before sunset, thus necessitating the interference of Shri Kṛiṣṇa, who shrouded the sun prematurely to induce Jayadratha to come out from his shelter.* So again in his quarrel with Yudhiṣṭhira, provoked by Yudhiṣṭhira's taunting speech,† and on other occasions. Nay, his failure to keep a hasty vow led to his death on the Great Journey: " Arjuna said he would consume all our foes in a single day. Proud was he in his heroism, but he did not what he boasted. Hence has he fallen down."‡ He who has conquered his tongue is near to self-mastery.

Thirdly, the physical body must be controlled, and not be allowed to hurry us into sin. for its

* *Mahābhārata*m, Droṇa Parva. † Ibid, Karṇa Parva. lxx—lxx.

‡ Ibid, Mahāprasthānika Parva.

gratification. Says Shri Kṛiṣṇa: "Worship of the Devas, the twice-born, the gurus and the wise, purity, straightforwardness, chastity and harmlessness, are called the austerity of the body."§ Youth is the time for conquering the body, for it is then most easily subdued, and set in the right way. For the body is a creature of habit and though at first, it will oppose the will of the Jivâtma with great energy, a little perseverance makes it give way, and then it goes as contentedly and readily along the new road as it did along the old.

Among the sources of evil and of sorrow that we should strive to get rid of by this self-control is selfish desire, for out of the insatiable desire for material wealth and material pleasures grow many miseries, and peace arises from the absence of these desires and not by their continued gratification. Thus Manki found. For, greedy of wealth, Manki had searched for it long, but ever he seemed doomed to disappointment. With the last remnant of his property he bought a pair of calves to train up for the plough. But fate ordained that the cord with which the two were tied should get entangled with a passing camel, so that both were killed. This last mischance opened the heart of Manki, so that desire fled thence unconfined, and Manki burst forth into song: "He that desires happiness must renounce desire. Well did Shuka say that of these two—the one who gets all that he wishes and the one who casts off every wish—the latter, who renounces all, is surely much superior to the former, for none can ever attain to the end of all desires. Do thou, O my soul, so long a slave to greed, taste now for once the joys of freedom and tranquillity. Long have I slept, but I shall sleep no longer; I shall wake. No more shalt thou deceive me, O Desire. Whatever object thou didst fix my heart on, that didst thou force me to follow, heedless, never pausing to enquire if it were easy or impossible to gain. Thou art without intelligence. Thou art a fool. Ever unsatisfied, thou burnest like a fire, always lambent for more offerings. Thou art impossible to fill, like pice itself. Thy one wish is to plunge me into sorrow. This day we part. From this day, O Desire, I live no longer in thy company. I think no more of thee or of thy train. I cast thee off, with all the passions of my heart. I, who was harassed with despair before, have now attained to perfect peace of mind. In full contentment of the heart, senses at ease, shall I live henceforth on what comes to me, and labour no more for the satisfaction of thy wishes, O my foe. Casting off thee and all thy train, I gain at once instead tranquillity and self-restraint, forgiveness and compassion and deliverance." Thus Manki lost a little, and gained all.*

§ Bhâgavad-Gitâ, xvii—14.

Hear also the story of King Yayâti, who driven mad by wild desire, took from his own son his fair and splendid youth to strive to fill therewith the ever-gaping maw of Desire the insatiable. For thus the story runs.

King Yayâti, son of Nahuṣha, of the Lunar Dynasty of Kings, was over-fond of the pleasures of sense and fell into sin, which brought upon him the wrath of his father-in-law, the great Rîṣhi Shukra, the priest of the Titan-Kings. Because of that wrath, King Yayâti was suddenly struck with shrivelled and tottering old age in the very midst of his glorious prime of manhood. He propitiated the Rîṣhi, and Shukra, taking pity on him, decreed that he could exchange, for a thousand years, his age and feebleness for the health and youth of any of his sons, who should consent willingly to the exchange. Yayâti asked his five sons in succession ; the fifth and youngest Puru, for love and reverence of his father, gave him his own youth and took from him his age for the period of a thousand years. For that long period King Yayâti assiduously pursued the pleasures of the senses, endeavouring to exhaust the luxuries of the world of matter. But ever he found that his craving grew, even when his senses dulled with satiation. He longed in vain that his longing for the world of sense should be exhausted by fulfilment. As one spoke of a wheel running after another spoke of it, the chase was endless. At the last, as the thousand years approached their close, a great vairâgya arose in his mind, and he saw that desire ceases not with satisfaction but with frustration. He called Puru to him, took back his own old age with gladness, and gave to him his youth together with the kingdom, and retired into the forests chanting the verse that summed up all his life-experience :

* *Mahâbhârata*m, Shânti Parva—clxxvii.

“Desire may not be quenched by enjoyment of its objects ; it only increases manifold therewith, as fire with libations of butter.”*

Let us pause a moment on the word “harmlessness,” in the above quotation of Shri Krishna’s words, p. 141. “Harmlessness is the highest Dharma,” Bhîshma taught. We should injure nothing.

* *Mahâbhârata*m. Anushâsana Parva, cxvi—37.

Our life should be a source of help, not of harm. The control of the body includes this abstention from injuring others. As said Bṛihaspati : “ That man who practises the religion of universal compassion, achieves the highest good....One should never do that to another which one regards as injurious to one’s own self. This, in brief, is the rule of righteousness. ” *

People often harm others in more thoughtlessness, and so bring about much trouble. When Yudhiṣṭhira and Duryodhana and their brothers were boys and all lived and studied together, Bhîma, who was the strongest of them all, often indulged in practical jokes and rough horse-play, exercising his great strength with boyish thoughtlessness upon the younger and weaker boys. When a number of them climbed up into a tree to pluck the fruit, he would take the trunk between his hands and shake the tree, till the little boys tumbled down like ripe fruits. Bhîma thought it was great fun and laughed ; but some of the boys were hurt, hurt in body, and what was worse, hurt in mind. Again, when they were out bathing and swimming in the river that flowed beneath the walls of Hastinâpura, Bhîma would swim underneath the other boys, and, catching hold of a number of them, would dive into the water, and hold them there till they were almost drowned, while his own greater lung-capacity helped him efficiently against similar distress. He delighted in this, but the others were agonised. What was the consequence? A smouldering fire of repulsion and dislike, that later on grew into a blazing fire of hate that consumed Kaurava and Pâṇḍava alike. The boyish thoughtlessness of Bhîma was one of the chief causes of the Great War. It is true that unless the combustibles are there, the spark will not kindle the fuel ; unless the tissues are tainted, the microbe will not develop the disease ; still it is our duty to guard against such a destructive spark, such a death-bringing microbe, as long and as carefully as we can. When thoughtless exercise of strength hurts the weak who cannot retaliate, then the anger, that is born but is not vented, becomes transformed into what is contemptuously called hate and malice, but is in reality far less to blame than the careless spoliation of the weaker by the stronger. To the superficial eye of one who is himself equally inclined in his secret mind to oppression, such acts may appear blameless or even magnificent. But to the just eye of a true chivalry they will always appear in their real character of meanness and tyranny.

* Ibid—cxili.

And he who studies the Great History carefully knows well that the Pândavas were not all to praise, nor the Kauravas all to blame.

The triple control of mind, speech and body results in righteousness, in right character expressing itself in right conduct. The man who has thus put himself into right relations with the things nearest to him, his own emotions, mind and body, and has thus partially acquired the virtues classified as "self-regarding" or "egoistic" in western ethical books, is able to practise more effectively those classified therein as "altruistic," those which arise in relation to other living beings.

We have now to study the virtues and vices which arise in the relations between human beings. These are best classified under three heads :

1. The virtues and vices which arise in relation to superiors.
2. The virtues and vices which arise in relation to equals.
3. The virtues and vices which arise in relation to inferiors.

In this way we shall obtain a clear and simple classification of the virtues which make our relations with all around us harmonious, and seeing them distinctly, we can strive to attain them. And we shall also see plainly the vices which make disharmony and can try to avoid them. All the virtues have their root in pure Love, and have Bliss for their fruit; all the vices have their root in personal Hate, and their fruit is Misery.

शुभाशुभफलं कर्म मनोवाग्देहसम्भवम् ।

कर्मजा गतयो नृणामुत्तमाधममध्यमाः ॥

* * * *

मानसं मनसैवायमुपभुङ्क्ते शुभाशुभम् ।

वाचा वाचा कृतं कर्म कायेनैव तु कायिकम् ॥

* * * *

वाग्दण्डोऽथ मनोदण्डः कर्मदण्डस्तथैव च ।

यस्यैते निहिता बुद्धौ त्रिदण्डीति स उच्यते ॥

त्रिदण्डमेतन्निक्षिप्य सर्वभूतेषु मानवः ।

कामक्रोधौ तु संयम्य ततः सिद्धिं निगच्छति ॥*

“Karma, that bringeth good or evil fruit, ariseth in the mind, or in speech, or in the body, And threefold are the paths of men, according to their karma, high or low or middling.

* * * *

“ This (Jīva) reapeth good or evil, mental with the mind, vocal with speech, and bodily even with the body.

* * * *

“The ḍaṇḍa of the speech, the ḍaṇḍa of the

* Manusmṛiti, xii—3, 4, 8, 10, 11.

mind, the ḍaṇḍa of the act—he who has laid these rods (of rule) over his intelligence he is the Tridāṇḍi.

“Having laid these rods (of control over his mind) with respect to all beings, and having conquered lust and anger, (the Jīva) attaineth perfection.

देवद्विजगुरुप्राज्ञपूजनं शौचमार्जवम् ।
 ब्रह्मचर्यमहिंसा च शारीरं तप उच्यते ॥
 अनुद्वेगकरं वाक्यं सत्त्वं प्रबहिर्हितं च यत् ।
 स्वाध्यायाभ्यसनं चैव वाङ्मयं तप उच्यते ॥
 मनः प्रसादः सौम्यत्वं मौनमात्मविनिग्रहः ।
 भावसंशुद्धिरित्येतत्तपो मानसमुच्यते ॥*

“Worship given to the Devas, to the twice-born, to the teachers and to the wise, purity, straightforwardness, continence and harmlessness—are called the austerity of the body.

“Speech causing no annoyance, truthful and beneficial, the practice of the study of the Scriptures, are called the austerity of Speech.

“Mental happiness, equilibrium, silence. self-control, purity of nature—this is called the austerity of the mind.”

* Bhāgaraḍ-Gitā, xvii—14, 15, 16.

न जातु कामः कामानामुपभोगेन शाम्यति ।
हविषा कृष्णवर्त्मैव भूय एवामिवर्धते ॥*

“Not by the enjoyment of the objects of desire doth desire abate ; rather it increaseth again, as fire with libations of butter.”

असंशयं महाबाहो मनो दुर्निग्रहं चलम् ।
अभ्यासेन तु कौन्तेय वैराग्येण च गृह्यते ॥
यतो यतो निश्चरति मनश्चञ्चलमास्थिरम् ।
ततस्ततो नियम्यैतदात्मन्येव वशं नयेत् ॥ †

“Without doubt, O mighty-armed, the mind is hard to curb and restless. But, O son of Kuntī, it may be curbed by constant practice and by dispassion.

“As often as the wavering and unsteady mind, goeth forth, so often, reining it in, let him bring it under the control of the Self.”

अभ्यासेऽप्यसमर्थोऽसि मत्कर्मपरमो भव ।
मदर्थमपि कर्माणि कुर्वन् सिद्धिमवाप्स्यसि ॥‡

“If also thou art not equal to constant practice, be intent on My service. Performing actions for My sake, thou shalt attain perfection.”

नित्यो नित्यानां चेतनश्चेतनानां
एको बहूनां यो विदधाति कामान् ।

* Mahābhāratām, Anushāsan Parva, cxvi—37.

† Bhāgavad-Gītā, iv, 35—26. ‡ Ibid, xii—10

तमात्मस्थं येऽनुपश्यन्ति धीरा-

स्तेषां शान्तिः शाश्वती नेतरेषाम् ॥*

“That which is the Eternal of all eternal,
That which is the Life of all lives, That which being One inspireth many with desires—the wise that behold that One seated within themselves, to them alone belongs the lasting peace, unto none else.”

गोत्रजः सहजशत्रुरित्यसौ

नीतिरस्तु धनलोभदुर्धियाम् ।

वृद्धतुस्यबधुपुंवृतं जगद-

धीधनस्य पितृमित्रपुत्रवत् ॥†

“The kinsman is the congenital foe—such is the view of those whose minds are blinded by the greed of wealth. To him whose wealth is wisdom, the world, that is filled with his elders, equals and youngers, is (as a world of) parents, friends and children.”

अविजित्य य आत्मानममात्यान् विजिगीषते ।

अमित्रान्वाऽजितामात्यः सोऽवशः परिह्रायते ॥

आत्मानमेव प्रथमं द्वेषरूपेण योजयेत् ।

ततोऽमात्यामित्रांश्च न मोघं विजिगीषते ॥‡

“He that, without having conquered himself, wisheth to conquer his ministers, or that, without

* Kathopanishad, v—13.

† *Mahābhārata*m, Udyoga Parva, ii—17.

‡ Ibid, cxxviii, 29—30.

having conquered his ministers, wisheth to conquer his foes, he faileth helplessly.

“But he that conquereth himself first, as his own foe, and thereafter conquers his ministers and his foes, (his work) is not vain.”

धर्मस्य विधयो नैके ये वै प्रोक्ता मनीषिभिः ।
 स्वं स्वं विज्ञानमाश्रित्य दमस्तेषां परायणम् ॥
 दमं निःश्रेयसे प्राहुर्वृद्धा निश्चितदर्शिनः ।
 ब्राह्मणस्य विशेषेण दमो धर्मः सनातनः ॥
 अदान्तः पुरुषः क्लेशमभीक्ष्णं प्रतिपद्यते ।
 अनर्थांश्च बहूनन्यान् प्रसृजत्यात्मदोषजान् ॥
 माश्रमेषु चतुर्ष्वर्हदममेवोत्तमं व्रतम् ।
 तस्य लिङ्गानि वक्ष्यामि येषां समुदयो दमः ॥
 क्षमा धृतिरहिंसा च समता सत्यमार्जवम् ।
 इन्द्रियाभिजयो दाक्ष्यं मार्दवं ह्रीरचापलम् ॥
 अकार्पण्यमसंरम्भः सन्तोषः प्रियवादिता ।
 अविहिंसानसूया चाप्येषां समुदयो दमः ॥*

“Not one (but many are) the branches of dharma that have been declared by the wise, each resting upon his own knowledge. But Dama (self-control) is the basis of them all.

“The elders, the seers of the sure, have declared that Dama leadeth to the Highest ; especially for the Brâhmaṇa is Dama the (whole of) Sanâṭana Dharma.

* *Mahâbhârata*m, Shânti Parva, clx-6, 17, 13-16.

“The man that is not self-controlled meeteth suffering everywhere ; and many troubles he causeth, all arising out of his own defects.

“For all the four Âshramas, Dama is the highest vow. I shall declare to thee the marks thereof, the characteristics of which Dama is the source :

“Forgiveness, self-possession, harmlessness, equability, truthfulness, straightforwardness, the conquest of the senses, skill, gentleness, modesty, restfulness, absence of scorn, absence of excitement, sweet speech, harmlessness, and absence of jealousy—of all these is self-control the source.”

धृतिः क्षमा दमोऽस्तेयं शौचमिन्द्रियनिग्रहः ।
धीर्विद्या सत्यमक्रोधो दशकं धर्मलक्षणम् ॥*

“Self-possession, patience, self-control, integrity, purity, restraint, intelligence, learning, truthfulness, absence of anger—these ten are the marks of dharma.”

अहिंसा सत्यमस्तेयं शौचमिन्द्रियनिग्रहः ।
एतं सामासिकं धर्मं चातुर्वर्ण्येऽब्रवीन्मनुः ॥†

“Harmlessnes, truth-speaking, refraining from theft, control of the senses—such is the essence of the dharma that Manu declared for all the four castes.”

* Manusmṛiti, vi—92. † Ibid, x—63.

सत्यमस्तेयमक्रोधो ह्रीः शौचं धीर्धृतिर्दमः ।

संयतेन्द्रियता विद्या धर्मः सर्व उदहतः †

“Truthfulness, absence of theft, absence of anger, modesty, purity, intelligence, self-possession, self-control, restraint of the senses, learning—this is declared to be the whole of dharma.”

† Yājñavalkya, iii—66.

CHAPTER VIII.

VIRTUES AND VICES IN RELATION TO SUPERIORS.

LOVE which is unselfish prompts us to make sacrifices for others, and to restrain ourselves for the common good ; therefore such love is the root of virtues, of the qualities that promote union. So also hate prompts us to take from others, to grasp at all desirable things for our own separate enjoyment to the injury of others ; therefore hate is the root of vices, of the qualities that promote separateness. Moreover, when we make a sacrifice for one we love, we feel happiness in making it, and we thus learn that the deepest happiness, real bliss, lies in giving, which is the joy of the Jivâtma, and not in taking, which is the joy of the bodies.

Let us see how love impels a man to act in relation to his superiors, to those to whom he looks up. A man's superiors are : God, Sovereign, Parents, Teachers, and the Aged.

Love to God shows itself as Reverence, Devotion, Worship and Submission to His Will. We find all lovers of God show these virtues. See how Bhîshma reverences and worships Shrî Kṛishṇa, the Avatâra of Viṣṇu : at the Râjasûya sacrifice of Yudhiṣṭhira Bhīṣhma bids them offer the first arghya to Him, and Nâraḍa declares that " He who approveth not the worship offered unto Kṛiṣṇa, the oldest One in the universe, deserveth neither soft words nor consideration. Those men that will not worship Kṛiṣṇa, with eyes like lotus-petals, should be regarded as dead though moving." * And so also, when Bhīṣhma lay dying, he was thinking " of Kṛiṣṇa in mind, word and act," and his one thought was to receive His blessing ; † he closed the great exhortation with the recital of " the thousand names of Vâsuḍeva," and his last words, ere bidding all farewell, asked Shrî Kṛiṣṇa's permission to depart. ‡

In Parhlâḍa, the son of the Daitya King Hiranyakashipu, we have one of the most famous examples of devotion. Despite all his teachers could say, he steadily prayed to and praised Hari. In vain did his father threaten him and seek to kill him ; the wild elephant who should have trampled on him failed to injure ; the rocks that should have crushed him lay light as down on his bosom ; the sword that should have struck off his head fell blunted from his neck ; the poison that should have

* *Mahâbhârata*m, Sabhâ Parva, xxxviii—8. † Ibid, Shânti Parva

‡ Ibid, Anushâsana Parva.—cxlix.

carried death along his veins proved harmless as water ; and at last Narasimha, the Avatâra, burst from the granite pillar, and delivered Hari's servant from the tyrant who sought to slay. *

Dhruva, leaving his father's palace to flee from the unkindness of his step-mother, shows such fervour of devotion and such courage and steadfastness in worship, that Hari appears to him, and gives him as throne the pole-star, on the boundary of the Trîlokî, whereon he lives and reigns. †

Nothing, perhaps, is more marked in the perfect human character of Râmchandra, than His unwavering submission to the Divine Will. Over and over again during the whirl that followed His sudden exclusion from the throne, He calms those around Him by reminding them that all that happens is by the good law, and He Himself is utterly unshaken by the storm, knowing the Real amid all changing unrealities.

On the other hand, we read constantly of the overthrow of those who do not honour the Supreme Lord. Mighty rulers like Râvaṇa, who was monarch in Lankâ, fell because they thought themselves rivals of Îshvara, and set themselves against

* See Vishṇu Purâna, I, xvi—xx.

† See Ibid., I, xi—xii.

His loving will for the worlds.* Jarâsandha, the King of Magadha, refusing, though bidden by Shri Kṛiṣṇa, to set free the Kings he had captured was slain by Bhîma ;  Shishupâla fell before the discus of the Lord he denied ; † Duryodhana perished, with his friends and followers, for his persistent rejection of Shri Kṛiṣṇa's counsels ; ‡ the list might be extended for many pages. Out of all these shines out the warning that those who show hate to Îshvara must perish.

Loyalty to the Head of the State is equally insisted on in the Shâstras, not only by direct command but by example. When Yudhiṣṭhira is King in Indraprastha, and his four brothers go out to war, they bring to his feet all the wealth they gained ; they fought for their King, not for themselves.§ So when Yudhiṣṭhira was exiled after the gambling-match, and the people came out to follow him, leaving their allegiance to Dhṛitarâṣṭra, the loyal prince bade them return to Hastinâpura and obey their proper ruler, since only thus could they secure the general prosperity.||

This loyalty was fostered in the people by the

* Râmâyana, Yuddhakândam.

 *Mahâbhârata*m, Shalya Parva—xx.

† Ibid—xl. ‡ Ibid, Shalya and Saupatika Parvas and ante-

§ Ibid, Sabhâ Parva, xxv—xxxiii. || Ibid, Vana Parva, i. ® devotion to duty imposed on the King, and by the high ideal of kingship insisted on. Uṭaṭṭhya, of the race of Angirâ, instructing the King Mândhâtâ, son of Yuvanâshva, said:—"One becometh a King in order that he may uphold righteousness, and not that he may conduct himself capriciously. The King is the protector of the world, O Mândhâtâ ! If he act righteously, he attaineth to the honours of a veritable God upon earth. But if he act unrighteously he sinketh into hell. All creatures rest upon righteousness ; and righteousness, in turn, resteth upon the King. That King alone is a true King who upholdeth righteousness. If he fail to chastise unrighteousness, the Devas desert his mansions, and he incurreth obloquy among men."*

Patriotism, the love of one's country, and Public Spirit, caring for the nation more than for oneself, are virtues that are so closely akin to loyalty that they should never be separated from it. "King and Country" are the object of true loyalty. No man should be without this love of country and the readiness to sacrifice himself for his native land ; for national greatness cannot exist without patriotism and public spirit, and national greatness means, in the long run, family and individual prosperity : the whole and the part cannot be separated. Public spirit makes a man feel the successes and the sufferings of his country as though they were his own—as indeed they are. It makes him try to protect the weak from injustice, to resist wrong, to uphold the law, to stand for justice, to refuse to make unfair profit at the cost of the community or to cheat it by evading what is due to it from himself. The heroes of ancient India are constantly described as “intent on the welfare of others ;” Shri Kṛiṣṇa bids Arjuna see “to the protection of the masses,” to “the maintenance of mankind.” * The man who thinks only of himself and of his family is short-sighted, and is really undermining his and their future happiness.

To Parents is due ever the most complete Obedience, and this is one of the most often-repeated injunctions of the Sanâṭana Dharma. See how Râmachandra, the Great Example, obeys his father. When Dasharatha is inveigled into granting Râma's exile and the son is told by Kaikeyî that His father fears to speak his will : “Speak, O honoured lady, the desire of the King,” is His quick reply, “and I will carry it out. There is no service greater than service of the father, than carrying out his words." And to all arguments counselling resistance, He gives the steadfast answer : " There is no power in me to transgress my father's order.....I shall abide by my father's orders."* And later, when His father was dead, and Bharata, most unwilling regent, held His crown in trust, all His answer to Bharata's passionate pleadings that He should ascend the throne was that His father had sent Him to the forest, and had placed Bharata on the throne ; each must do his own task, according to the father's word : " What My father hath commanded must not be made untrue."†

Again we read in the Mahâbhârata the story of the knower of Brahman, shrouded in the impure body of a fowler, who led to his parents the Brâhmaṇa Kaushika, who came to learn wisdom at his feet. The fowler took the Brâhmaṇa to the beautiful rooms in which he had housed his aged parents, saying that his own happy state of knowledge and peace was due to his filial piety ; having bowed low at their feet he introduced his guest and then told him : " These my parents are the idols that I worship ; whatever is due to the Devas

* Râmâyana, Ayodhyâkâṇḍam, xv—xxx.

† Ibid, xc.

I do to them... To me they are like the three sacred fires mentioned by the learned ; and, O Brâhmaṇa, they seem to me to be as good as sacrifices, or the four Vedas... The two parents, the sacred fire, the soul, and the guru, these five, O good Brâhmaṇa, are worthy of the highest reverence." He then told Kaushika that he had acted wrongly in leaving his parents in his anxiety to learn the Vedas, and that he should go back to them and console them : " Return to the side of thy father and mother, and be diligent in honouring thy parents, for I do not know if there be any virtue higher than this." *

Who does not know how Bhîṣhma won the boon, that Death should not touch him until he himself permitted it, by resigning throne and marriage to win for his father the bride for whom, in silence, the father's heart was yearning ? King Shântanu, of the lunar race of Kings, wished to marry the beautiful Satyavatî, but struggled against himself for the sake of his son Bhîṣhma. A step-mother, he thought, might not be kind to his beloved son. The care born of the struggle showed on King Shântanu's face, and Bhîṣhma made enquiry of the ministers and learned the cause. He went to the father of Satyavati and asked that she be married to the King. The father said : " The King is aged ; thou shalt shortly reign in his stead. I would rather marry my daughter to thee." But Bhîshma replied : " Say not such a thing. When my father has wished to marry her, she is my mother already ; give her to the King." Then Satyavati's father said : " But I shall do so only if her son succeeds the King in sovereignty." Bhîshma said at once : " I promise to forego my birth-right. I shall place that younger brother of mine upon the throne." But Satyavati's father said again : " We know thy word once given may not be broken. But what shall bind thy sons from disputing their uncle's right ?" Then Bhîshma said : " I promise never to marry at all ; so there shall be no sons to me who may dispute their uncle's right. Now do thou let my father have his wish." And because of his fearful promises the Devas cried out with a bodiless voice : " He has been known as Devavrata so long ; he shall now be known as Bhîshma—the Terrible"—terrible surely to himself but most loved and most dear to all true Hindu hearts. King Shântanu too, when he heard that the vows had been already made and could not now be helped, took Satyavati to wife ; but in the fulness of his father's love bestowed on Bhîshma the gift of death at his own will alone. Men that prevail over their passions thus, and can conserve their manhood perfectly, may well prevail against the might of death itself, long as they like.*

On the other hand, it was Duryodhana's stubborn insolence and disobedience to his parents that precipitated the war which destroyed his house.† Over and over again his father pleaded with him to yield to the just demands of the Pâṇdavas, and give them a share in their ancestral property, but Duryodhana scorned his prayers and persisted in his own way. Even when his mother, Gâṇḍhâri, begged him in open sabhâ to obey his father and to regard his duty, he treated her harshly and disrespectfully, and so brought on his head the doom of failure. No son can succeed who grieves his father or mother by disobedience or by disrespect.

The Teacher is added to the Father and Mother by the Sanâṭana Dharma, as the third great object of reverence and service, and we see this virtue also in the ancient heroes who should serve as examples to all Hindu boys. How deep is the love, how unflinching the reverence, shown by the Pândavas to Bhîṣhma, to Droṇa, even when compelled to fight against them ; see them bowing at their teacher's feet ere the battle joins on Kurukṣhetra ;* and when Dhriṣṭadyumna seized the white locks of Droṇa, hear the agonised cry of Arjuna : “ Bring the teacher alive ! do not slay him ! he should not be slain ! ” and his heart-broken sob when the crime is complete : “ I have sunk into hell, overcome with shame.” †

* Mahâbhârata, Âdi Parva—c. † Ibid., Udyoga Parva—cxxx.

The only valid reason for disobedience to the Guru is held to lie, in the Sanâṭana Dharma, in previous promise or clear duty. Bhîṣhma, the example of dharma, gives a striking illustration of this in his career. After the death of his father Shânṭanu, Bhîṣhma, in accordance with his vow, placed his younger brother Chitrângada on the throne, and when Chitrângada was slain in battle, then he placed the second brother Vichitravîrya on the throne of Hastinâpura. Looking for suitable wives for Vichitravîrya, Bhîṣhma heard that the three daughters of the King of Kâshî were about to hold a Svayamvara, and were in all respects worthy of marriage with his brother. He went to Kâshî, and by his sole might in battle carried them off from the midst of the assembled candidates for their hands. When he brought them to Hastinâpura the younger two, Ambikâ and Ambâlîka, willingly consented to marry Vichitravîrya ; but the eldest, Ambâ, said she wished to marry Shâlva, King of another country, having chosen him for husband long before.* Bhîshma sent her with all honour to King Shâlva ; but he sent her back saying she had been won in battle from him and he could not take her back as a gift. Then Ambâ said to Bhîshma : " If Shâlva will not marry me, because you won me from him in battle, then you must marry me yourself." Bhîshma was greatly distressed for her sake, but in view of his vow of lifelong celibacy could not consent. Then Ambâ was very angry and went to Bhîshma's Guru Parashurâma ; and Parashurâma sided with her and ordered Bhîshma to marry Ambâ. But he declined, deeming the keeping of his vow a higher duty than obedience to his teacher in a wrongful order. And ultimately there was a great battle between Parashurâma and Bhîshma. For many days the single combat lasted, and many wounds were received by both ; and more than once they fainted with fatigue and loss of blood and shock of serious wound ; but reviving again, they renewed the fight, till on the twenty-eighth day, the aged Parashurâma acknowledged that he could do no more ; and Bhîshma won his cause. Yet because however unwillingly, he had brought much sorrow upon Ambâ, karma decreed that she should prove the means of his death.

* Mahâbhâratam Bhîṣhma Parva—xliii.

† Ibid. Droṇa, Parva cxciii—cxciv.

* *Mahâbhârata*m, Âdi Parva, cii.

Reverence to the Aged fitly closes the list of virtues which should flower when we come into relation with our superiors, and it was one of the marked characteristics of the ancient Hindu character. The wisdom which is the fruit of long experience is the precious treasure in possession of the aged, and they willingly pour this forth for the benefit of the teachable, courteous, respectful youth. In the hurry of modern life, this respect for the aged is apt to be trampled under foot, and it is the more necessary that care should be taken to cultivate it.

न युज्यमानया भक्त्या भगवत्यखिलात्मनि ।

सदृशोऽस्ति शिवः पन्था योगिनां ब्रह्मसिद्धये ॥

ज्ञानवैराग्ययुक्तेन भक्तियुक्तेन चात्मना ।

परिपश्यत्युदासीनं प्रकृतिं च हतौजसम् ॥

सतां प्रसङ्गान्मम वीर्यसंविदो

भवन्ति हृत्कर्णरसायनाः कथाः ।

तज्जोषणादाश्वपवर्गवर्त्मनि

श्रद्धा रतिर्भक्तिरनुक्रमिष्यति ॥
भक्त्या पुमान् जातविराग ऐन्द्रियाद्
दृष्टश्रुतान्मद्रचनानुचिन्तया ।
चित्तस्य यत्तो ग्रहणो योगयुक्तो-
यतिष्यते ऋजुभिर्योगमार्गैः ॥
असेवयाऽयं प्रकृतेर्गुणानां
ज्ञानेन वैराग्यविजृम्भितेन ।
योगेन मय्यर्पितया च भक्त्या
मां प्रत्यगात्मानमिहावरुन्धे ॥*

“There is no other path to the attainment of Brahman, so auspicious for yogîs, as devotion towards the Lord who is the Âtmâ of all.

“With his mind full of wisdom, dispassion and devotion, he seeth Prakṛiti losing its power and Puruṣha as stainless.

“Where the good gather, there are heard the stories that give knowledge of My Power, and are as nectar to the ear and heart. Listening to them, he turneth rapidly to the path of Mokṣha with faith and joy and devotion.

“Turning away with dispassion from sensuous sights and sounds because of devotion to Me, he dwelleth ever in thought on (the mysteries of) My creation, and thus, restraining his mind, essayeth the straight paths of yoga and attaineth union.

* Viṣṇu-Bhâgavata, III xxv—18, 19, 25, 27.

“Giving up the service of the attributes of Prakṛiti, his knowledge and yoga (realisation of Unity) blossoming with (the help of) vairâgya, and his devotion offered unto Me, he realiseth Me as the Pratyagâtâmâ (the Inmost Self).”

स्वभावमेके कवयो वदन्ति कालं तथान्वे परिमुह्यमानाः ।
देवस्यैष महिमा तु लोके येनेदं भ्राम्यते ब्रह्मचक्रम् ॥

*

*

*

तमीश्वराणां परमं महेश्वरं तं देवतानां परमं च दैवतम् ।
पतिं पतीनां परमं परस्तात् विदाम देवं भुवनेशमीड्यम् ॥
न तस्य कार्यं करणाञ्च विद्यते न तत्समश्चाभ्याधिकश्चदृश्यते ।
परास्य शक्तिर्विविधैव श्रूयते स्वाभाविकी ज्ञानबलक्रिया च ॥
न तस्य कश्चित् पतिरस्ति लोके न चेशिता नैव च तस्य लिङ्गम् ।
सकारणं करणाधिपाधिपो न चास्य कश्चिज्जानिता न चाधिपः ॥
एको वशी निष्क्रियाणां बहूनामेकं बीजं बहुधा यः करोति ।
तमात्मस्थं येऽनुपश्यन्ति धीरास्तेषां सुखं शाश्वतं नेतरेषाम् ॥
नित्यो नित्यानां चेतनश्चेतनाना-

मेको बहूनां यो विदधाति कामान् ।

तत्कारणं सांख्ययोगाधिगम्यं

ज्ञात्वा देवं मुच्यते सर्वपाशैः ॥*

“From its own nature, some Sages say, others from time arising (came the universe); verily from the majesty of God revolves in this world the Brahma-wheel.

*

*

*

*

* Shvetâshvataropaniṣat, vi—1, 7, 8, 9, 12, 13.

“ Him of Îshvaras the supreme and great Îshvara, Him of Devas the supreme Divinity, of Lords the Lord, the greatest of the great, God, the adorable Ruler of the worlds, (Him) we know.

“ He needeth no instrument nor hath aught to do, nor is there any found who is equal or superior to Him ; His supreme energy is self-dependent and manifold, Wisdom, Power and Activity.

“ None in the world is His lord, nor his ruler, nor His cause ; He is the Cause, the Ruler of the rulers of the senses, of Him there is no source, no sovereign.

“ The one Ruler of the many actionless, He maketh manifold the seed ; therefore the wise who perceive Him within themselves, for them is eternal joy, for more others.

“ Eternal of Eternals, Intelligence of Intelligences, One among many, who fulfilleth the wishes of all—having known that Cause, attained by the Sânkhya and the Yoga, (man) is freed from all bonds.

अराजके हि लोकेऽस्मिन् सर्वतो विद्रते भयात् ।

रक्षार्थमस्य सर्वस्य राजानमसृजत् प्रभुः ॥

इन्द्रानित्यमार्काणामग्नेश्च वरुणस्य च ।

चन्द्रवित्तेशयोश्चैव मात्रा निर्दृत्य शाश्वतीः ॥

तदर्थं सर्वभूतानां गोप्तारं धर्ममात्मजम् ।
ब्रह्मतेजोमयं दण्डमसृजत्पूर्वमीश्वरः ॥

* * * *

दण्डः शास्ति प्रजास्सर्वा दण्ड एवामिरक्षति ।
दण्डः सुप्तेषु जागर्ति दण्डं धर्मं विदुर्बुधाः ॥

* * * *

तस्याहुः संप्रणेतारं राजानं सत्यवादिनम् ।
समीक्ष्यकारिणं प्राज्ञं धर्मकामार्थकोविदम् ॥
तं राजा प्रणयन्सम्यग्निर्बर्गेणाभिवर्धते ।
कामात्मा विषमः क्षुद्रो दण्डेनैव निहन्यते ॥
दण्डो हि सुमहत्तेजो दुर्धरश्चाकृतात्मभिः ।
धर्माद्विचलितं हन्ति नृपमेव सबान्धवम् ॥ *

“For the protection of the whole world God created the King, when the Kingless people were scattered through fear.

“(He created the King) out of immortal portions taken from Indra, Vāyu, Yama, the Sun, the Fire, Varuṇa, the Moon and the Lord of wealth.

* * * *

“For him the Lord created His own son Dharma, the Protector of all beings, as the Daṇḍa (Sceptre, or Rod of power) clothed with the Brahma-radiance.

* * * *

“The Daṇḍa governeth all the people, the Danḍa alone protecteth ; the Danḍa waketh while others sleep, the wise know the Danḍa as Dharma.

* * * *

“They declare the wielder of Danḍa to be the King, that speaketh the truth, acteth after deliberation, is wise, and versed in Dharma, Kâma and Artha.

“Wielding it righteously, the King increaseth in all three ; but if he be given up to Kâma, unjust and mean, then he himself is slain by the Danḍa.

“A great fire is the Danḍa, difficult to be borne by those who have not achieved the Self ; it slayeth, together with his family, the King that strayeth from Dharma.”

तेन धर्मोत्तरश्चायं कृतो लोको महात्मना ।

रञ्जिताश्च प्रजाः सर्वास्तेन राजेति शब्द्यते ॥*

“By the great-souled King was this world made full of Dharma and all the people were gladdened ; hence is he called the King.”

राजा प्रजानां हृदयं गरीयो

गतिः प्रतिष्ठा सुखमुत्तमं च ।

समश्रिता लोकमिमं परं च

जयन्ति सम्यक् पुरुषा नरेन्द्र ॥

नराधिपश्चाप्यनुशिष्य मेदिनी

दमेन सत्येन च सौहृदेन ।

* *Mahâbhârata*m, SântiParva, lix—145.

महद्भिरिष्टा क्रतुभिर्महायशा-

स्त्रिविष्टपे स्थानमुपैति शाश्वतम् ॥*

“The King is the inmost heart of his people, he is their refuge, their honour, and their highest happiness ; relying on him, they conquer righteously this world and the next.

“The King also, having governed the earth with self-control, with truth, and with the heart of compassion, having sacrificed with many sacrifices, attaineth to fair fame and everlasting seat in Svarga.”

उपाध्यायान्दशाचार्य आचार्याणां शतं पिता ।

सहस्रं तु पितृन्माता गौरवेणातिरिच्यते ॥ †

“Ten Upâdhyâyas doth the Âchârya exceed and a hundred Âchâryas the Father ; but the Mother exceedeth even a thousand Fathers in the right to be honored.”

आचार्यश्च पिता चैव माता भ्राता च पूर्वजः ।

नार्तेनाप्यवमन्तव्या ब्राह्मणेन विशेषतः ॥

* * * *

तेषां त्रयाणां शुश्रूषा परमं तप उच्यते ।

* * * *

त एव हि त्रयो लोकास्त एव त्रय आश्रमाः ।

त एव हि त्रयो वेदास्त एवोक्तास्त्रयोऽग्नयः ॥

* * * *

* Ibid, lxviii, 59—60.

† Manusmriti, ii—145.

सर्वे तस्यादृता धर्मा यस्यैते त्रय आदृताः ।

अनादृतास्तु यस्यैते सर्वास्तस्याफलाः क्रियाः ॥*

“The Teacher, the Father, the Mother, and an elder Brother must not be treated with disrespect, especially by a Brâhmaṇa, though one be grievously offended (by them).

“The service of these three is declared to be the best austerity.

* * * *

“For they are declared to be the three worlds, the three orders, the three Vedas, they the three sacred fires.

* * * *

“All duties have been fulfilled by him who honours these three ; but to him who honours them not, all rites remain fruitless.”

ऊर्ध्वे प्राणा ह्युत्क्रामन्ति यूनः स्थविर आयति ।

प्रत्युत्थानाभिवादाभ्यां पुनस्तान्प्रतिपद्यते ॥

अभिवादनशीलस्य नित्यं वृद्धोपसेविनः ।

चत्वारि तस्य वर्धन्त आयुः प्रज्ञा यशो बलम् ॥†

“The vital airs of a young man mount upwards to leave his body when an elder approaches ; but by rising to meet him and saluting, he recovers them.

* Manusmṛiti, ii, 225, 229, 230, 234. † Manusmṛiti, ii, 120—121.

“He, who habitually salutes and constantly pays reverence to the aged, obtains an increase of four things : length of life, knowledge, fame and strength.

CHAPTER IX.

VIRTUES AND VICES IN RELATION TO EQUALS.

WE have next to consider our relations with the equals that surround us on every side, and to know what virtues should be developed, what vices avoided, in order to make our home and our outer relations harmonious and happy. Let us first think of those of the home, for they are of primary importance ; pure and happy homes, in which family virtues are practised, make the foundation of prosperous States, of successful nations. We have seen the relations that should exist between parents and children, and we must now study those that should be found between husband and wife, between brothers and sisters.

The Hindu books are full of stories of the love that should bind a husband and wife together, or Conjugal Love. "Husband and wife are the same,"* says Manu ; they are one, not two ; love makes the two into one—love protective, sheltering, tender, on the side of the husband ; love yielding, sweet, devoted, on the side of the wife. "Let mutual fidelity continue until death."* Râmachandra and Sitâ form an ideal husband and wife ; they enjoy all life's happinesses together, and suffer together all life's sorrows ; they take counsel together in all perplexities, and share together all difficulties. We see them first in unclouded bliss, Prince and Princess, happy as the day is long ; when the coronation of Râmachandra approaches, we see them fasting and praying together ; when the shock of the sentence of exile comes, Sitâ accepts it carelessly at first caring only for her husband's presence, and she would go with him, she " whose heart is wholly thine, knowing not another, ever clinging to thee resolute to die if left by thee." Thorns would touch her skin like soft linen, dust would be as sandal-powder, grass would serve as blanket, roots and leaves as pleasant food, so long as she was by her husband's side. " O Rama, thy company is heaven, thy absence hell." Only when he pleads with her to remain behind, does her heart fail her. And when he bids her come she tosses gaily to her attendants all her costly robes and priceless jewels, stripping herself of all that women love, without a sigh, caring only for the joyous fact that exile could not separate husband and wife. Happy as a girl, she is said to be playing in the forest glades unmindful of the lost royal splendour, since she is, night and day, at Rama's side. But though so blithe, she yet is wise, and we hear her counselling her husband with grave thoughtful words, as they wander on the outskirts of the forest of Daṇḍaka. When she is carried away by Râvaṇa, the mighty Rākṣhasa, how her husband's love breaks forth in protracted search, in wild outbursts of lament. "Sitā ! Sitā !" he cries in his anguish as he searches for her, " art thou hiding, art thou playing ? Oh come ! Such sport is my death." While laments and seeks, Sitā is exposed to every temptation to be unfaithful, to every terror and cruel threat. "Devoted to one husband, I will never sin against him. With wealth and riches thou canst not tempt me. As the rays of the sun are his own, so am I Rāghava's alone."*

* Manusmriti, ix—45,

* Manusmriti, ix—101.

And hear the story of Sâvitri, who won her husband from the grasp of Yama, King of Death. King Ashvapati, of the Maḍra lands, obtained a daughter by long worship of the Devas. They called her Sâvitri. Fair was she as a figure of gold, and sweet as the jessamine flower, and the people worshipped her as a Devi, come to them for their good deeds. When she came of age, her father said to her : "Choose thou a fitting husband for thyself." And she went forth a search, with royal retinue. When she returned, after the lapse of many months, the Rishi Nârada was staying with her father ; and in his presence she announced the choice that she had made. "King Dyumatsena of the Shâlva country, old and blind and driven from his country by his enemies, lives in a forest, leading a hermit's life. His son, Saṭyavân, have I chosen for my spouse." Then Nârada said : "Alas ! O King ! innocent Sâvitri hath done ill." "Is he not fitting mate for Sâvitri ?" the King asked Nârada. "Is he weak in mind or body, wanting in forgiveness or in courage ?" Nârada said : "In nothing is he wanting of all this. Strong and radiant as the sun himself is Saṭyavân, generous like Rantideva, just like Shibi, magnificent like Yayâti, and beautiful like the moon. But all this wealth of virtues must pass away from the earth within a year. His span of life is very short." With sinking heart Sâvitri heard the Sage's words, yet said : "But once can a person say 'I give away.' And I have said it once : 'I give myself away to Saṭyavân.' I cannot choose again."

* Râmâyana passim.

Nârada said : "Because thy daughter wavers not, O King ! I give my blessing to the marriage ;" and went away.

Swift messengers went to D̥yumatsena, and he sent back word to Ashvapati : "I once myself desired alliance with thee, but saw not how to ask for it in my fallen state. Now that the blessed Sâvitri is coming to me of her own accord, I know for sure that Lakṣhmî's self is coming back unto our ancient house." So the marriage came to pass. Joyously Sâvitri passed from her palaces to the hermit's cottage. Eagerly she attended to the least wants of her aged father-in-law and mother-in-law, rejoicing to perform the humblest duties of the household, and by her tender ways and loving words enslaved the heart of her husband. But ever underneath all this, the fire of secret agony lighted by the words of Nârada burned within her soul ; and ever she counted the days of the prescribed year. At last the hour appointed for the death of Satvavân was only four days distant. Then she resolved to seek the help of the Devas by fast and prayer. And all the three days she fasted, taking not a drop of water. Early she rose on the morning of the fateful day, finished the morning rites, and touched the feet of her elders. All the ascetics dwelling in that forest blessed her on that day, saying that she should never know the pangs of widowhood. And when the time came for Satyavân to go forth with his axe upon his shoulder into the wood for work, as usual, she made her heart strong and followed him. He asked in wonder why ; but she said she wished to go with him that day ; and so they went, beholding the beauties of the hills, the waters, the woods, and the birds and beasts. Then Satyavân began his daily labours, filled his wallet with fruit and felled dried branches for fuel. But suddenly a faintness came upon him and his head ached greatly, and he said this to Sāvitrî and lay down. Then Sāvitrî placed his head on her lap and sat, with breaking heart, awaiting she knew not what. All at once she beheld a majestic and awe-striking form, dark yet shining, clad in red attire, standing beside her, and gazing with fixed yet flashing eyes at Satyavân. Gently she placed her husband's head on the ground, stood up and made obeisance. And the form said : "The days of Satyavân are ended : I am Yama, Lord of Death ; and because he is so virtuous, I have come to take him away myself, rather than send my emissaries as usual." And he drew the Sûkṣhma Sharîra of Satyavân from his fleshy body, and departed with it towards the south. And Sâvitri also followed. Then Yama said : "Desist, O Sâvitri ! go back and perform the funeral rites of thy lord. Thou hast discharged thy duty, and come as far behind thy husband as mortal may go." Sâvitri replied : "Whither my husband goeth, thither I go. This is the eternal law for man and wife. If I have loved my lord with undivided love, if I have served my elders reverently, if there be any power in penances, then be my path unchecked, out of thy favour, Yama !" And innocently like a little child she repeated the lessons of dharma that her loving elders and her own gentle soul had taught her. "By faithful service, treading household ways, to wisdom have I won and to religious merit. Close not these ways, O Death, depriving me of my gathered fruits." "Wise and reasonable art thou, O Sâvitri, and thy words are sweet. Save thy husband's life, I give thee any boon." "His father lives in darkness, gracious King ; by thy favour let his eyes once more behold the day." "Fairest of earth's daughters, I grant the boon thou seekest. And now return, O weary earth-born feet, that may not tread the gloomy path of Death." "Where he, my husband, goes, I still must follow. Fruitful is righteous company, O King of Death, and sweet is it to dwell with one like thee. Not fruitless may such fair abiding prove." "Take then a second boon as fruit, O peerless lady, but ask not for thy husband's soul," said Yama. "Give then, O King of mortal worlds, his kingdom to my husband's father, his kingdom rent from him by evil men." "He shall regain his throne," said Yama, "and reign thereon. And now go back, fair dame, nor follow further." But with sweet words and honeyed praises, Sâvitrî still followed the Lord of Death, and won from him two other boons, one hundred sons for her father, and one hundred for herself. When the fourth boon was granted, Sâvitrî spoke in praise of righteous living and of high discharge of duty, till Yama, charmed by her eloquence and wisdom, granted her yet another boon, and Sâvitrî quickly claimed her husband's life, since Yama had granted her a hundred sons, and righteousness would be infringed if other were their father save her husband. Thus did a faithful wife win back from Death her husband, and brought to his family prosperity, riches, and length of days, since even Yama, King of Death, is weaker than a pure wife's faithful love.*

* Makâbhâratam, Vana Parva, cxcii—cxcviii.

Nor can the Hindu boy forget the story of Damayantî, the wife of Nala. Nala, son of Vîrasena, and King of the Nishâdhas, loved Damayantî, daughter of Bhîma, the King of the Vidarbhas, and Damayantî loved Nala, though they had not met each other, but each had only heard the other's praises as being incomparable upon earth. Now the Svayamvara of the princess was proclaimed, and thereto went King Nala, and Damayantî chose him to be her husband, although the Devas, Indra, Agni, Varuṇa and Yama, were among the suitors for her hand; and Nala and Damayantî lived together in great love for eleven happy years, and two children were born to them. In the twelfth year came Puṣkara, and challenged King Nala to play him at dice, and Nala played, and lost again and again, till at length he had lost to Puṣkara his kingdom and all his wealth, even his garments, and went forth an exile, with only one cloth, half covering his body. Then Damayantî, his wife—having sent her children to her father's care when she saw how the games were going—went forth after him, clad also in a single cloth, and in the outskirts of the city they wandered, hungry and athirst. To complete their misery, Nala lost his cloth in the attempt to catch therewith some birds for food, and hopeless and desperate, he wished Damayanti to be spared the suffering of hunger, and repeatedly pointed out to her the road to her former home. But Damayanti, clung to him, weeping, sobbing that she would not leave him, that when he was weary she would soothe him, for in every sorrow there was no such medicine as a loving and faithful wife. Presently, wearied out, she lay sleeping on the bare ground, and Nala argued with himself that it would be kinder to leave her, so that she might seek her relatives, than to keep her wandering in misery with him. Thus thinking, he cut in half, with a sword that was lying near, the cloth she wore, leaving one half around her; and wrapping round himself the other half, he fled from her, mad with grief. The hopeless Damayanti awaking, found herself alone, and bitter was her grief, more for Nala's loneliness than for her own loss. She sought her husband eagerly, but found him not—found instead a huge serpent, that wrapped her closely in his coils. How she escaped, and what fresh perils befell her ere she found at last shelter as companion to a princess of the Chedis, is told at length in the Nalopākhyāna. Meanwhile Nala had rescued a snake ringed round with fire, and by the magic of the snake his form was changed and became unrecognisable, and he wandered till he reached the city of King Rituparna, whose charioteer he became. Thus were husband and wife severed, they who loved each other so dearly and so well. Now King Bhîma sent forth Brâhmanas to search for his daughter and for Nala, and one of them, Sudeva by name, recognised the sad Queen as she sat in the King of Chedi's palace, and told her piteous story to the Queen-mother, who proved to be her mother's sister. Then Damayantî, in spite of warmest offers of hospitality, departed to her father's house, and King Bhîma sent out again messengers to seek Nala, charged to bear a message to be uttered loudly in every gathering of men, which in veiled allusions, intelligible to Nala only, prayed him to return to his loving, sorrowing wife. Long they sought, and at last found one who, after hearing the outcried message, spoke sadly of wives whom their husbands had deserted, and he was called Bâhuka, charioteer of Rituparna, King in Ayodhyâ. Returning to Damayantî Paruâda, the messenger, told what had been said, and her quick woman's wit devised a way by which to bring Nala to her side. "Go to King Rituparna," she said, "and tell him that Damayanti holds another Svayamvara on the morrow after thy arrival in Ayodhyâ." For she knew that none save Nala could so drive as to reach her father's palace from Ayodhyâ within so brief a space. As she planned, so it happened, Rituparna bade Bâhuka drive him swiftly to the city of the Viḍarbhas, and Bâhuka, sore at heart, chose swift steeds and drove them, as only he could drive, reaching the city of the Viḍarbhas by that same evening, and there, by Damayanti's tender wiles, he was led to give signs that he was indeed Nala, as she suspected, for he wept over his children when he saw them, and he cooked as only Nala could cook; then she bade them bring Bâhuka into her presence, and husband and true wife recognised each other, and long thereafter lived they in wedded bliss, their kingdom regained, and their children around them.*

Moreover, a wife who truly loves and serves her husband gains more of inner development and knowledge than she can gain by long austerities and painful penances. For thus we read in the story of the Brâhmaṇa's wife who angered Kaushika. Now the Brâhmaṇa Kaushika made great tapas. One day he sat in meditation under a tree, when a crane sitting on a branch befouled his person. He opened his eyes and looked up angrily at the crane; and, such was the psychic power stored in Kaushika by his tapas, that the crane was killed by that angry glance as if struck by lightning. Kaushika was sad at the death of the crane, and glad also with the pride of tested power. He went into the neighbouring town to beg as usual for his daily meal, and asked the first good housewife that he came across for it. As she was fetching him some food her husband came in, tired with his daily work, covered with dust. Asking Kaushika to stay a while, she began to attend to her husband. Some time elapsed and Kaushika's impatience grew. When she came back to him at last with the food he needed, he looked at her with angrier eyes than he had looked with at the crane, and asked her how she had neglected the Brâhmana for so long. She answered gently: "My duty to my husband is more urgent than to thee. Restrain thy wrath and learn forgiveness, Brâhmana! Look not at me with anger; that will injure thee. I am no crane!" Kaushika was thunderstruck and questioned her and she replied: "No penances have I performed to gather psychic powers; only served my husband single-mindedly. If thou wouldst learn yet more about the virtues of our simple household duties, go to the fowler of distant Mithilâ." Kaushika went, with a humbled mind, to Mithilâ, and stood at the fringe of the great crowd of customers around the fowler's shop. The fowler saw Kaushika, went up to him, and, bowing low to the Brâhmaṇa, said: "I know why the faithful housewife sent thee to me, and shall resolve thy doubts and show thee why I can do so." Then the fowler took Kaushika to his home, and showed him his aged parents, as we have already seen.*

How brothers should show Brotherly Love we read in the whole story of the Râmâyana, and it is said that Lakṣhmaṇa was like Râma's life, so dear and close the bond, nor would they sleep apart, nor apart engage in sport; we see him follow Râmachandra into the forest, and stand waking on watch while Râma slept; we see him sharing in the search for Sîtâ, ever wise in counsel and loving in sympathy; and when Lakṣhmaṇa lies senseless, arrow-pierced, before Lankâ, hear Râma's piteous cry: "What have I to do with life and what with war, now Lakṣhmaṇa lies wounded on the field of battle? Why, forsaking me dost thou wander in other worlds? Without thee, life and victory, nay, Sîtâ's self, are worthless."

The whole story of the Mahâbhâratam shows how brotherly love and union lead to prosperity and fame ; for never do we find the Pândavas with warring interests, or leading separated lives. Yudhishthira represents the family, and all the efforts of the younger are directed to his enrichment and his prosperity. For him they fight, and all the wealth they gain is gained for him ; for him Arjuna seeks and wins the divine weapons, by sharp tapas and fierce struggles and long and weary wanderings. And equally does Yudhishthira cherish them, regarding their joys and sorrows as his own.

Yudhishthira has risen into Svarga, and looks round on every side to find his brothers and his wife. "I desire to go whither my brothers are gone," he cries again and again, and nowhere, among radiant Devas and triumphant Râjâs, can he see the faces he so dearly loves. "Ye mighty ones !" at last he cries, "what is your heaven to me apart from them ? That is heaven where my brothers are. This is not heaven for me." Then the Devas bade a heavenly messenger lead forth the King, and take him to the land where now his loved ones lived ; and turning their backs on Svarga they went out, and began to tread a path that led into ever-deepening gloom. Darker and darker grew the air, gloomier and gloomier yet the shadowy way. Foul things of nauseous smell and horrid shape crowded round them as they went, and beneath their feet the ground was slippery with blood, and was strewn with fragments of the corpses of the slain. Sharp thorns and piercing leaves obstructed it, and burning sand, and iron stones white-hot. Astounded, the King questioned his celestial guide, who told him that he had been bidden to lead him thither, but if he were weary, he could return. Slowly, doubtfully, Yudhiṣṭhira turned, sure that his brothers could not dwell in region so foul and evil; but as he turned sad cries arose on every hand, and piteous prayers that he would stay a while. "Who are you?" asked the wondering King, and answers sobbed from every side. "I am Karna." "I am Bhīṣma." "I am Arjuna." "I am Nakula." "I am Sahadeva." "I am Draupadi." And so with others, dearly loved on earth. "Go back, go back to Svarga," cried the King, wrought to anger by his brothers' wrongs; "go back to those who sent you here as guide. Not with them my place, but here, here, where my loved ones dwell. Go thou back to Svarga's barren joys; better with these in pain than there in lonely bliss." And as he spake heaven's fragrance breathed around, and all was balmy air and shining light and thronging Devas. For stronger than hell is love, and fidelity than pain.*

Among the virtues to be shown outside the family, Hospitality stands in the first rank, and how highly it is to be valued may be seen in the story of the half-golden mongoose that attended the great sacrifice of King Yudhishthira, where all the arches and the stakes and sacrificial vessels were of gold, and whereat all men took as they would of gems and money, none forbidding them. Yet cried the mongoose, that the sacrifice of the wealth there gathered was of less worth than a small measure of powdered barley, given by a poor Brâhmaṇa to his guest. And thus he told the tale. There was a Brâhmaṇa who kept the unḥha vow, and daily lived on the grains of corn he gathered, making one frugal meal a day, he and his wife, with son and daughter-in-law. And a terrible famine laid waste the land and few were the grains left upon the husking-ground by threshers, and ever thinner and thinner grew he and his family, till they were but as living skeletons. One day it happened that he had gathered a little barley, and, having powdered it, the wife divided it into four, that each might have a scanty meal and joyfully they sat down to eat. But ere yet they had touched the little heaps of grain, a guest stood in the doorway, and quickly rising, the Brâhmaṇa brought him in, and gave him water and a seat, and then set before him his own share of the scanty food. The guest ate, but still was hungry, and the wife brought her share and placed it in her husband's hands that he might put it before the guest. "Shaking art thou with weakness, mother of my son," he said: "keep thou the food and eat, lest my home lose its sunshine." But she pressed on him the food, that the dharma of hospitality might not be broken, and, with a sigh, he took and gave. Yet still the guest was fain for more, and the son brought his meagre share, and the brâhmaṇa, aching for his son's hunger and the emaciation of his youthfull body, laid that third portion before the guest. But, alas! even then the guest was still hungry, for each little share was as nothing for a hungry man, and the young wife's share was now held out to the host's shaking hands, but he drew them back with anguish at his heart. "Not yours, my little one, not yours, not yours." "Father of my son's father," she said, with sweet humility of voice and gesture, "shut me not out from sharing your good deeds. As a Deva is a guest. Feed him, then, from this my food, which is as thine own flesh." Weeping he took, and then with gentle smile laid it before his guest, who took and ate. Then, as the guest rose up, bright light shone out, and in the midst he stood, radiant and splendid; for truly was the guest a Deva, the Lord of Righteousness, Dharma, the strong and pure. And in a few grains that he had left uneaten, the mongoose rolled, and half his body turned to gold by the magic of that sacrifice, so priceless is the gracious virtue of hospitality, so transforming is its power.*

* Mahâbhârata, Mahâprasthânika Parva, iii, and Svargârohana Parva, i.

A wicked fowler, black in skin like his own deeds of daily murder of innocent birds and beasts, and red in the eyes like his burning malice against his victims, was once overtaken by a terrible thunderstorm in the middle of a forest. The open glades were converted into lakes and the pathways into running streams in a moment. The higher lands to which he tried to find a way were invaded by bears and lions and other fierce denizens of the jungle. Shivering with cold, shaking with fear, he yet refrained not from his cruel habits.

* Mahābhāratam, Vana Parva, iv—vi.

Espying a poor she-pigeon lying on the ground, beaten down by the torrents of the rains and frozen with the cold he picked her up and mercilessly thrust her into the cage he carried. Wandering on he shortly came to a lordly tree that stood in the midst of the forest, and extended a benevolent shade and shelter to myriads of the feathered tribe. It seemed to have been placed there on purpose by the Creator for the good of all creatures, like a good man for the benefit of the world. The fowler took refuge beneath the spreading boughs of the tree. By and by, the clouds dispersed, and the stars shone out. But the fowler was too far away from his home and resolved to pass the night under the tree. As he lay under the tree he heard the he-pigeon lamenting: "Alas! thou hast not yet returned, dear wife! What can have happened to thee? If that dear wife of mine, with her bright rose-eyes, sweet coo, and softest plumes, cometh not back to my nest, my life shall no longer be worth living. The house is not the home, in truth; the wife is the home. She eats when I eat, she bathes when I bathe; she rejoices when I rejoice, and sorrows when I sorrow. Yet if I am angry, she always speaks with sweetness only. Life is empty without such a spouse. Without such, a palace is an empty wilderness. Such a one is a trusted companion and beloved associate in all one's acts of virtue, profit and pleasure. The wife is the richest possession of her lord. She is his one unfailing associate in all the concerns of life. She is the best of medicines for all the diseases of the mind. There is no friend like unto the wife, no refuge better than she."

Hearing the lament of her husband, the she-pigeon caged by the cruel fowler said to herself: "Unlimited is my happiness even in the midst of agony that my husband thinketh thus of me. She is no wife with whom her lord is not content. But we must also think of this poor fowler, overtaken by the cruel storm and kept away from home. He is now our guest, having taken shelter underneath our abode." And she cried aloud to her husband, explaining the plight of the fowler. The pigeon too, with instant sympathy, forgetting his own sorrows, addressed the fowler: "Welcome to my house as honoured guest, and tell me what to do." The fowler said: "I am stiff with cold; warm me if thou canst." The bird gathered together a heap of dead and fallen leaves; picked up one in his beak, flew and very soon returned with a tiny ember on it from some neighbouring village. In a moment the fowler found himself warmed by a grateful fire, and the bird asked him again for service to be done. The fowler asked for food this time. The bird thought : " I have no stores wherewith to feed him ; and yet a hungry guest may not be left unfed." As he reflected deeply, a new light arose within his mind and he cried to his guest : " I shall gratify thee ! I have heard in former days from high-souled Rishis, and the Devas and Pitris also that there is great merit in honoring a guest. O friend ! do thou be kind to me and accept my humble service !" With this he flew around the fire three times and then entered the flames, offering his body to his guest for food.

At that awful act of uttermost guest-honoring, an unknown horror of his own past life on sin seized on the mind of the fowler, tearing up his evil nature by its deepest roots, and leaving him all shattered. " Thou art my highest teacher, high-souled bird ! Thou showest me my duty ! From this day I expiate my sins, denying rosy comfort to this sin-fed body, evaporating it with all its crimes by daily fast and tapas, as the strong rays of the summer sun dry up a small and dirty pool. Taught by this example I shall practise righteousness alone henceforth." He threw away his club, his nets and traps and iron cage, and set at liberty the widowed mate of the deceased bird. The she-pigeon thus released, circled round the funeral pyre of her husband, weeping : "Limited are the gifts that the woman receiveth from her father or her mother or her son. But the gifts that the husband giveth to her are limitless ! He giveth her his all and all himself ! After all these years of happiness with thee, I cannot live alone !" and she threw herself also into the fire.

With a new-born vision the fowler beheld the two ascending to heaven in glorious forms ; and the more confirmed in his resolve thereby, he took up his abode in the forest, living a blameless life thenceforward, till the forest-fires, kindled by dried branches rubbing against each other in a summer-storm, consumed his body, as the penance had consumed his sins.*

Readiness to forgive wrongs is a sign of a truly noble nature. It is said of Râmachandra that a hundred injuries left no trace upon his memory, while one benefit was graven there.† And listen how Vidûra forgot insult and forgave. Kind

* *Mahâbhârata*m, Shânî Parva—cxliii—cxlix.

† Râmâyana Ayodhyâkânda.

Dhritarâshtra craved Vidura's help touching the evil conduct of Duryodhana, and Vidura counselled his brother wisely but firmly, praying him to enforce on Duryodhana his duty of peace with his Pândava cousins, and to make his supporters win forgiveness from the wronged and exiled princes. At this, Dhritarâshtra became much incensed, and hotly blamed his righteous brother, accusing him of partiality, and finally of foul disloyalty, adding gross insult to the charge and going from his brother's side in wrath. Then Vidura sadly sought the Pândavas, and told how he was sent away with angry words, and counselled them with wisdom, urging urbanity and gentle ways. And after Vidura had gone, King Dhritarâshtra repented him of his harshness and injustice, and sent after him to beg him to return, exclaiming: "Go, O Sañjaya, and see if my brother lives, he whom I have driven away in angry madness. Never has he wronged me, nor committed any fault, while I have grievously wronged him. Seek him and bring him hither, Sañjaya, the wise." So Sañjaya went, wondering whether Vidura, the calm and strong, would pardon his weaker brother's changing moods, and become again the pillar of his throne. And going to the forest, he found Vidura, highly honoured by the princes and by all, and approaching him, prayed him to return. Then Vidura, without hesitating even for a moment, rose and took leave of his royal nephews, and hastened to his elder brother's presence, who prayed forgiveness for the wrong committed. Gently Vidura spoke : " O King, I have forgiven. Worthy of highest reverence art thou, my elder, my superior. Eagerly have I come, longing to see thy face. And if I seemed to favour the sons of Pandu, it was because a man's heart yearneth over those who are distressed, more from emotion than from reason. Dear are thy sons to me as they, O King, but the sorrows of the latter moved my heart." Thus gently and magnanimously spoke the younger brother, forgetting, as unimportant, the insults he had received.*

Urbanity is a virtue very characteristic of the old Hindu life. We see the most exquisite politeness in language and in action, as we read how the great ones of the epic poems, good and bad alike, behaved towards guests and friends and foes. Râmachandra is gentle in speech, and prefaces his speeches with a kindly smile.† Lakshmi the Devi

* Mahâbhâratam, Ashvamedha Parva, xcii.

† Râmâyana, Ayodhyakânda, i.

of Prosperity, speaking of the Dânavas endued with sweet speech, with friendliness and with forgiveness, declares that She dwelt with them because of their virtues. When they gave way to wrath, and harshness, and unfair dealings, She left them, attended by the Devis who abide with Her—Hope, Faith, Intelligence, Contentment, Victory, Advancement and Forgiveness.* So Nârada is said to be sweet-speached, large-hearted, straightforward, free from wrath and greed, and therefore everywhere regarded with respect and love.† Again, Bhîshma teaches that we should not disparage others by look, word or thought nor speak evil of any ; that we should never injure any, nor behave with unfriendliness ; that we should pass with indifference opprobrious speeches, and, even when another seeks to anger us, should still speak agreeably, and when slandered, we should not slander in return.‡ So again Nârada described a Nâga, named Paḍma, who was walking on the threefold path of acts, knowledge and devotion, and spoke of him as ever hospitable, practising forgiveness, and abstaining from inflicting injuries. He was

* Mahâbhâratam, Shânti Parva, ccxxviii.

† Mahâbhâratam, Shânti Parva.—ccxxx.

‡ Mahâbhâratam, Shânti Parva, cclxxviii.

truthful in word and free from malice, kind of speech and seeking the benefit of all. A Brâhmana went to see him, and to learn from him, but on arriving at his house found him absent. His wife hospitably welcomed the stranger, and after exchanging courteous speech with her, he left her and waited patiently on the banks of the river the return of her husband. While waiting there, he did not eat, and the relatives of the absent Nâga, approaching him in great trouble of mind, urged that they were bound to show him hospitality. "The whole community, young and old, is being afflicted, since this thy fast implies that we are negligently leaving unperformed the duties of hospitality." Gently replied the Brâhmana that by their kindly wishes they had fed him, but he could not eat until the Nâga chief returned. Presently he arrived and in his conversation with his wife, we see the duties of the householder ; his religion is in doing good to all ; all who come as guests must be hospitably entertained ; the householder must be gentle, free from wrath and arrogance, must be generous and truthful.* Thus of old was taught the duty of the citizen to those around him.

* Mahâbhârata, Shânti Parva, cccvi—cc cxl.

पितृभिर्भ्रातृभिश्चैताः पतिभिर्देवैस्तथा ।
 पूज्याभूपयितव्याश्च बहु कल्याणमीप्सुभिः ॥
 यत्रनार्यस्तु पूज्यन्ते रमन्ते तत्र देवताः ।
 यत्रैतास्तु न पूज्यन्ते सर्वास्तत्राफलाः क्रियाः ॥
 शोचन्ति जामयो यत्र विनश्यत्याशु तत्कुलम् ।
 न शोचन्ति तु यत्रैता वर्धते तद्धि सर्वदा ॥
 जामयो यानि गेहानि यपन्त्यप्रतिपूजिताः ।
 तानि कृत्याहृतानि विनश्यन्ति समन्ततः ॥ *

"Women must be honoured and adorned by their fathers, brothers, husbands and brothers-in-law, who desire welfare.

"Where women are honoured, there the Devas are pleased ; but where they are not honoured, no sacred rite is fruitful.

"Where the female relatives live in grief, the family soon perishes utterly ; but that family in which they are not unhappy prospers ever.

"The houses in which female relatives, not being duly honoured, pronounce a curse, perish completely, as if destroyed by magic."

एतावानेव पुरुषो यज्जायात्मा प्रजेति ह ।

विप्राः प्राहुस्तथा चैतद्या भर्ता सा स्मृताङ्गना ॥ †

"This is the extent of the man : his wife, himself and his children ; Brâhmanas thus declare that

* Manusmriti, iii, 55—58. † Manusmriti, ix—45.

the husband and wife are known as the same.”

अन्योन्यस्याव्यभीचारो भवेदामराणान्तिकः ।

एष धर्मः समासेन ज्ञेयः स्त्रीपुंसयोः परः ॥

तथा नित्यं यतेयातां स्त्रीपुंसौ तु कृतक्रियौ ।

यथा नातिचरेतां तौ वियुक्तावितरेतरम् ॥ *

“ Let mutual fidelity continue until death ; this may be considered as the summary of the highest law for husband and wife.

“ Let man and woman, united in marriage, constantly exert themselves, that they be not dis-united nor violate their mutual fidelity.”

वृणानि भूमिखदकं वाक् चतुर्थी च सूनृता ।

एतान्यपि सतां गेहे नोच्छिद्यन्ते कदाचन ॥

*

*

*

अप्रणोद्यीऽतिथिः सायं सूर्योढो गृहमेधिना ।

काले प्राप्तस्त्वकाले वा नास्यानश्नगृहे वसेत् ॥

न वै स्वयं तदश्रीयादतिथिं यन्न भोजयेत् ।

धन्यं यशस्यमायुष्यं स्वर्ग्यं चातिथिभोजनम् ॥ †

“ Grass, room, water and fourthly, a kind word ; these are never wanting in the households of the good.

*

*

*

*

“ A guest who is sent by the sun in the evening must not be driven away by a householder ; whether he have come at a convenient or incon-

* Ibid., 101—102. † Ibid. iii, 101, 105—106.

venient time, he must not stay in the house without entertainment.

“Let him (the householder) not eat any food which he does not offer to his guest ; the hospitable reception of guests procures wealth, fame, long life, and heavenly bliss.”

सत्यं ब्रूयात्प्रियं ब्रूयान्नब्रूयात्सत्यमाप्रियम् ।

प्रियं च नानृतं ब्रूयादेष धर्मः सनातनः ॥*

“Let him speak the true, let him speak the pleasing, let him not speak an unpleasing truth, nor speak a pleasing falsehood ; this is the ancient law.”

यस्य वाङ्मनसी शुद्धे सम्यग्गुप्ते च सर्वदा ।

स वै सर्वमवाप्नोति वेदान्तोपगतं फलम् ॥

नारुन्तुदः स्यादातोऽपि न परद्रोहकर्मधीः ।

ययास्योद्धिजते वाचा नालोक्यां तामुदरियेत् ॥ †

“He whose speech and mind are pure and ever carefully guarded, he obtains all the fruit that is obtained by means of the Vedānta.

“Let him not, even though distressed, cut another to the quick (by his speech) ; nor meditate acts of hostility to others ; let him never utter the malignant word that disturbs (the mind of the hearer).”

* Manusmṛiti, iv—138. † Manusmṛiti, ii 160—162.

नास्तिक्यं वेदनिन्दां च देवतानां च कुत्सनम् ॥

द्वेषं स्तम्भं च मानं च क्रोधं तैद्दण्यं च वर्जयेत् ॥*

“Let him avoid unbelief, censure of the Vedas and slighting of the Devas, hatred, obstinacy, pride, anger and harshness.”

नारुन्तुदः स्यान् न नृयंसवादी

न हीनतः परमभ्याददीत ।

ययाऽस्य वाचा पर उद्विजेत

न तां वदे दुषर्ती पापलोक्यां ॥

अरुन्तुदं परुषं तीक्ष्णवाचं

वाक्कंटकैर्वितुदन्तं मनुष्यान् ।

विद्यादलक्ष्मीकतमं जनानां

मुख निवद्धां निम्नृतिं वहन्तं ॥

वाकसासका वदनाग्निस्पतन्ति

यैराहतः शोचति राज्यहानि ।

परस्य नामर्मसु ते पतन्ति

तान्पयिडतो नावसृजेत्परेषु ॥

नहीदृशं संवननं त्रिषु लोकेषु विद्यते ।

दया मैत्री च भूतषु दानं च मधुरा च वाक् ॥

तस्मात्सांत्वं सदा वाच्यं न वाच्यं परुषं क्वचित् ।

पुज्यान्संपूजयेद्दद्यान्न यथाचेत् कदाचन ॥†

“Let no one utter cruel words, or wound (with them) the vitals (of another) ; let none seek to subdue his enemy by unfair means. Let him not

* Ibid, 163.

† Mahâbhâratam, Âdi Parva, lxxxvii—8, 9, 11, 12, 13.

utter that inauspicious speech, belonging to the evil worlds, whereby another is agitated.

“The man that ever wounds the vitals of others, harsh, and sharp of speech, ever piercing other men with the thorns of evil words, he is the man most abandoned of (Lakshmi) fortune, and ever beareth, bound to his mouth, an evil demon.

“They are verily arrows, these evil words that issue from the mouth ; he who is wounded by them sorroweth night and day, for they wound the vitals. The wise man unlooseth not such (shafts) at others.

“There are no riches in the three worlds like unto these—compassion, friendliness to all beings, charity and sweet speech.

“Therefore ever speak gently and never harshly ; honour the worthy ; give, but ask not.”

क्रुद्धः पापं नरः कुर्यात् क्रुद्धो हन्याद्गुरुनपि ।

क्रुद्धः परुषया वाचाश्रेयसोऽप्यवमन्यते ॥

मात्मानमपि च क्रुद्धः प्रेपयेद्यमसादनं ।

एतान्दोषान्प्रपश्यद्भिर्जितः क्रोधो मनीषिभिः ॥*

“The man that has given way to anger may commit any sin, he may slay even his elders, or insult those worthy (of) his reverence with harsh speech:

“He may send himself to the abode of Death.”

* Mahābhārataṃ, Vana Parva, xxix.—1, 6.

Beholding these great faults in anger, have the wise ones conquered it."

किंस्विदेकपदं ब्रह्मन् पुरुषः सम्यगाचरन् ।

प्रमाणं सर्वभूतानां यशश्चैवाप्नुयान्महत् ।

सांत्वमेकपदं शक्र पुरुषः सम्यगाचरन् ।

प्रमाणं सर्वभूतानां यशश्चैवाप्नुयान्महत् ॥

एतदेकपदं शक्र सर्वलोकसुखावहं ।

आचरन्सर्वभूतेषु प्रियो भवति सर्वदा ॥*

"What one thing, O Brâhmaṇa (Indra asks of his Preceptor Brihaspati), if a man shall practise well, shall he become a standard for all beings, and attain to fame widespread?

"Gentleness is the one thing, O Shakra, which if a man will practise unremittingly, he shall become a standard for all beings and attain to fame widespread.

"This one thing bringeth joy to all the worlds; practising it towards all beings, the man cometh dear unto all and always."

यस्तु क्रोधं समुत्पन्नं प्रज्ञया प्रतिवाधते ।

तेजस्विनं तं विद्वांसो मन्यन्ते तत्त्वदर्शिनः ॥†

"He that with wisdom suppresseth the anger that hath risen within him, him the learned knowers of truth declare to be the true Tejasvi.

* Ibid, Shânti Parva, lxxxiv—2, 3, 4.

† Mahâbhârâtam, Vâna Parva, xxix—17.

CHAPTER X.

VIRTUES AND VICES IN RELATION TO INFERIORS.

AS we go more and more into the world, we come across many people who are much younger than ourselves, people of the next or of later generations, people also who are less educated, or who are poorer, or below us in social rank. with such people, inferior to ourselves in some special point or generally, we enter into relations, and we need to know what virtues we should cultivate, what vices we should avoid, if our relations with them are to be harmonious.

The first and most obvious of these relations is that with our youngers, and the best examples of the necessary virtues are seen in the relations of parents to their children. Tenderness, Compassion, Gentleness, Kindness, how strongly these virtues shine out in loving parents, and how happy they make the home. Father and mothers love their children, suffer in their sufferings, are glad in their pleasures, feel sympathy with them in everything.

This fact is beautifully brought out in an ancient story, the story of the sorrow of Surabhi when her children suffer. In days of yore, Surabhi, the celestial mother of the race of cows and bulls, once stood before the King of the Devas, shedding tears. Indra asked her eagerly: "Why dost thou weep, auspicious mother of the cows? Hath any ill befallen thee?" Surabhî replied: "No evil hath befallen this body of mine; but I am grieving for my offspring. See, O King of the worlds, that cruel husbandman beating my feeble son that labours at the plough, and falls again and again in his weakness. The stronger of the pair beareth his burthen easily; but the weaker beareth it with difficulty. It is for him I grieve with heavy heart and tearful eyes." Indra asked in wonder: "But thousands of thy offspring are thus treated every day!" And Surabhî replied: "And for each of those thousands that suffers thus, I weep, O King, and I weep more for the one that is weaker than for the others." Then Indra understood the love there is in the mother's heart for her child in suffering, and poured down showers on the fields of earth, and sent comfort to man and beast alike.*

Very tenderly is shown the love of Dasharatha for Râmachandra, his perfect son, both in his joy over his splendid qualities and his sorrow in his exile. Listen to his words as he addresses his princes and his nobles, when he proposes to instal his son as his successor, to seat him on the throne. Every sentence breathes his love and pride. And when Kaikeyî has claimed her boons, and demands Râma's exile to the forest, see Dasharatha falling at her feet, declaring that though the world might live without the sun, without Râma he could not live : " I lay my head at thy feet. Be merciful to me. Have pity on me, aged and on the verge of death."* And so true was this, that when Shri Râma at last tore himself away from his father, that father went home broken-hearted, and died from grief for his exiled son.* And remember the pitiful scene between Râmachandra and his mother Kaushalyâ when he carries her the news of his exile. He shall not go, she cries in her anguish ; without him she will pine away and die. Or, if he be fixed in will to go, in loving obedience to his father's orders, then will she also tread the forest paths. " Like unto a cow following its young one, shall I follow thee, O my darling, wheresoever thou shalt go."*

* Râmâyana, Ayodhyakândam.—lxiv.

And see the woe of Kuntî, when her five noble sons, the Pâṇḍavas, are driven away into exile after the shameful gambling match in which all was lost. Kuntî—bravest of women and of mothers, who, when the hour of battle came, bade Shri Kṛiṣṇa tell her sons that the time had come for them for which a Kṣhatriya woman bore a son, and that even life should be laid down for honour's sake—this Kuntî wailed, broken-hearted, and could scarce force herself away from her sons, could scarce forbear to follow them as they went forth.*

* Rāmāyana, xx—xxv.

Or again, note the agony of Arjuna over the death of his heroic son, Abhimanyu ; as he returns to the camp from the field of battle, he feels unaccustomed cloud enwrap him and turns to Shri Kṛiṣṇa for help, for explanation. Eagerly he questions his brothers, who fear to answer him, and with sad heart feels the piercing anguish of his son's death ; and surely the youth must have thought, as his foes closed in around him, " My father will rescue me from this fierce storm," but his father came not to his helping, and he fell, pierced by a hundred wounds. Not to have been present to protect his child—that was the thought that stung Arjuna to madness, for ever the heroic soul longs to protect the weaker ; much more then when the hero is a father, and the weaker is a well-loved son.†

* Mahābhārata, Sabhā Parva—lxxix. † Ibid, Drona Parva, lxxii.

This duty of Protecting the Weak is incarnated in the righteous King, and it is the fulfilment of this duty which awakens the loyalty of his subjects.

“To protect his subjects is the cream of kingly duties,”* says Bhīṣma. “The King should always bear himself towards his subject as a mother towards the child of her womb.....as the mother, disregarding those objects that are most cherished by her, seeks the good of her child alone, even so, without doubt, should Kings conduct themselves.”† So stringent is this duty of protection, that King Sagara exiled his own eldest son, Asamanjas, because that prince, in reckless cruelty, drowned the children of his subjects in the river.‡

Many are the stories of the ways in which good Kings defended the weak who trusted in their protection, and this sense of duty embraced the lower animals as well as man. A dog had followed King Yudhiṣṭhira the just from Hastinâpura, through all his weary wanderings on the last great journey, and had crossed with him the vast desert, the only survivor of that long travel save the King himself. Indra has come down from heaven to fetch the kings to Svarga, and bids him mount the car and

* Ibid, Shânti Parva—lviii.

† *Mahâbhârata*m, Shânti Parva, lvi. ‡ Ibid, lvii.

speed upwards with him. The King stoops, and gently touches the head of his faithful canine follower: "This dog, O Lord of the Past and of the Present, is very devoted to me. He too should go. My heart is full of compassion for this poor child of earth." "No dog may tread the heavenly fields," said Indra in reply. "Immortality and a state like unto my own, O King, far-stretching fortune, high success and all the joys of heaven—these thou hast won to-day. Cast off then the dog, who hinders thine ascent. Naught cruel is there in the act; earth-bound, he dwells on earth." "O thou of a thousand eyes, O thou of righteous living, an Âryan may not commit an act unworthy of an Âryan. I care not for a bliss bought by the casting off of one who is to me devoted." "Heaven has no place for persons followed by dogs," said Indra sternly. "Abandon the dog, and come. Time passes swiftly." "To abandon the devoted is a sin, sin immeasurable, say the wise. As black as the slaying of a Brâhmaṇa is this sin of abandoning the weak. O Indra, mighty one, not for the sake of winning happiness will I cast away this dog." In vain does Indra command or plead; the King remains unmoved. Nor can sophistry confuse his clear vision: he had abandoned his brothers and his wife, why not his dog ? says Indra. "This is well known in all the worlds that with the dead is neither friendship nor yet quarrel. When my brothers and Kṛiṣṇa fell and died, no power was mine to bring them back to life ; hence I abandoned them. I did not abandon them so long as they were living. This one lives. To terrorise the seeker for protection, to slay a woman, to steal what belongeth to a Brâhmaṇa, to injure a friend, to each of these crimes, methinks, is equal the sin of abandoning one so devoted." And then the dog vanished and Dharma, Deva of righteousness, stood in celestial glory where had crouched the dog, and with him and Indra, hymned by Devas, praised by Sages, the righteous King was carried to the heavenly world.*

Hear yet another tale of ancient days.

King Shibi, son of Ushînara, sat in his spacious hall, in the midst of his assembled court. All at once, a dove flew in, and, rushing through the air, flung itself into the broad lap of the King, panting breathless, fainting with fatigue and fear. As the King stroked and smoothed its ruffled feathers in a wondering tenderness, soothing back its breath and life with his caresses, an angry hawk dashed into the hall also, and came to a sudden pause before the

* Mahâbhârata, Mahâprasthânika Parva.—iii.

King. In reviving terror, the dove cried out in a human voice : "Thou art the sovereign of this land wherein I dwell. I have a right to thy protection too. I come to thee for refuge from my enemy." But the hawk said also with the human voice : "I too reside within thy sovereignty, O King, and this is my appointed food by Providence itself. If thou deniest it to me, then surely thou refusest me my right." The King pondered a while and said : "Ye both are right ! Thou hast a right, O dove, that I protect thy innocent life from harm ; and thou, O hawk, that I deprive thee not of thy just food ! But thus shall I resolve this knot of dharma. Take thou other food from me, O hawk, till thou art full !" But the hawk said : "I must have the dove itself, none other ; or if other, then flesh from thine own body, O King, of the weight of this very dove." The angry ministers would have slain at once the hawk that menaced thus the priceless life of their beloved master, and cried out against the petty thing. But King Shibi said : "I sit here as the sovereign, not for small or great, not for dove or hawk, but as living embodiment of Dharma, as example to my people. If I fail in the small, I shall fail in the great also ; and my people shall fail grievously, imitating me. Bring up a pair of scales !” Stricken with a great sorrow, powerless to disobey, setting their teeth against the outwelling groans, the ministers brought up scales. With one gentle hand, the King placed the dove into one, and with the other strong hand he hewed a piece of flesh from his own limbs. But the dove was too heavy. And the King hewed off another piece and the dove was much too heavy still. And the wondering King hewed off still another piece of flesh from his body. But the dove grew ever heavier. At the last, the King threw his whole body into the scale. And behold, the hawk and the dove disappeared, and in their place stood Indra and Agni, and they cried aloud : “Truly art thou a King, and knowest well the sovereign’s first duty of protection ! We have found thee more than we had heard. Thy body is no longer mangled. Live thou long within the hearts of thy people.”*

It is true that these stories are told of kings, because they are regarded as the type of the Protector of the weak ; but boys can also show protection, in a smaller measure, to all who are weaker than themselves. For these stories are told in order that we may take example by them and copy in our own lives the virtues they describe.

* Mahābhāratam, Vana Parva, cxxxix—xcvi ; and Anushāsana Parva, xxxii. The story is told of different heroic kings.

The great type of Compassion—so that his compassion has passed into a proverb, “compassionate as Rantideva”—was again a King. Once he and his dependents went fasting for eight and forty days, and on the morning of the forty-ninth day he received some ghi, milk, barley, and water. To this frugal meal they sat down, when a Brâhmaṇa came as guest, and he fed him ere touching the food. Then when the Brâhmaṇa had departed, he divided what remained into equal shares, and gave to each, reserving one portion for himself. But as he prepared to eat, a Shûdra came, and he gave him gladly a share of that small meal. And when the Shûdra had gone, ere yet he could break his fast, a man came with a troop of dogs, and the rest of the food, save one drink of water, Rantideva gave to these. These also went, and Rantideva raised to his parched lips the welcome drink. “Give water, a little water,” moaned a voice near by ; and Rantideva, turning, saw a miserable form, an outcaste, lying on the ground, turning longing piteous eyes at the water in his hand. Bending over him, with sweet compassion beaming from his tender eyes, Rantideva gently raised the outcaste’s head, and put the cool pure water to his panting dust-soiled lips. "Drink, brother !" he said kindly doubling the value of the gift with his mild graciousness. And, as the outcaste drank, the loving heart of Rantideva burst into prayer to Hari : "I do not ask for the eight Siddhis," thus he spake ; "I do not ask Nirvâṇa. Only I ask that I may pervade all beings, suffering for them their miseries, that they may live without sorrow. By giving this water to save the life of this suffering man, my hunger, thirst, languor, distress and giddiness have all passed away." And this prayer has ever remained the most perfect expression of compassion.*

The danger which is connected with the shewing out of tenderness and protection to the weaker than ourselves is the vice of Pride. It arises from ahamkâra, that gives the sense of separateness of "I" and "you," and thinks more of the fact that "I am helping this weaker one," than of sharing what is really a common store with one temporarily shut out from it by his separate form. By letting the mind dwell on one's own usefulness and power to do good, pride is awakened, and quickly ruins the good work that has been performed. None that wears a separate body may escape the power of this subtlest and most dangerous of foes, that is known as ahamkâra. Even the very highest fall beneath its sway in unguarded moments and unavoidably suffer the consequences, for the Law of Karma is inflexible, and equal for high and low alike. Many a warning is therefore given in the Smṛiti against ahamkâra and pride, the great and subtle foe of the wise and strong. Listen to some of these.

The ancient sage Nârâyaṇa spent ages in the severest penance, on the peak known by the name of Badari of the Himâlaya mountains. To test his freedom from the attractions of sense objects, Indra sent thousands of heavenly nymphs to play about in his Tapovana, his grove of austerity, and divert his attention away from his austerities. They did as directed. The Ṛṣi Nârâyaṇa saw with his illumined eye the purpose of their coming and smiled with confidence. By his Yoga power he produced as many thousands of similarly shaped forms, and sent them forth to offer hospitality to Indra's hosts. The latter were ashamed, and prayed to the Ṛṣi to forgive their evil purpose. He was pleased and did so, and further offered them a boon. And the boon they asked was that he should be their husband and protector. Great was his perplexity, but having said that he would give, he could not say no. He repented sadly ; " This great trouble has arisen out of my ahamkâra, without a doubt. The first cause of the frustration of all dharma is ahamkâra." Then he said to the maidens : " It is against my vow to enter into the household life in this birth. In another birth, as Kṛiṣṇa, which I shall have to take for other work also, I shall redeem my promise, and bear the fearful weight of this huge household, marrying ye all out of the high families into which you also shall be born."*

Vishvâmitra, King of Gâdhi, belonging to a line of Kṣhatṛiya Kings founded by Kusha, who came direct from Brahmâ, returning to his kingdom with his armies after a great tour of conquest, passed through the Tapovana of the Sage Vashishṭha. Leaving his armies at a distance, Vishvâmitra went in reverence to the hermitage of the Sage to make obeisance. Vashishṭha received him with all honour and kindness. As Vishvâmitra rose to depart, fearing lest his armies cause disturbance in that place of peace, Vashishṭha offered hospitality to the King with all his forces. Vishvâmitra declined again and again, very unwilling to burden the ascetic's scant resources ; but Vashishṭha insisted again and again,

* Devî Bhâgavata. IV, vi—vii.

intimating that by the powers of his tapas and with the help of his wonderful cow Nandini, he could with ease provide all that his regal guest could need for all his retinue. Thus in him arose ahamkâra. Vishvâmitra, thus over-pressed, consented, and beheld the wonders of the cow. Then greed arose in his mind, and he said : "What need has a Brâhmaṇa of such a cow : it is fit possession only for Kings," and he asked Vashishṭha for the cow. Vashishṭha then grew sad, but said : "Take the cow, if she consents to leave me." But the faithful cow would not ; and when the men of Vishvâmitra endeavoured to drag her away by force, then she appealed in piteous terms to her master not to abandon her. Then Vashishṭha gave way to wrath, the natural next step after subtle ahamkâra and pride, and a great war arose between the Brâhmaṇa and the Kṣhattriya, which changed the whole history of the land. The cow called forth to her aid many non-aryan tribes, Shakas and Pahlavas, Yavanas and Barbaras, and they were destroyed by Vishvâmitra ; but finally the Brâhmaṇa power of Vashishṭha overwhelmed the Kṣhattriya prowess of Vishvâmitra : and, in vairâgya, he gave up his kingdom and practised the severest tapas for ages, resolved to obtain the Brâhmaṇa power ; and this he succeeded in doing, after long, long ages of self-denial, and peace was made between him and Vashiṣṭha, and Vashiṣṭha recognised him as a Brahmarṣhi.

To be King of the Devas is to hold a position that may easily fill the heart with pride, and from this cause Indra several times fell from his high estate. Once, surrounded by his Devas, he sat on the throne of the three worlds, and when Bṛihaspati, teacher of all the Devas, came before him, Indra kept his seat, not rising up to receive the great preceptor. Then Bṛihaspati turned and went his ways, abandoning the Devas, whom the Asuras then assaulted with success, driving them and their King from Svarga. This led to many another trouble, and to the slaying of a Brâhmaṇa on two several occasions by Indra, so that he had to perform much penance, ere he became purified.*

Now, while Indra was performing this long penance, the Devas, in order that Svarga might not suffer the evils of anarchy, elected King Nahuṣha of the Lunar Dynasty of the earth's kings, to hold the high office of the Ruler of Heaven. None other was found fit for it. But, as Nahusha ruled, and ruled with greater might than Indra himself, pride grew in his heart from day to day, and thoughts of sin came into his mind behind the thoughts of pride. And he said to the Devas : "I bear the burdens of Indra, I must have his rights also. Let Shachî, the wife of Indra, appear before me." Then the Devas spoke with each other in their distress, and thought that Nahusha was no longer fit to rule in heaven, and felt also sure that the time for Indra's return was nigh. But who was strong enough to stand before Nahusha ? The might that he had earned by past good deeds could be defeated only if he roused the wrath of some great Rishi by some dire offence. And so they spoke with Shachî, and told Nahusha that Shachî would see him if he came to her home on the shoulders of the Rishis. Nahusha ordered a conveyance borne by Rishis. And the sage Agastya and others were asked, by order of the King, to lift the sedan chair. And they consented gently. But, as the procession marched, Nahusha, in his eagerness and overflowing pride, touched Agastya's head with his foot and angrily ordered him to go faster. Then Agastya saw that Nahusha's time was come, and he pronounced a curse on him, and Nahusha fell from heaven into a huge serpent's body on this earth, and suffered the pains of a high soul confined to a low body for many, many ages, till released therefrom by the wise words of his descendant, Yudhiṣṭhira, the King that had no enemy.*

Now Bali, son of Virochana, had dwelt long in high prosperity, for the Devî Shrî, or Lakṣhmî, abode with him as recompense for his good deeds. But pride in his own righteousness, and in the happiness it brought him, entered into his heart, and he began to think highly of himself and ill of others, and wrought evil to them instead of seeking their welfare as before. Then was the Devî displeased with Bali and determined to leave him, and to go and dwell with his enemy Indra, the Deva King in Svarga. And vainly Bali lamented his folly, when he saw the Devî, who had long blessed him, living with his rival. "And this," said Uṭatthya to King Mândhâtâ, "is the result of malice and pride. Be thou awakened, O Mândhâtâ, so that the Devî of prosperity may not in wrath desert thee. The Shrutis declare that Unrighteousness begot a son named Pride on the Devî of Prosperity. This Pride, O King, led many among the Suras and the Asuras to ruin.

* Mahâbhârata, Vana Para, clxxi.

Many royal sages have also suffered destruction on his account. Do thou therefore awaken. O King. He who succeeds in conquering him, becomes a King. He who, on the other hand, suffers himself to be conquered by him becomes a slave.”*

Sometimes the inferior may save his superior, by his wise action, from falling into sin due to wrath and pride. Thus did a son save his father, in very ancient days. Chirakârin was the son of Gautama, of the race of Añgirasa, and as his name implies—for Chirakâra means acting slowly—he thought long ere he acted, and was very cautious and discreet. Now Gautama saw his wife commit a sin, and being very angry, he said to his son: “Slay this woman!” and went away. Then Chirakârin thought long how he should act, being compelled on the one side by the duty of obeying his father, and on the other side by the duty of reverencing the sacred person of the mother who bore him. “Obedience to a father’s commands is the highest merit. Protection of the mother is a clear duty. How shall I, then, avoid sin? Son am I both of my father and mother. All that the son has the father gives. In his satisfaction, all the Devas are satisfied. His words of pleasure bring blessings to the son. But the mother? She is the giver of the body, the protector of the child. When the son loses his mother, the world for him is empty. Like her is no shelter, no refuge, no defence; none is so dear as she." Thus mused Chirakârin, bewildered by conflicting claims. Again he thought: "The husband has his names (Bhartṛi, Pati) as the supporter and protector of the wife. If he cease to support and protect, how shall he remain the husband? And my mother is to me the object of my highest reverence." Now Gautama, his mind calmed by meditation, was overwhelmed with the thought of the sin he had committed in commanding his son to slay his wife, and he hastened home, weeping, blaming his own carelessness for his wife's offence, and hoping that his son had not obeyed him. "Rescue me," he cried, thinking of his son, "rescue me and thy mother, and the penances I have achieved, as also thine own self, from grave sins." So it befell that Chirakârin, by his patience and careful consideration, did his father's real will though not his hasty order, and thus saved his father from a grievous sin, inspired by pride and wrath.*

* Mahâbhâratam, Vana Parva, cxc.

अहिसायैव भूतानां कार्यं श्रेयोऽनुशासनम् ।*

वाक् चैव मधुरा श्लक्ष्णा प्रयोज्या धर्ममिच्छता ॥†

“Created being must be instructed for their welfare without giving them pain, and sweet and gentle speech must be used by a (superior) who desires (to fulfil) the sacred law.”

रक्षणादार्यवृत्तानां कण्टकानां च शोधनात् ।

नरेन्द्रास्त्रिदिवं यान्ति प्रजापालनतत्पराः ॥‡

“By protecting those who live as Āryans, and by removing thorns, Kings, solely intent on guarding their subjects, reach heaven.”

स्वे स्वे धर्मे निविष्टानां सर्वेषामनुपूर्वशः ।

वर्णानामाश्रमाणां च राजा सृष्टोऽभिरक्षिता ॥§

“The King has been created to be the protector of the castes and āshramas, who, all according to their rank, discharge their several duties.”

यथोद्धरति निर्दाता कक्षं धान्यं च रक्षति ।

तथा रक्षेन्नृपो राष्ट्रं हन्याच्च परिपंथिनः ॥ ॥

“As the weeder plucks up the weeds and preserves the corn, so let the King protect his kingdom and destroy his foes.”

सुवासिनीः कुमारीश्च रोगिणो गर्भिणोस्तथा ।

अतिथिभ्योऽग्र एवैतान् भोजयेदविचारयन् ॥ ¶

* Mahābhāratam, Shānti Parva, cexlvi. † Manusmṛiti, ii, 159.

‡ Manusmṛiti, ix, 253. § Ibid, vii, 35. ॥ Ibid, 110.

¶ Ibid, iii, 114

“Let him, without making distinctions, feed newly-married women, young maidens, the sick, and pregnant women, even before his guests.”

चक्रिणो दशमीस्थस्य रोगिणो भारिणः स्त्रियाः ।
स्नातकस्य च राज्ञश्च पंथा देयो वरस्य च ॥*

“Way should be made for a man in a carriage, for one who is above ninety years old, for a sick person, for one who carries a burden, for a woman, a Snâtaka, a King, and a bridegroom.”

अनुक्रोशो हि साधूनामापद्धर्मस्य बक्षणम् ।

अनुक्रोशश्च साधूनां सदा प्रीतिं प्रयच्छति ॥†

“Compassion is the mark of the great merit of saints ; compassion ever secures the blessings (or love) of the good.”

न कामयेऽहं गतिमीश्वरात्परामर्शद्वियुक्तामपुनर्भवं वा ।

आर्तिं प्रपद्येऽखिलदेहभाजामंतः स्थितो येन भवन्त्यदुःखाः ॥

क्षुत्तृश्चमो गात्र परिश्रमश्च दैन्यं क्लमः शोकविषादमोहाः

सर्वे निवृत्ताः कृपणस्य जंतोर्जिजीविषोर्जावजलार्पणास्त्रे ॥‡

* Ibid, ii, 138. † Mahâbhâratam, Anushâsana Parva, v—28.

‡ Vishnu Bhâgavata, IX, xxi—12, 13. [For translation, see P, 246.]

CHAPTER XI.

THE RE-ACTION OF VIRTUES AND VICES ON EACH OTHER.

WE have now considered many virtues and vices separately, and have seen, in many illustrations, how virtues lead to happiness and vices to misery. We have finally to see how a virtue helps to produce a virtue in another, and a vice a vice, so that we may learn how to help others to rightness of thought and action, and thus promote their happiness. By showing love to others, we awaken love in them; by showing hate, we awaken hate. We are apt to feel as others feel. A man who is angry makes those around him angry, and so quarrels arise and grow more and more bitter. An angry word brings an angry reply, and that brings a still more angry retort, and so on and on. On the other hand, gentle words bring gentle words in reply, kindness arouses kindness, and good deeds cause good deeds in others.

When this is understood, we can use right emotions to counteract wrong ones in others, instead of letting ourselves run into wrong emotions when these are shown to us. If a man speaks angrily to us, and we feel inclined to answer angrily, we should check ourselves and answer very gently, and this gentle answer will soothe him, and make him feel less angry. This is what is meant by returning good for evil, and only by acting in this way can we restore harmony when it is disturbed, and preserve it for the happiness of all.

When Draupadî urged King Yudhishtîra to attack the Kurus, after he had been so cruelly cheated and ruined by them, the wise King pointed out to her that the returning of evil for evil could only result in the continuance of misery. "The wise man who, though persecuted, suffereth not his wrath to be aroused, joyeth in the other world, having passed his persecutor over with indifference. For this reason it has been said that a wise man, whether strong or weak, should ever forgive his persecutor, even when the latter is in straits...If amongst men there were not some equal to the earth in forgiveness, there would be no peace among men, but continued strife born of wrath. If the injured were to return their injuries, if one chastised by his superior were to chastise his superior in return, the consequence would be the destruction of every creature, and sin would prevail.

If the man who hath ill speeches from another returneth those speeches ; if the injured man returneth his injuries ; if the chastised person chastises in return ; then would fathers slay sons, and sons fathers ; then would husbands slay wives, and wives husbands ; then, O Kṛiṣṇâ, how could birth take place in a world thus filled with anger ? For know thou that the birth of creatures is due to peace.”*

Hear how Dasharatha, the King, turned away, by soft humility, the anger of his wife. Kaushalyâ, mother of Râmachandra, rent by anguish for the loss of that unequalled son, exiled for long years from her fond arms, spake for the first time angry words to Dasharatha : “Thou hast murdered thy sinless son with thine own hands, O King. Well hast thou trodden the Ancient Path, maintained by thy ancestors with so much toil. The husband is the first refuge of woman ; the son is the second ; the kinsmen the third ; there is no fourth. Thou hast abandoned me ; Râma is gone ; I cannot leave thee here to go to him. In every way thou hast destroyed me, and destroyed the kingdom and the people.” The King heard the harsh words, and bent lower under that greater burden of sorrow.

* *Mahâbhârata*m, Vana Parva, xxix, 13—25.

His mind was all distraught, and he lost consciousness. Recovering, he saw Kaushalyâ still beside him. In that moment the memory of that past sin of his, of which this misery was the consequence, came back to him. Burning with the double sorrow of that sin and of the loss of Râma, trembling folding hands, and bending head, spoke to her : "Forgive me, O Kaushalyâ. I fold my hands to thee. Ever wast thou tender-hearted, even unto others. Bear with thy husband, whether he be good or ill. I am so broken already by my sorrow. Speak not harsh words to me, even in thy anguish." She heard that piteous speech of the humbled King, and tears of pity rushed forth from her eyes like new rain-water from the waterfalls. Her anger vanished, yielding place to deep humility and remorse and fear of sin for those harsh words. She seized the hands of the King, and put them on her head, and in great agitation said : "Forgive, forgive me, O King, I entreat thee with my head upon thy feet. It is for me to ask thee for forgiveness, not for thee to ask of me, for so great sin would come to me. That woman is not honoured of the wise in this or in the other worlds, who compels her husband to propitiate her. I know the dharma, and I know that thou, my husband, knowest it, and therefore must perform thy promise and maintain the truth. Sorrow for my son drove me in a weak moment to say those words of wrong. Sorrow destroys all firmness; sorrow destroys all wisdom: there is no enemy like to sorrow. It swells within my heart, like rivers in the rains, when I think of my beloved son."* Thus was Kaushalyâ's bitterness overcome by Dasharatha's sweet humility and patience. If he had answered bitterly to her bitter words, the quarrel would have grown, and their common grief would have driven them from each other. But he met her pride with humility, her reproach with meekness, her anger with tenderness, and thus humility, meekness and tenderness were aroused in her.

So again does Râmachandra awaken trust towards Bharata in Lakshmana's angry breast, by showing out that trust Himself. Râma, gone forth from Ayodhyâ, with His wife and brother, to keep His father's word unbroken, dwelling in the forests, heard the distant murmurs of a marching army, and bade Lakshmana ascend a tree and look. Lakshmana saw that it was Bharata coming into the forest with a great throng of men. Anger at the exile forced his thought at once into the way of suspicion against Bharata, and he came in haste to Râma and asked him wrathfully to prepare for battle, as Bharata was coming to slay them and so make sure of his sovereignty. But Râma's mind was full of love to Bharata and not anger. And tenderly He said : " Mistrust him not. I will say to him : ' Give all this kingdom unto Lakṣhmaṇa, ' and he will say but one word, ' Yes. ' " The wrath of Lakṣhmaṇa vanished, giving place to shame. And Bharata came and begged and prayed of Râma that he should go back to Ayodhyâ. But Râma would not break His father's word in letter or spirit. And Bharata carried away the walking sandals of Râma and placed them on the throne as symbol of the rightful Sovereign, and ruled Ayodhyâ in His name and as his regent, for the fourteen years of Râma's wanderings. *

* Râmâyana, Ayodhyakânda, lx—lxi.

Over and over again in the dark days of their exile, did his wife and brothers, losing heart and patience, blame Yudhiṣṭhira for his loyal adherence to his compact with the Kauravas, and his patient endurance of wrong. Over and over again did that noble heart, pierced and tortured by the

* Râmâyana, Ayodhyâkandam—xiv.

reproaches of his loved ones, win them back by gentleness to the path of truth and honour. Thus Bhîma, giving way to fierce anger, bitterly upbraided his elder brother with "the trite merit of sticking to a promise" made to gamblers who had over-reached him, laid the loss of kingdom and riches at his door, reproached him with weakness, with deserting the virtues of his order, with making himself ridiculous. But *Yudhishthira, summoning all his patience and remaining silent for a few moments, answered gently that doubtless all Bhîma's words were true: "I cannot reproach thee for torturing me thus, piercing me with thy arrowy words; for from my own folly alone has this calamity fallen upon you all. I should have controlled my mind, and not have allowed it to be influenced by arrogance, vanity and pride. I cannot then reproach thee, O Bhîma, for thy winged words. Yet have I given my pledge, and who may break his pledged word? Death is easier to bear than the gaining of a realm by a lie. What avail, then, to speak to me thus harshly? My heart is broken by the sight of the sufferings I have caused. But I may not break my word. Wait, O my brother, for the return of better days, as the sower waits for the harvest. For know, O Bhîma, that my promise may not be made untrue. Virtue is better than life itself or than the joys of heaven. Kingdom, sons, fame, wealth, all these do not come up to one-sixteenth part of truth." Thus patiently did the prince bear his brother's angry taunts, and ever was he ready to meet harsh blame with gentle humility, and to win by love a yielding that his proud brothers would never have given to wrath. *

As gentle sympathy arouses love, so does thoughtless ridicule arouse hatred, and hatred in its turn, gives rise to many evils. The fame of Yudhiṣṭhira spread far and wide, and all men praised the splendour of his Râjasûya sacrifice. Now this praise, bestowed on his hated rival, filled with jealousy the heart of Duryodhana, and this evil emotion was rendered bitterer and more active by the careless disregard of his feelings shown by Bhîma and by others. For one day as Yudhiṣṭhira was sitting on his golden throne, surrounded by his brothers, by many courtiers and Kings, Duryodhana and his brothers entered the assembly hall; and as he came he was deceived by the art of Maya, the Dânava, who had built Yudhiṣṭhira's place with skill and craft, and taking the crystal lake as water, he drew up his garments to avoid wetting them, and later fell into water which looked like solid ground. Then Bhîma laughed out boisterously and rudely, and others followed his bad example, although Yudhiṣṭhira reproved their lack of courtesy. And Duryodhana, with black frown, went away ashamed, with rage in his heart, and returned to Hastinâpura, vowing vengeance for the insult ; and this was one of the many causes that led at last to the gambling match and the exile, and the fierce battle of Kurukṣhetra, and the slaughter of Duryodhana and of his and Yudhiṣṭhira's kinsmen.*

Evil returned with evil does but give birth to new evil, thus lengthening the chain of misery. Bhrîgu had a son, Jamadagni, who became famous for his great austerities and rigid life, and in his family was born Râma, called later Râma of the Axe. Now Râma, though a Brâhmana by birth, was at heart a Kṣhattriya, and his character was, as his grandfather Bhrîgu had prophesied, " fit for the military order ;" and in Jamadagni also lurked hidden a seed of that fierce temper, which all his austerities had not availed to wholly burn away. And this caused sore trial and misery to befall this great race. For Jamadagni, furious at heart because of a hasty doubt of his wife's chastity, bade his sons, one by one, to slay her ; but none would lift hand against the mother's sacred person save Râma, the youngest, who smote off her head with an axe. Being granted a boon by his father, he asked that his mother might be restored to life, and then went on pilgrimage to expiate the crime of matricide. But not thus could the evil wrought by Jamadagni's anger be exhausted. While her sons were absent, Renukâ, the wife of Jamadagni, left alone, had to offer hospitality to Arjuna, son of Kṛitavîrya ; and he intoxicated with a warrior's pride, not deeming her reception worthy of his greatness, carried away forcibly the calf of the cow whose milk supplied the butter for the daily sacrifice. When Râma returned, Jamadagni told him what had happened, and the plaintive lowing of the cow for her young one increased the anger aroused by the recital ; and so, losing self-control in passion, he rushed off and slew Arjuna, cutting off his thousand arms after fierce fight. This act aroused, in turn, fierce wrath of the kinsmen of Arjuna, and, to return evil with evil, they rushed to the hermitage of Jamadagni, where he sat engaged in meditation, and slew him with arrows, defenceless as he was, sitting immersed in contemplation. Nor yet was the tale of slaughter completed, since forgiveness—the only thing that could cut the chain of evil—was not in the heart of Râma of the Axe ; and he, having bewailed his father and having burned his body with due rites, vowed by that funeral pyre the slaughter of the Kṣhattriya caste—for thus the evil grew, ever swelling to larger and larger proportions. Then, taking up his axe, he attacked and slew the kinsmen of Arjuna, and after that warred with all Kṣhattriyas, exterminating well-nigh that warrior caste.*

* Bhâgavata Purâna, x, lxxv—Mahâbhârata, Shânti Parva—xlvii.

Even when we are treated with injustice and unkindness, it is best to preserve sweetness and agreeableness of behaviour, and thus win the one who so treats us, be he superior, equal or inferior, to show sweetness and agreeableness in return. Once Durvâsa visited Duryodhana, and proved to be a very difficult guest to please. In vain did Duryodhana and his brothers, treat him with the greatest honour, waiting on him day and night. Sometimes Durvâsa would say : “ I am hungry, O King ; give me some food quickly.” And sometimes he would go out for a bath, and Duryodhana would have food prepared for his return, and on returning Durvâsa would say : “ I shall not eat anything today, as I have no appetite." Coming suddenly, he would say : "Feed me quickly." And another time, rising at midnight, he would call for a meal, and when it was brought, would carp at it and refuse to touch it. Thus Durvâsa, tormented Duryodhana for a while, but when he found that Duryodhana never showed either anger or impatience, then he became gracious to him and said : "I have power to grant thee a boon. Choose what thou wilt. Pleased as I am with thee, thou mayest obtain from me anything that is not opposed to religion or morals."*

Sometimes, indeed, a man is so hard-hearted that no kindness can melt him, and then he goes on unyieldingly till, at last, he perishes. Duryodhana may serve as a striking illustration of this. Having robbed his cousins of their kingdom and riches and driven them into exile, Duryodhana resolved to feast his eyes on their poverty and hardships in the forest, advised by the wily Shakuni, who told him that he would increase his own joy by seeing the misery of his rivals ; he took with him his brothers and friends and the royal ladies, that the Pândavas might suffer shame under the contrast. His cruel plot failed, in consequence of his being attacked and captured by the King of the Gandharvas and his hosts, whom he had insulted in his overbearing pride. Some of the fugitives ran to King Yudhishthira and prayed his aid; the gentle King, rebuking Bhîma for his cutting words of refusal, bade his brothers arm themselves and rescue their kinsmen, remembering that, by the seizure of Duryodhana and the ladies of their house, the family honour was stained. "Entreated for help in such words as, 'Oh, hasten to my aid,' who is there that is not high-souled enough to assist even his foe, beholding him seeking shelter with joined hands. The bestowal of a boon, sovereignty and the birth of a son, are sources of great joy. But, O sons of Pându, the liberation of a foe from distress is equal to all the three put together." So spake the high-souled King, and his brothers obeyed. The battle raged for some time, and then Arjuna and the King of the Gandharvas, who were friends, checked the struggle, and Arjuna enquired into the reason of the attack on Duryodhana. The celestial King explained that he knew Duryodhana's wicked motive in visiting the forest, and he was carrying him for punishment to Indra. Arjuna prayed his friend to set free the captives, at last the Gan-dharva King promised to do so, if Yudhishthira so wished, after hearing the whole story. The Pâṇḍava prince listened silently to the account of the mean and cruel outrage contemplated by Duryodhana, and thanking and praising the Gandharvas, he set Duryodhana and his companions free. When the Gandharvas were gone, Yudhishthira spoke lovingly to his cousin : “ O child, never again do thou so rash an act, for rashness leads never to happiness, O Bhârata. O son of the Kuru race, blessed be thou with all thy brothers. Go back to thy capital as thou wilt, and be not thou sad or cheerless.” Thus kindly did the blameless King treat his envenomed foe, the earthly author of his misery ; but Duryodhana, departing, was only the more filled with grief and anger ; the very kindness became a new offence, and he sullenly returned to Hastinâpura, only hating the more bitterly those who had returned his evil with kindly aid.*

* Mahâbhâratam, Vana Parva, cclx.

Fortunately such doggedness in angry feeling is comparatively rare, for as the sun softens butter so does the warmth of kindly feeling soften the angry mood.

Even when anger shown to us arouses in us a corresponding feeling of anger, we may try to check it, and may refuse to give it expression in word, or look, or gesture. Such repression gradually extinguishes the feeling, and at least we have succeeded in not casting fuel on the flame to increase its burning. After some practice of this kind, we shall find that the anger of another no longer causes any feeling of anger in ourselves, and we shall be able to use all our strength in sending kind feeling to meet the harsh feeling of the other.

* Mahâbhâratam, Vana Parva, cccxxv—ccl.

It is now easy for us to see why bad company should be avoided ; if we are with people who are thinking unkind, or unclean, or other evil thoughts, or who are doing wrong actions—impure, intemperate, gluttonous acts—their feelings will work on us, and will push us towards thinking and acting in a similar way. Any evils of such kind as may lie hidden in ourselves will start into more active life under such influences, and will become stronger and more difficult to fight against. For these reasons a boy who wishes to lead a pure and industrious life at school, preparing himself for a noble and useful manhood, should avoid bad company, as much as he possibly can. And if at any time he is forced into it, so that he cannot escape, he should keep his mind very busy with pure and high thoughts, and thus try to affect those round him, and to influence them for good, instead of allowing himself to be influenced by them for evil. In this way we may turn our knowledge to good use, applying it to practice in our own lives, for thus only can we make our knowledge fruitful, and by noble living help to bring greater happiness to the world.

क्रुध्यन्तं न प्रतिक्रुध्येदाक्रुष्टः कुशलं वदेत् ।*

“Let him not be angry again with the angry man ; being harshly addressed, let him speak softly.”

सेतूंस्तर दुस्तरान् आक्रोधेन क्रोधं सत्यतामृतं ॥ ‡

“Cross beyond the passes difficult to cross” beyond wrath by forgiveness ; beyond untruth by truth.

आत्मानं च पराश्चैव त्रायते महतो भयात् ।

क्रुध्यान्तमप्रति क्रुध्यन्द्वयोरेव चिकित्सकः ॥ ‡

“He who is not angry with the angry, he is a physician unto both. He saveth himself as well as the others from great danger.”

* Mānsmṛiti, vi. 143.

† Sāma Veda, Āraṇya-gāna, Arka-parva, 2 Prapāthak.

‡ Mahābhāratam,—Vana Parva, xxix—9.

क्षमा ब्रह्म क्षमा सत्यं क्षमा भूतं च भावि च ।
क्षमा तपः क्षमा शौचं क्षमयेदं धृतं जगत् ॥*

“Forgiveness is truth, forgiveness is (source and support of) the past and the future. Forgiveness is tapas, forgiveness is purity ; this world is upheld by forgiveness.”

परश्चेदेनमतिबाणैर्भृशं विध्येच्छ्रम एवेह कार्यः ।

संरोष्यमाणः प्रत्तिहृष्यतै यः स आदते सुकृतं वै परस्य ॥

आक्रुश्यमानो न वदामि किञ्चित्

क्षमाम्यहं ताड्यमानश्च नित्यम् ।

श्रेष्ठं हेतद्यत् क्षमामाहुरार्याः

सत्यं तथैवाजं वमानुशस्यम् ॥

आक्रुश्यमानो न क्रुष्येन् मन्युरेनं तितिक्षतः ।

आक्रोष्टारं निर्दहति सुकृतं चास्य विदति ॥

योनात्युक्तः प्राहरुक्षं प्रियं वा यो वाहतो न प्रतिहन्ति धैर्यात्

पापञ्चयोनेच्छ्रुतितस्य हन्तुस्तस्येह देवाः स्पृहयन्ति नित्यम्

पापीयसः क्षमेतैव श्रेयसः सदृशस्य च ।

विमानितो हतोत्क्रुष्ट एवं सिद्धिं गमिष्यति ॥†

“If a person deeply pierces a wise man with barbed words, the wise man should take refuge in patience. The man who, provoked to anger, only smileth back gently, not yielding to anger, he taketh away from the provoker all his merits.

“Spoken to harshly, I say nothing ; even when

* Mahābhārataṃ, Vana Parva—73.

† Ibid, Shānti Parva, ccc—10, 12, 16—81.

assailed, I always forgive. This is the best—this that the elders have named forgiveness, and truth, and candour, and gentleness.

“Addressed harshly, let him not reply harshly. The wrath of the wrathful assailant consumeth himself, and taketh away all his merit.

“He that addressed roughly, answereth not roughly nor even mildly, he that being struck controlleth himself and returneth not the blow, nor wisheth ill unto the assailant, verily the Devas envy him.

“Abused, insulted, beaten, let him still forgive (all injuries) from the low and vile, from his superiors, from his equals ; so shall he attain perfection.”

आक्रुष्टस्ताडिता क्रुद्धः क्षमते यो बलीयसः ।

यश्च नित्यं जितक्रोधो विद्वानुत्तमपूरुषः ॥*

“He indeed is the wise and good man who conquereth his wrath, and showeth forgiveness even when insulted, oppressed, and angered by a stronger.”

यदि न स्युर्मानुषेषु क्षमिणः पृथिवीसमाः ।

न स्यात् संधिर्मनुष्याणां क्रोधमूलो हि विग्रहः ॥

अभिषक्तो ह्यभिषजेदाहन्याद्गुरुणा हतः ।

एवं विनाशो भूतानामधर्मः प्रेषितो भवेत् ॥

* Mahâbhâratam, Vana Parva, xxix—25-18.

आक्रुष्टः पुरुषः सर्वे प्रत्याक्रोशेदनन्तरम् ।
प्रतिहन्याद्धतश्चैव तथा हिंस्याच्च हिंसितः ॥
हन्युर्हि पितरः पुत्रान् पुत्राश्चापि तथा पितृन् ।
हन्युश्च पतयो भार्याः पतान् भार्यास्तथैव च ॥
एवं संक्रुपिते लोके जन्म कृष्णो न विद्यते ॥

[See p. 248.]

सर्वस्तरतु दुर्गाणि सर्वो भद्राणि पश्यतु ।
सर्वः सुखमवाप्नोतु सर्वः सर्वत्र नन्दतु
ॐ सत्यं वद धर्मं चर
सत्यमेव जयते नानृतम् ॐ

“ May all cross beyond the places hard to cross ;
may all behold good things ; may all attain to happiness ; may all rejoice everywhere.”

“ Aum ! Tell the Truth. Act the Right.

“ Truth alone prevaieth, not Untruth. Aum !”

PEACE TO ALL BEINGS.

आतुः पूरुः पूरुः पूरुः ।

॥ अतोऽपि तदा तदा तदा ॥

॥ अतोऽपि तदा तदा तदा ॥

॥ अतोऽपि तदा तदा तदा ॥

॥ अतोऽपि तदा तदा तदा ॥

[245]

अतोऽपि तदा तदा तदा ॥

अतोऽपि तदा तदा तदा ॥

ॐ अतोऽपि तदा तदा ॥

अतोऽपि तदा तदा तदा ॥

"May all cross beyond the places hard to cross ;
may all behold good things ; may all attain to happiness ; may all rejoice everywhere."
"Ann ! Tell the Truth. Act the Right."
"Truth alone prevaileth, not Untruth. Ann !"

INDEX.

- Abhimanyu, death of, 239.
- Action, three forces behind, 166, three stages of, 45.
- Agastya, 251.
- Age, respect for, 194 ff.
- Aged, reverence to the, 194, treasures of the, 194.
- Agni (the Element Fire), 22, Deva, 24.
- Ahamkara (Egoism), the principle of separation, 22, 246.
- Air, pure, 90.
- Akasha (Ether), 22.
- Alcohol, 89.
- Alcoholic emanations, 91.
- ALL, the, not an object of worship, 101.
- Ancesters, debt due to, 96, 97.
- Anger, to be checked, 271
- Animals, creation of, 25.
- Annamayakosha (Food sheath), 67, destruction of, 83.
- Annaprāsana (the first feeding with solid food), the 6th Samskara, 80.
- Apa (Water), 22.
- Arjuna, 116, agency of, 239, death of 167, grief of, at Drona's death, 192, hasty vow of, 167, quarrels with Yudhishthira, 167.
- Arjuna, son of Kṛitavīrya, 260.
- Aryan, an act unworthy of an, 241, race, the eldest-born family of the, 107.
- Aryavarta, 1.

Ashramas (lit. resting places), 107-108, 139, the four, 106 ff, must not be mixed up, 108, names of the four, 108.

Ashuchi, 92.

Asura, 24.

Atharva Veda, 3.

Atma, 13.

Atoms, 88.

Attraction and repulsion, 159.

Avataras (special manifestations of Vishnu), the ten, 26 ff.

Bad company, 92, 271.

Bali, 153-154, 252, the next Indra, 154.

Bathing, 90.

Bhang, 90.

Bharata, 188, carries away the sandals of Rama, 262.

Bhima, 172, disregards Duryodhana's feelings 264-265, thoughtlessness of, 173.

Bhishma, 148, and Amba, 192 ff, and his father, 189-190, and Satyawati 150-151 and Yudhishtira, 138, asks Shri Krishna's permission to depart, 183, disobeys his Guru, 192 ff, dying, 183, on the duties of Kings, 240, on gentleness, 228, on harmlessness, 171, reverences Shri Krishna, 182-183, the vow of, 190.

Bhur loka (the physical world), 67.

Bhutadi (Elements), creation of, 22.

Bhuvarko (the world of becoming), 67.

Bliss, 159 ff, real, is in giving, 182, union is, 160.

Bodies. (or Koshas), Jivatma tries to master the, 165, (see also Koshas).

Body, a creature of habit, 168.

Brahma (the Creator), 21, day of 66, finishes his task of the universe, 25.

- Brahmacharya (complete celibacy), 80.
- Brahman, 11, is bliss, 160, Nirguna, 12, Saguna, 12, Saguna, an object of worship, 101.
- Brāhmana, and caste confusion 119, story of the poor, 219, virtues of the, 119.
- Brāhmana, (a portion of the Vedas), 4.
- Brahmanda (the egg of Brahma), 21.
- Brihaspati, 172, 250.
- Buddha, 9th Avatara, 29.
- Burning the dead body contrasted with burying, 83-84.
- Castes, the four, 116 ff.
- Caste-confusion, reasons for, 119.
- Celibacy, of mind and body, 110, (see also Brahmacharya).
- Ceremonies, 77 ff., gestures used in, 78, objects used in, 77, postures used in, 78, sounds used in, 78, used of, 77, (see also Samskaras).
- Children, and parents, 236 ff.
- Chirakārin, 253 ff.
- Chivalry, true, 173.
- Chudakarana, 7th Samskara, 80.
- Compassion, 236, 245, the most perfect expression of, 246.
- Conduct, foundation of right 133, right, 137, science of, 127.
- Control, of body, 167-168, of body includes harmless, 172, of mind, 166-167, the triple, 174.
- Creation, of Elements, 22, of Indriyas 22, a sacrifice, 56.
- Dadhichi, 58-59.
- Daiviprakriti, 15.
- Damayanti, and Nala, 211 ff.
- Dasharatha, and Kaikeyi, 152-153, and Kaushalya, 259-260, humility and patience of, 261, love of for Rama, 237-238.

- Death, King of, weaker than wife's love, 210, spiritual, 56, what happens at, 70 ff.
- Debt, payment of, 147, to the Devas, 147. Pitris, 147, to the Rishis, 147.
- Debts, the three, 147.
- Desire, 45 ff, control, 49, the rope to bind the Jivatma, 38.
 selfish, 168.
- Devas, creation of the hosts of, 23, creation of these connected with the senses, 23, different from the Supreme Ishvara, 23, distributing karma, 24, the Five Rulers of the, 24,
 King of the, 250, ministers of Ishvara, 23.
- Devis, who abide with Lakshmi, 228.
- Devotion, 182.
- Dharma, Sanātana, 1ff.
- Dhruva, 184.
- Dirty person, a public danger, 91.
- Disintegration, 89.
- Disobedience, to the Guru, a valid reason for, 192.
- Divine, and Asuric properties, 144, properties, list of, 144-145.
- Draupadi and Yudhishtira, 258-259.
- Durvasa and Duryodhana, 267-268.
- Duryodhana, 185, 268 ff, disobeys his parents, 191.
- Dvija (twice-born), 80.
- Emotions, 159 ff, culture of, 159-160, develop into virtues, 159, enslave the mind, 166.
- Equals, relations with, 203 ff.
- Equilibrium, 106.
- Ethics, 127, 165, foundation of, 132, standard of, 144 ff, (see also Morality).
- Evil, returned for evil, 265 ff.
- Evolution, 26, 35, higher, of people, 137, read of, 137.

- Existence, the One. 11 ff.
- Flesh, 89.
- Fee, the subtlest, 246.
- Food, rules of, 88, stale, 89.
- Forgive, readiness to, 225.
- Forgiveness could cut the chain of evil, 267.
- Form, evolution of, 36-37, not worshipped, 102.
- Fruits, 89.
- Fowler, the, and Kaushika, 188-189, of Mithila, 216, the wicked and the pigeons, 221 ff.
- Gandhari, 191.
- Garlic, 91.
- Garments, must be washed, 90-91.
- Gayatri, 80.
- Gentleness, 236.
- Good, for evil, 258.
- Grains, 89.
- Grihastha (householder), 80.
- Guest, a, is as a Deva, 221.
- Gunas (the Qualities), 15, domination of the, 23.
- Hard-hearted, man, at last perishes, 268.
- Harmlessness, 171-172.
- Harmony, 144.
- Hate, 182.
- Heroes, favourite phrase of, 149, of ancient India, 187.
- Hindu nation, the characteristic of the, 106.
- Homa, 96.
- Home, 111.
- Hospitality, 219, a sacrifice, 97.
- Household-stage, the, 110, is the most important, 110.
- Householder, duties of a, 229, qualities of a good, 111.

- Human life, stages of, 107.
- Husband and wife, are one not two, 203.
- Impurity, pouring into the Koshas, 92.
- Individual, is not isolated, 98.
- Indra, and Vritra, 58, and the youths 111, connected with the other, 24, fall of, 250.
- Indraloka, 67.
- Indriya (organ of sense), the eleventh, 23, the sixth, 23.
- Indriyas, ten centres of the senses and of action, 22, "two sets of five," 166.
- Inferior, people, 236.
- Inner Ruler, the, 106.
- Integration, the higher, 89.
- Ishtadeva, the, 102.
- Ishvara, 12, conscious relations with, 100, co-worker with, 72, the King, 23, rivals of, 184, third aspect of, 25, those who hate towards, 185, the three Aspects of, 21, the Universal Parent, 61, the Will of, 137, worshipped under many forms, 101.
- Itihasa (History), 6.
- Jajali, 50 ff.
- Jamadagni, son of Bhrigu, 265 ff.
- Janaka, 49 ff.
- Jarasandha, 185.
- Jayadratha, 167.
- Jiva (the Soul), 13, in the animal kingdom, 36, in the mineral kingdom, 35, in the vegetable kingdom, 35-36, is Brahman, 34, the triple, 25.
- Jivatma (the separated Self), 13, the Bliss aspect of his nature, 159, directs the emotions, 159, the joy of, 159-160, must free the mind, 160, related to all, 165, unfolding, 107, the young, 165.

- Jnanendriyas (organs of knowledge) the centres of the, 70.
- Journey, the great, of the Pandavas, 167.
- Kalki, 10th Avatara, 29.
- Karma, 44 ff., in one sentence, 47, man not hopelessly bound by, 47, the twisted cord of, 45.
- Karmendriyas (organs of action), the true, 69.
- Karna and Indra, 151-152.
- Kauravas, not all to blame, 174.
- Kaushalya, 238.
- Kaushika, and the Brahmana's wife, 214 ff.
- Kindness, 236, to lower creatures is a sacrifice, 97.
- King, devotion to duty imposed on the, 186, the righteous, 240.
- Kings, the Great, 38.
- Kingship, the high ideal of, 186.
- Koshas (Sheaths), 13, comparative table of the, 69, of the Jiva in the three worlds, 67.
- Krishna, 8th Avatara, 29, (see also Shri Krishna).
- Kshatriyas, the virtues of the, 118-119.
- Kubera, connected with the Earth, 24.
- Kunti, 238-239.
- Kurma (the Tortoise), 2nd Avatara, 27.
- Lakshmana, 216.
- Lakshmi Devi, 227-228.
- Life, the Law of, 57, view of, in the Vedas, 106.
- Liquids, 89.
- Lokas (the Worlds), the four other great 66, subdivisions of the three, 67, the three, 66 ff.
- Longings, of a truly religious man, 100.
- Love, brotherly, 216 ff, conjugal, 203 ff, of country, 186, of God, 182 ff, stronger than Hell, 219, unselfish, 182. of Loyalty, 185, the object of true, 186, of subjects awakened, 240.

- Magnetic currents, affect the Pranamaya Kosha, 91.
 Mahabharata, 7, 217.
 Mahadeva, pouring out his life, 25.
 Maharloka, 69.
 Mahat-buddhi (Pure Reason), 22.
 Man, his relations to those around, 97, in relation to others round him, 60, the truly religious, 100, a vicious, 148, a virtuous, 147.
 Manas (the Mind), creation of, 23.
 Manava Dharma Shastra, see Manusmriti.
 Mandhata, King, 186.
 Manki, 168, song of; 169.
 Manomayakosha (Mind-sheath), 68.
 Mantra, 3, defined, 78, effects of, 78, silent repetition of, 79, why cannot be translated, 78 79.
 Manu, 5, 166.
 Manus, other, 5.
 Manusmriti, 5.
 Manvantara, 5.
 Marriage, thrust into student life, 80.
 Material, wealth and pleasures, 168.
 Matsya (the Fish), 1st Avatara, 26-27.
 Matter (see Prakriti), 13, dead, does not exist, 87-88.
 Maya, 13, Lord of, 15.
 Meditation, 103.
 Men, creation of, 25, noblest of, 110-111.
 Milk, 89.
 Mimamsas, system of philosophy, 9.
 Mind, made master of Indriyas, 166, must be conquered, 166, swayed by desires, 166.
 Minerals, creation of, 25.

- Mongoose, half-golden, 219 ff.
- Morality, is relative, 138, is subtle, 138, object of, 127.
- Mukta (free Jiva), 38.
- Mulaprakriti, 12
- Nahusha, 250, son of, see Yayati.
- Nala, see Damayanti.
- Nalopakhyana, 212.
- Nandini, the cow, 249.
- Narada, 100, 183, and Savitri, 206, loved everywhere, 228.
- Narasimha (the Man-lion), 4th Avatara, 27-28, 184.
- Narayana, the Sage, 247 ff.
- National greatness, 186.
- Nations, characteristics of, 106.
- Nature, Divine, 148, external is a reflection of Brahman. 148,
Laws of, 87, Laws of, are expressions of Truth, 148.
- Nivrittimarga (Path of Return), 137.
- Not-Self, diversity of the, 152, parts of the, 165.
- Nyaya, system of philosophy, 8.
- Obedience, to Parents, 187.
- Onion, 91.
- Opposites, the great pair of, 13
- Order, imposed by Ishvara, 107.
- Padma, a Naga, 228.
- Pandavas, brotherly love of the, 217 ff, not all to praise, 174, revere Bhishma and Drona, 192.
- Parashara-smriti, 5.
- Parashurama (Rama of the axe), 6th Avatara, 28, Guru of Bhishma, 193 ff, (see also Rama of the axe).
- Paths, the two, 137.
- Patriotism, akin to loyalty, 186.
- Peace, the birth of creation due to, 259, source of, 168.

- Perseverance, 168.
- Pilgrimage of the Jiva, 35 ff, recurring stages in, 71.
- Pitri, 71.
- Pitriloka, 67, 71.
- Plants, creation of, 25.
- Pole-star, 184.
- Prahlada, 183-184, and Indra, 150.
- Prakriti, 12.
- Prana, (life-energy), 68.
- Pranamaya-kosha, 68, dispersal of, 83, of others, 91.
- Pravritti marga (path of going forth), 136-137.
- Preta, 70.
- Pretakriya, 83.
- Pretaloka, 67, 70.
- Pride, 246, son of Unrighteousness and Prosperity, 252.
- Prithivi (the Earth), 22.
- Public spirit, 187, akin to loyalty, 186.
- Puja, 102.
- Puranas, 6.
- Puru, son of Yayati, 170.
- Purusha Sukta, 56.
- Purushottama, 12.
- Quotations :
- Angira, 81.
- Bhagavad-Gita, (ii.13,) 39.
- (ii 18-22) 39.
- (ii.27-28) 72.
- (ii.30) 39.
- (ii.47) 158.
- (ii.48) 106.
- (ii.64) 163.

(iii.10-15) 61-62.

(iii.11) 155.

(iii.16) 155.

(iii.34) 163.

(iii.34) 162.

(iv 7-8) 33.

(iv.11) 105.

(iv.12) 63.

(iv.14-15) 53.

(iv.19-23) 53.

(iv.26) 64.

(iv.31) 64.

(iv.38) 93.

(v.10-12) 41.

(v.18-21) 41-42.

(v.24-26) 42-43.

(vi.1) 115.

(vi.29) 135.

(vi.31) 49.

(vi.35-36) 177.

(vii.4-5) 19.

(vii.5) 15.

(vii.19) 74.

(vii.21) 105.

(vii.27) 162.

(viii.17-18) 72-73.

(ix.12-20) 73.

(ix 27-28) 65.

(ix.30-31) 93.

(x.20) 17, 134.

(xi.15) 30.

- (xi.22) 30
(xii.3-7) 103-104.
(xiii.6) 162.
(xiii.10) 177.
(xiii.12-17) 15-16.
(xiii.27) 19.
(xiii.30) 19.
(xiii.33) 19.
(xiv.5) 20.
(xiv.9-13) 32.
(xiv.17-18) 32.
(xv.7) 18.
(xv.16-18) 18.
(xvi.1-3) 145.
(xvi.4) 145.
(xvi.23) 163.
(xvii.14) 168, 176.
(xvii.15-16) 176.
(xviii.46-47) 141-142.
(xviii.61-62) 104, 142.

Brahmanda Purana, 84.

Brihadaranyakopanishad,

- (I.v.16) 72.
(II.iii.1) 12.
(IV.iv.4) 40.
(IV.iv.5-6) 52.

Chhandogyopanishad,

- (III.xiv.1) 11, 52.
(VI.ii.1) 11.
(VII.xxii.1) 161.
(VII.xxiii.1) 161.

(VII.xxiv.1) 161.

Garuda Purana,

(II.v.36) 84.

(II.xvi.6-7) 85.

(II.xvi.20) 85.

Ishopanishad,

(6-7) 134.

Kathopanishad,

(iii 3-7) 54.

(iv.1) 160.

(v.10) 134.

(v.12) 163.

(v.13) 177-178.

(vi.14) 54.

Mahabharata,

Adi Parva,

(lxxxvii.8-9) 233.

(lxxxvii.11-13) 233.

Anushasana Parva,

(v.28) 256.

(lxii.-) 155.

.c.-) 155.

(civ.-) 128.

(cxiii.-) 172.

(cxvi.37) 171, 177.

Mahaprasthanika Parva, 157.

Sabha Parva, (xxxviii.8) 183.

Santi Parva, (xxxiii.-) 157.

(lvi.-) 240.

(lvii.-) 240.

(lix.145) 199.

(lxxviii.59-60).

199-200.

(lxxxiv.2-4) 235.

(lxxxviii-) 129.

(xc -) 186.

(civ.-) 129.

(cxxiv 67) 147.

(clx.6-7) 179.

(clx.13-16) 179.

(clxxiii.-) 50.

(ccxxxl.27) 141.

(ccxxxl.227) 162.

(ccxcvi.-) 255.

(cclx.20-21) 143.

(cclx.23) 143.

(ccc.10) 273.

(ccc.12) 273.

(ccc.16-18) 273.

Udyoga Parva, (ii.17) 178.

(cxxviii.29-30) 178.

Vana Parva, (xxix.4) 234.

(xxix.6) 234.

(xxix.9) 272

(xxix.13-25) 258-259, 274-275.

(xxix 17) 235.

(xxix.-) 274.

(xxix.73) 273.

(xxxiii.41) 131.

(lxiii.-) 156.

(clxxx.21) 122.

(clxxx,25-26) 122.

(ccxiii.-) 188-189.

Manu Smriti,

- (ccxv.-) 189.
 (ccxci.-) 156-157.
 (cccxi.108) 122.
 (i.5-7) 17.
 (i.87-91) : 20121.
 (i.108-110) 129.
 (ii.6) 142.
 (ii.26) 81.
 (ii.53) 93.
 (ii.92) 166.
 (ii.120-121) 201.
 (ii.138) 256.
 (ii.145) 200.
 (ii.159) 255.
 (ii.160) 232.
 (ii.162) 232.
 (ii.163) 233.
 (ii.177-180) 114.
 (ii.191) 114.
 (ii.222) 92.
 (ii.225) 200.
 (ii.229) 200.
 (ii.230) 200.
 (ii.234) 201.
 (iii.2) 113.
 (iii.55-58) 230.
 (iii.70) 98.
 (iii.75) 99.
 (iii.77) 115.
 (iii.80-81) 98.
 (iii.89-90) 115.

- (iii.101) 231.
(iii.105) 231.
(iii.106) 231.
(iii.114) 255.
(iii.203) 84.
(iv.138) 232.
(iv.151) 93.
(v.105) 93.
(v.109) 93.
(vi.2) 113.
(vi.35) 113.
(vi.35-36) 154.
(vi.37) 113.
(vi.43) 272.
(vi.87) 112.
(vi.92) 180.
(vi.151) 92.
(vii.3-4) 197-198.
(vii.14) 197-198.
(vii.18) 197-198.
(vii.26-28) 197-198.
(vii.35) 255.
(vii.110) 255.
(viii.96) 158.
(ix.45) 203, 230.
(ix.101) 203-204.
(ix.101-102) 231.
(ix.253) 45.
(x.63) 180.
(xi.13) 166.
(xii.3-4) 175.

(xii.8) 175.

(xii.10-11) 175.

(xii.16-17) 85.

(xii.20) 85.

(xii.85) 145.

(xii.88-90) 140-141.

(xii.118-119) 146.

(xii.119) 30.

(xii.124) 31.

(xii.125) 146.

Mundakopaniṣad, (I.ii.5-6) 63-64.

(II.i.1) 31.

(II.i.17) 31.

Nrisimhottaropaniṣad, (i.6) 158.

(i.7) 160

Panini Shikṣā, (52) 81.

Patanjali Mahābhāṣya, (VI.i.84) 81.

Ramayana, 238.

Rig-veda, (I.clxiv.46) 30.

(VII.lxxxiv. 4-5) 63.

(X.xc.12) 120.

Sama-veda, 272.

Sarvasaropaniṣad, 161, 162.

Shvetashvataropaniṣad,

(vi.1) 196.

(vi.7-9) 196.

(vi.12-13) 196.

(vii.2) 134.

Yasishtha Smṛiti, (VI.3-4) 123. Microsoft ®

Veda text (quoted by Kulluka), 154.

Vishnu Bhagavata, (1.v.12) 103.

(III.xxv.18-19) 194-195.

(III.xxv.25) 194-195.

(III.xxv.27) 194-195.

(IV.xxii.34-35) 130.

(VII.ix.35) 122.

(IX.xxi.12-13) 256.

Vyasa Smriti, 82.

Yajnavalkya Smriti,

(iii.65) 143.

(iii,66) 181.

Rajasik, defined, 23.

Rama, [or Ramachandra], 7th Avatara, 28.

Ramachandra, 184, 187, and Sita, 204-205, awakens trust towards Bharata, 261-262, gentle in speech, 227, memory of, for injuries, 225.

Rama, of the Axe, 265 ff., [see also Parashurama].

Ramayana. 6, 216, of Tulsī Das, 28, of Valmiki, 28.

Rantideva, King, 245 ff., prayer of, to Hari, 246.

Ravana, 184, 204.

Rebirth, 34.

References,

Advanced Text Book of Hindu Religion and Ethics, 26.

Aitareya Aranyaka, 26.

Bhagavat-Gita,

III, 187.

VIII, 3.

XIV, 23 (footnote)

- XVII, 23 (footnote)
XVIII, 23 (footnote).
Bhagavata Purana, VI, 250.
VII, 255.
VIII, 250.
IX, 246.
X, 265.
Devi Bhagavata,
IV, 248.
VI, 248.
VII, 248.
Mahabharata,
Adi Parva, 151, 191.
Anushasana Parva, 183, 244.
Ashvamedha Parva, 227.
Bhishma Parva, 149, 192.
Drona Parva, 149, 167, 192, 239.
Karna Parva, 167.
Mahaprasthanika Parva, 217, 247.
Sabha Parva, 185, 239.
Sauptika Parva, 185.
Shalya Parva, 185.
Shanti Parva, 50, 52, 112, 139, 148, 150, 170, 183,
225, 228, 229, 254, 265.
Svargarohana Parva, 219.
Udyoga Parva, 191.
Vana Parva, 59, 150, 152, 185, 210, 214, 216, 221,
244, 252, 253, 264, 267, 268, 270.
Manu Smriti, III, 96, 110.
VI, 108.
Ramayana, 203-204.

Ayodhyakanda, 153, 188, 225, 227, 237, 261, 262.

Yuddhakanda, 185.

Shvetashvataropanisad, 35.

Vishnu Bhagavata, 100, 153

Vishnu Purana, 184.

Re-incarnation, see Rebirth.

Religion, first proclamation of, 132.

Religions, quarrels of the, 102.

Renuka, wife of Jamadagni, 266.

Reverence, 182.

Return, of the Jiva to Earth, 71.

Rich, the, are the stewards of the poor, 97.

Ridicule, arouses hate, 264.

Right and wrong, 136 ff, another definition, 137-138, defined, 137, some general rules of, 140, test of, 144.

Righteousness, 172.

Rig-Veda, 3.

Rishis, the, 38.

Sacrifice, 56 ff, becomes a delight, 60, growth of the practice of habitual, 59, has outer form and inner meaning, 94, Law of, 57, 94, meaning of, 56, mutual 147, the primary, 56, to Bhutas, inner 97, to Bhutas, outer, 97, to Devas, inner, 96, to Devas, outer, 96, to Ishvara every action, 61, to men, inner, 97, to men outer, 97, to the Pitris, inner, 96, to the Pitris, outer, 96, to Rishis and Vedas, inner, 96, to Rishis and Vedas, outer, 94, true remnants of, 112.

Sacrifices, the daily, 60, the five daily, 94 ff, the five daily, promote union, 147, the "Great," 94.

Sagara, and Asamanjasa, 240.

Samavartanam (returning home), 9th Samskara, 80.

- Samhita, 3.
- Samaveda, 3.
- Samsara (World-evolution or World-process), 25.
- Samskaras, 77 ff, the seven, of childhood, 79, the ten, 79.
- Sandhya, Vaidik and Tantrik, 10.
- Sankhya system of philosophy, 9.
- Sapindikarana, 84.
- Sattvik, defined, 23.
- Satyavan, 206.
- Savitri and Yama, 204 ff.
- Science, defined, 127, ethical, meaning of, 127, (see also Ethics).
- SELF, the, 12, (see also Brahman).
- Self, unity of the, 132.
- Self-control, defined, 165, first part of, 167, Manu on, 166.
- Selves, many in appearance, 132, younger to be helped, 61.
- Serving, humanity, 97.
- Shadangani, 7.
- Shaddarshana, 8.
- Shakti (Divine Energy) 15.
- Shakuni, 268.
- Shankhalikhita Smriti, 5.
- Sharira (the Physical body), 13.
- Shastras, the, tell us of the will of Ishvara, 140.
- Shaucham, 87, ff.
- Shibi, King, 242 ff.
- Shishupala, 145.
- Shiva, 21.
- Shraddha, 83 ff., no need of in Svar, 84.
- Shri Krishna, and Arjuna, 149, and Jayadratha, 167, and the Pandavas, 149-150, and Yudhishtira, 149, advises

- Arjuna, 187.
- Shruti, 2.
- Shudra, duties of the, 117.
- Shuka, son of Vyasa, 50.
- Shukra, Rishi, 170.
- Sin, is poison, 128.
- Smriti, 2, 3, 5, (see also Dharma-Shastra).
- Speech, control of, 167, hasty, 167.
- Spirit, the 13, (see also Atma).
- Sthula-sharira (solid body), 68, 69.
- Strength, thoughtless exercise of, 173.
- Submission, to God's will, 182.
- Sukshma-sharira (subtle body), 68, 78.
- Superiors, man's, 182.
- Sura, 24, (see Devas also).
- Surabhi, 236ff.
- Suryaloka, 67.
- Svargaloka (the Heaven world), 67.
- Sweetness, of behaviour, 267.
- Tamasik, defined, 23.
- Tantra, 4, (see also Upaveda),
- Tarpana, 96.
- Tattvas (the Elements), the seven, 21.
- Tea, etc., 89.
- Teacher, third great object of reverence, 191 ff.
- Teaching, a sacrifice, 96.
- Tenderness, 236.
- Test, of each action, 144.
- Thought, 45-46, use of, in checking desire, 48.
- Thoughtlessness, causes harm, 172.
- Titan Kings, 170.

- Transmigration, see Rebirth.
- Triloka (the three worlds), 66 ff.
- Triloki, 136.
- Trimurti, 21.
- Truth, 148, the great, in ethical science, 148, the greatest, 148, is Brahman, 154.
- Truthfulness, in Hindu literature, 149, promotes union, 149.
- Tuladhara, the Vaishya, 49, 51 ff.
- Tyranny, 173.
- Unhappiness, 160.
- Union, the path that leads to, 137, promoting, 144.
- Upadhi, 13.
- Upanayana, or second birth, the 8th Samskara, 80, 109.
- Upanishad, 4.
- Upasana, 103.
- Upaveda, 4.
- Urbanity, 227 ff.
- Utatthya, 186.
- Vaisheshika system of Philosophy, 8.
- Vaishya, virtues of the, 118.
- Vamana (the Dwarf), 5th Avatara, 28, 153.
- Varaha (the Boar), 3rd Avatara, 27.
- Varnas (colours or castes), 116, 139, compared to the Ashramas, 107-108.
- Varnasankara (caste-confusion), 116.
- Varuna, connected with water, 24.
- Vasishtha, and vishvamitra, 248 ff.
- Vasudeva, the thousand names of, 183.
- Vayu, Deva, connected with air, 24, the element Air, 22.
- Vedanta system of Philosophy, 9.
- Vedas, the four, 3, parts of, 3.

- Vice, fruit of, 175, produces vice, 257, root of 175.
- Vidura, 225 ff.
- Vijnanamayakosha (knowledge-sheath), 68.
- Virtues, 147 ff, altruistic, 174, and vices defined, 147, and vices in relation to equals, 203 ff, and vices in relation to inferiors, 236 ff., and vices in relation to superiors, 182 ff, and vices and their reaction on each other, 257 ff, characteristic of each caste, 120, Egoistic (or self-regarding), 174 ff, family, 203 ff, "forms of Truth" 148, fruit of, 175, in relations with others, classification, 174, of a student, 109, produce virtues, 257, root of, 175, self-regarding, see egoistic virtues, self-regarding defined, 165.
- Vishnu, 21, work of, 25.
- Vishvamitra, King of Gadhi, 248 ff., Rishi and the Chandala, 188, (see also Vasishtha).
- Vivaha (Marriage), 10th Samskara, 80.
- Vyasa, 100.
- Washing, the hands etc., 90.
- Water, 89.
- Weak, protecting the, 240.
- Wife, the, who truly loves, 214.
- Wisdom, the treasure of the aged, 194.
- World, the outer, is a symbol of the inner, 91, the present position of, in evolution, 137.
- Worship, 100 ff, 182, attributed needed for, 101, defined, 100, forms of, 101.
- Wrath, next step after Ahamkara, 249.
- Yajnavalkya, 50, Smriti, 5-6.
- Yajur-veda, 3.
- Yayati, 170 ff, sum of the life experiences of 171.

Yoga system of Philosophy, 9.

Youth, the time of conquering the body, 168.

Youths, story of the Brahmana, III.

Yudhishtira, and the dog, 240 ff, and his brothers, 185.

blamed by his wife and brothers, 262 ff, forgot truthfulness, 149, in Svarga, 217-218, the loyal prince, 185,

Rajasuya Sacrifice of, 182-183, releases Nahusha, 252, rescues Duryodhana, 269, taunting speech of. 167.

Yorkson of the English ...
 You, the form of ...
 Your story of the ...
 ... and ...
 ...
 ...
 ...
 ...
 ...

University of California
SOUTHERN REGIONAL LIBRARY FACILITY
405 Hilgard Avenue, Los Angeles, CA 90024-1388
Return this material to the library from which it was borrowed.

OCT 14 1996

RECEIVED

SEP 04 1996

ARTS LIBRARY

UC SOUTHERN REGIONAL LIBRARY FACILITY

AA 000 032 077 0

Univ
Sou
L